HOUSE TO START FALL SESSION NOVEMBER 3; MANY ISSUES PENDING

Date of Opening Postponed to Give Cabinet More Time for Preparations; Oliver and Colleagues Start Immediately to Work Out Plans for House Programme; Beer Looms As Big Question Before Law Makers

The British Columbia Legislature will meet on Monday, November 3, for what should prove to be one of the most momentous sessions in recent times.

This date was announced by Premier Oliver to-day after it had been formally approved by the Lieutenant-Governor.

Immediately after arranging the date of the session the Premier and his Cabinet colleagues went into session to consider the budget to be brought before the House some time before Christmas.

The date of the session had been tentatively fixed for October 27, but the opening was postponed for a week in order to give the Cabinet more time to prepare for it. The North Okanagan by-election and the Premier's recent trip to Ottawa served to hold up this work and a meeting on October 27 would not have given the government time to make ready for the House. "Oh, I haven't had time to go into the matter myself yet, wait until I have had an opportunity of considering it," the Premier replied when newspaper men asked him what would be the features of the session.

While the Premier was thus reticent about the Government's plans it is apparent that a formidable series of questions await the attention of the house. Probably the foremost are "beer," the Capilano watershed issue, timber royalties, and the advisability of creating a force to police the whole Province.

And all through the session, it is understood, the government will endeavor to put into effect a policy of economy, cutting and pruning in every possible direction.

Overshadowing all other questions is the beer issue, on which the House is split probably almost evenly. A non-partisan vote on the whole question of issuing beer licenses appears now to be the only solution of the controversy which has been raised by the unsatisfactory beer plebiscite. Of course, the government has power to issue beer licenses immediately in districts which voted wet at the referendum but at present the Cabinet has no intention of taking any action without consulting the House. A strong faction of leading Liberals is opposed to the opening of bars anyway and would bitterly resent any move to make drinking facilities wider before they had an opportunity to express their views on the question.

MONUMENT TO U.S. DEAD DEDICATED BY PRESIDENT

Lesson of Supreme Blessing of Peace With Honor, He Says

Washington, Oct. 4—In the presence of veterans of the First Division of the American Expeditionary Forces, President Coolidge dedicated a monument to their head hero to-day as "a lesson of the supreme blessing of peace with honor, a symbol of stern warning."

The peace now established must be nourished, the President declared, in this country's international relations.

While recalling his wish for United States membership in the world court and further disarmament, the President warned in reference to the country's international relations that "we do not propose to entrust to any other power or combination of powers any authority to make up our mind for us."

SECURE PEACE

In his discussion of international affairs, Mr. Coolidge pointed to the accomplishments of the Dawes plan in promoting the revival of Europe, which, he said, "lays a firmer foundation for industrial property and more secure peace."

"We want to see the Allies protected," he continued. "We want to see Germany restored to a condition of productivity and progress under which she will be able to take up the burden of civilization.

"I am in favor of treaties and covenants conforming to the American policy of independence to prevent aggressive war and promote permanent peace. But they have little value unless the sentiment of peace is cherished in the hearts of the people. Peace is the result of mutual understanding and mutual confidence exemplified in honorable action."

BIG DIRIGIBLE TO START LONG FLIGHT TO COAST MONDAY

Lakehurst, N.J., Oct. 4.—Only favorable weather is needed to make positive the departure of the Shenandoah for the Pacific coast next Monday, it was said at the naval air station.

All arrangements for the navy dirigible's longest flight have been completed. Officers declare the test flight of Wednesday night, conclusively indicated that the big ship is equal to the great task before it.

8,000 ILLICIT STILLS FOUND IN UKRAINE

Kharkov, Russia, Oct. 4.—There is one illicit still for every 500 persons in the Ukraine, according to official statistics issued by the Ukrainian Commissioner of Finance. Up to date, no less than 8,600 bootlegging establishments have been discovered and it is estimated that nearly 150,000,000 pounds of rye bread have been consumed in the manufacture of home brewed alcoholic beverages.

VISITING MASONS PLEASED WITH CITY

Scottish Rite Leaders Spend Two Days Here En Route to Portland

Masons of the Thirty-third Degree, Scottish Rite, who have held a convention of the Supreme Council for Canada in Vancouver this week arrived yesterday afternoon directed by J. R. Seymour, of Vancouver, the provincial deputy commander.

They were taken for a drive round the city shortly after arrival and this morning went for a drive to Butchart's gardens. At 1.30 o'clock today there was a luncheon, tendered by the Victoria Lodge of Perfection, A. and A.S.R., at the Empress Hotel.

The party will remain here until the afternoon steamer to Seattle tomorrow, from which point they will proceed by train to Portland, where the organized party will disband.

It is the first time that the Scottish Rite Supreme Council has met in Western Canada, problems of transportation having forced meetings in Central Canada. Those delegates who have not been in the city before are delighted with Victoria, and as a consequence of what they have seen on the Pacific Coast it is expected that other gatherings will follow in due course.

Owing to accident Sir John Gibson, former Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, who came to Vancouver, was unable to cross to this city with Lady Gibson.

The delegates were courteously entertained by local Masons, who acted as their cicerones for viewing the scenery of the neighborhood.

MEETING CALLS ON JAPAN TO SEND TROOPS TO CHINA

Tokio, Oct. 4.—Five thousand persons including members of the House of Peers and representatives attending a meeting in Shiba Park to-day adopted resolutions urging the Japanese Government to interfere in the civil war in China as an ally of General Chang Tso-Lin, who is carrying on hostilities against the Peking armies for the control of the Central Government of China.

"The Japanese Government must carry out a policy in China independently of other powers," the resolution read.

"This is made necessary owing to Japan's special position in China," Major-General Sato, retired, addressing the meeting said. "Japanese troops should be sent to China before the Peking troops enter Manchuria," where General Tso-Lin rules.

LULL ON ALL FRONTS IN CHINESE WAR

Mutinious Soldiers in Kiangsu Forces Cause Trouble Behind Lines

Shanghai, Oct. 4—A drenching rain along the battlefronts south and west of Shanghai where armies of rival provincial military governors are fighting for possession of this city, halted firing to-day although sporadic outbursts continued in the Sung Kiang district thirty-five miles southwest of here where an intensive engagement took place yesterday.

SHORT OF MUNITIONS

A communique issued from the headquarters of the defending Chekiany army said the opposing Kiangsu forces were lacking in munitions to carry out plans for continuing an offensive which started on some fronts yesterday.

Mutinous soldiers in the Kiangsu forces are causing trouble behind the lines between Hanchow, 110 miles southwest of Shanghai and Wasih, eighty-six miles west of here, according to assertions made by the Chekiang headquarters.

An Eastern News Agency dispatch received here from Shanhaikwan, on the Chihilan-Manchurian front, another separated point of action, reports that the Peking forces resisting the invading armies of General Chang Tso-Lin, were strongly entrenched in the mountainous district outside Shanhaikwan after a battle with the enemy on Thursday, in which both sides employed aircraft.

The dispatch added that the Chihli forces seemed content to remain on the defensive, while Peking reinforcements were being concentrated two miles west of Shanhaikwan and others were moving through valleys in the mountains to the west.

ITALIAN POLICE MAKE ARREST IN CASE OF MILLIONAIRE MURDER

Marseilles, France, Oct. 4.—Acting on the request of the Italian consul, the police have arrested August Malacria on a charge of complicity in the murder of the Italian millionaire Socialist, Deputy Matteotti, the kidnapping and slaying of whom aroused great excitement in Rome. The consul asked the police to watch for another Fascist Filippo Paneri.

ACCEPTS PROPOSAL

The Historic Sites and Monuments Board of Canada has accepted the representations made on behalf of Gonzales Hill to be marked by the board as an historic place. C. C. Pemberton, who has worked very hard to secure recognition and assembled a great deal of data for Judge Howay, as the western representative on the board, has the satisfaction of knowing that the department will take the necessary steps to erect a cairn and tablet in due course. A visit will be paid next week to the summit to make a recommendation of the best site to the Dominion authorities.

HEIR TO BRITISH THRONE CITY'S GUEST SUNDAY

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS, THE PRINCE OF WALES

SPECIAL C.P.R. BOAT WILL BRING BRITISH HEIR TO B.C. CAPITAL

Lieutenant-Governor and Mayor Will Welcome Royal Visitor at the Docks, But There Will Be No Other Formalities; Arrangements Made for His Comfort at Hotel; Game Board Sends Him License to Hunt While Here; Enthusiastic Greeting Extended Him in Vancouver

Victoria is all on tip-toe over the visit of the Prince of Wales, who will cross from Vancouver on Sunday.

Just what hour he will arrive here is not known definitely. In fact, there is no desire to emphasize the time of his arrival because of his desire to avoid the large crowds which have been dogging him everywhere.

He will cross on the steamer Princess Louise, the finest and latest of the C.P.R.'s coastal fleet. The Princess Louise will make the trip from Victoria to Vancouver to-night, arriving there about 7 o'clock in the morning. With the Prince and his suite as her only passengers she will leave for the trip to Victoria some time between 10 and 11 o'clock to-morrow morning, it is understood. That would bring the Prince into Victoria about 3 o'clock.

TIME OF ARRIVAL INDEFINITE

A message from Vancouver received this afternoon says:

Information as to the exact time of departure of the Prince is being withheld. He will leave on the Princess Louise, however, but none knows when.

Accompanying His Royal Highness on his visit here are General Trotter, Major Metcalfe, Captain Lascelles and Sir Walter Peacock. Captain C. D. Neroutsos, marine superintendent of the C.P.R., has gone to Vancouver personally to take charge of arrangements for the Prince's boat trip here. He and other C.P.R. officials will return on the Princess Louise with the Prince.

TO WELCOME PRINCE

Lieutenant-Governor Nichol, representing the Province, and Mayor Hayward and city aldermen will welcome the Prince at the dock. There will be no other ceremonies than their greetings. H. J. S. Muskett, secretary to the Lieutenant-Governor, is in Vancouver to-day discussing with the Prince's party arrangements for his entertainments and outings on the Island.

The Prince on his arrival at the C.P.R. docks will at once go to the Empress Hotel, where the entire third floor of the hotel has been reserved for him. His own apartments consist of six rooms across the front of

NEW YORK SHERIFFS WRECK GREAT STILL

Buffalo, N.Y., Oct. 4.—Deputy sheriffs to-day were engaged in dismantling one of the largest moonshine stills discovered in Western New York. Five men were arrested when the distillery, in an outlying house in Ebenezer was raided. Four 130-gallon stills and several smaller ones for distilling 200 barrels of mash, fifty barrels of illicit whisky, 10,000 pounds of sugar and 700 pounds of yeast were seized.

MORE CHINESE IN POLICE COILS AT VANCOUVER

Vancouver, Oct. 4.—Chinese alleged to have been engaged in gambling games last night enriched the city coffers to the extent of $415 when their names were called in court this morning. The amount was made up of fines and forefits from the Orientals, who were accused, in the majority of cases, of playing the Chinese game called Um Gow.

Prime Minister's Plans

When Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King travels from Prince Rupert here in the week after next, he will reach here on H.M.C.S. Patrician. He will arrive on October 16, and speak at a public meeting on the evening of October 17, before proceeding to Vancouver. The meeting will probably be at the Armories. On the day of arrival there will be a reception at the Parliament Buildings Library, and in the evening he will dine at Government House.

MACLEAN TO CLOSE PUBLICITY BUREAU AS ECONOMY MOVE

Recommends Step Which Will Save $7,000 a Year Pending Investigation

Looks Into Possibility of Encouraging Tourist Traffic Through Bureau

Hon. J. D. MacLean, Minister of Finance, started to wield his pruning hook in earnest to-day by recommending the closing of the Government Publicity Bureau, a move in line with his policy of stringent economy.

"Since assuming the portfolio of Finance," said a statement given out at Dr. MacLean's office this morning, "the Minister has been giving some consideration to the organization of the various branches of the Department. He has come to the conclusion that the Publicity Bureau as at present functioning is not justifying the money expended on its maintenance. He has, therefore, recommended to his colleagues that the bureau should be closed temporarily, until he has had time to investigate its possibilities as a provincial asset."

While not committing himself on the future of the bureau, Dr. MacLean intimated that he would investigate the possibilities of encouraging the tourist traffic through the medium of the bureau. While many are of the opinion that the tourist trade is of great financial benefit to the Province, this view is by no means unanimous, he said. Investigations along this line will be carried on, and if the bureau can be made to serve a useful purpose it will be re-opened.

On the other hand, it is not suggested that proper publicity is to be ignored, as the history of modern business demonstrates the necessity for judicious advertising. The bureau is at present costing over $7,000 per annum.

WILD THROW BY M'NEELY PAVES WAY FOR GIANTS' RALLY IN THE TWELFTH

Giants Gained Lead on Homers by Kelly and Terry, But Washington Evened Up in Ninth and Sent Game Into Extra Innings; Senators Came Back in Their Half of Twelfth But Could Only Score One Run

Washington, Oct. 4.—The "break" favored the Giants to-day and they won the opening game of the world's series here by 4 runs to 3.

The "break" came in the twelfth inning when a wild throw by McNeely, the Senators' outfielder, paved the way for the rally which produced two runs.

The Senators tried to pull the game out of the fire in the last half of the twelfth, but the best that they could do was to score one run, bringing to a close the most stirring game that has been played in a world's series for many years.

Long George Kelly opened the scoring in the second inning when he picked out one of Johnson's fast balls and laced it into the stands for a home run.

Johnson had his fast ball working beautifully, but after fanning Young and Kelly in the fourth inning he was nicked for another home run by Terry, the Giants' first-sacker. Johnson struck out Wilson for the third out. It made three strikeouts for the old master in one inning, something seldom accomplished in a world's series.

WASHINGTON AWAY

Washington scored its first run in the sixth, when the fans, growing impatient over the inability of their heroes to gather a run, stood up and roared. The result was that a couple of hits clicked off the Senators' bat. McNeely, the recruit, socked a two-bagger to left field, advanced to third on an out and raced home on another infield out. Goslin cracked out a single right afterwards, but was caught trying to pilfer second.

THE HECTIC NINTH

The teams went along scoreless until the hectic ninth when the Senators rallied and tied the score. Nehf, who had pitched a sterling game, was touched up for two hits. Bluege led off with a stinging drive that Jackson almost got. Manager Harris staked everything on the hit-and-run play and it worked. Peckinpaugh, not a strong hitter but always dangerous in a pinch, smashed a hit over the infield for two bases and Bluege, by terrific speed, reached the plate ahead of the throw in. Peckinpaugh going to third on the play. Johnson had the chance to earn all the fame that goes with winning a world's series game but he shot a fly ball which Wilson gathered in. This made the third out.

The game then went into extra innings.

PATTULLO JOINS TREASURY BOARD

Hon. T. D. Pattullo, Minister of Lands, was appointed a member of the Treasury Board by an Order-in-Council passed to-day. The Treasury Board consists of Premier Oliver and other members of his Cabinet and deals exclusively with financial questions.

ARGONAUTS OF BUSINESS READY

Well Organized Island Tour to Commence on Tuesday Morning

Itinerary of Journey is Issued, Showing Busy Programme

The itinerary of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce and Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau tour of Vancouver Island towns was issued to-day from Executive Secretary George I. Warren.

The tour will be the most comprehensive yet attempted from this city by any organization. Twenty-five persons have so far signified their intention of participating. Every class of business in the city will be represented.

On Tuesday morning the party will leave the Arcade Building at 9.30 o'clock, and will take the 10.30 o'clock ferry at Mill Bay to connect with the Island headway. At Duncan a halt will be made to pick up Dr. D. E. Kerr, president of the Duncan Board of Trade, and of the Associated Boards of the Island, who will join the party. At Chemainus fifteen minutes will be devoted to the inspection of the new sawmill of the Victoria Lumber and Manufacturing Company, by invitation of J. A. Humbird, the manager. At Ladysmith the party will lunch with Ladysmith public men at the Travelers Hotel, and then a start will be made for Alberni.

A joint dinner of the Alberni and Port Alberni councils, and Boards of Trade will be held at the Arlington Hotel, Old Alberni, at 7 o'clock. The party will be divided between

KING HUSSEIN OF HEDJAZ ABDICATES

Son Goes to England For Aid Against Hostile Tribesmen

Cairo, Oct. 4.—King Hussein of the Hedjaz, who has been holding the holy city of Mecca against the warring Wahabi tribesmen, has abdicated according to dispatches received here.

Prince Zeid, son of King Hussein, is expected to arrive here by airplane from Jeddah, according to information received here. He is being sent by his father to plead with the British Government for assistance in the fight against the Wahabis. It also became known here that King Hussein has sent a diplomatic mission to Moscow.

Snow on Prairies, And More Cold Weather Predicted

Winnipeg, Oct. 4.—A light snowfall was experienced generally throughout Saskatchewan last night and this morning, while scattered points in Eastern Alberta also report flurries. The weather over the entire West continues unsettled and prospectis are that Manitoba will become the centre of the cold wave during the week-end, according to the official weather man.

Harvesting operations have been again suspended and although indications point to clearing weather in Alberta and Saskatchewan, there is little possibility of threshing being resumed until the middle of next week.

Four Bodies Rally to Aid of War Memorial Effort

Four subscriptions to the Victoria War Memorial from public bodies today convinced the committee that public support is behind its effort to raise the money for a suitable monument. Among a large number of small subscriptions were the following: Daughters of Pity, Amputation Club, members of the Sergeants' Mess of the Fifth Regiment, C.G.A., and the Metropolitan Ladies' Aid.

The organization has now reached a stage when it is expected that considerable sums will come in next week from office, mercantile and other institutions, as well as from the generous public.

The quarantine card should give the name of the disease and in every way conform to the "Public Health Act" of the Province.

The Medical Officer of Health, or other competent authority, after he has received notice of the existence in any house of any communicable disease in respect of which it is his duty to do so, shall forthwith affix or cause to be affixed near the entrance of such house a card at least nine inches wide and twelve inches long, stating that such disease exists in the house and stating the penalty for removal of such card without the permission of the Medical Officer of Health, and no person shall remove such without permission.

The Medical Officer of Health may name upon such card the period of quarantine required.

The Medical Officer of Health of every municipality where a patient is suffering from any of the diseases set out in this regulation may forbid any person, excepting the attending physician, health officer, clergyman, nurse, sanitary inspector, or, in the case of death, the undertaker, from going into or leaving the premises without his permission, or the carrying off or causing to be carried off any material or article whereby such disease may be conveyed, until after the disease has teminated and the premises, dwelling, clothing, and other contents have been rendered free from danger by means of such disinfection and cleansing as the Provincial authority may direct, and he shall prescribe the precautions to be taken.

3. Period of quarantine (based on incubation period) and isolation, according to the "Public Health Act":—

Disease.	Incubation Period for Contacts.	Incubation Period for Patient.
Plague	14 days	Until clinical recovery.
Chicken-pox	21 days	Until all scales have fallen off and lesions healed.
Cholera	Until three successive negative stool examinations have been made at 24-hour intervals after use of aperiants	Until clinical recovery and five successive negative stool examinations made at 24-hour intervals. (Aperiant given before each of the first four examinations and a purge before final examination).
Cerebro-spinal meningitis (epidemic)	10 days	Until clinical recovery.
Diphtheria	7 days (or until a negative culture has been obtained from nose and throat)	(a.) In localities where a bacteriological examination is unobtainable, 3 weeks. (b.) If convalescence is complete and no sore throat, nasal, or aural discharges remain. (c.) If, after 10 days from date of onset of a clinical case, two successive negative cultures taken from the side of the lesion with a 12-hour interval are shown to the satisfaction of the M.O.H. (d.) In case of chronic carriers, until a negative virulence test is obtained.
German measles	21 days	Until 2 weeks from appearance of rash.
Leprosy		Until clinical recovery.
Measles	16 days	Until 10 days from the appearance of rash and clinical recovery.
Mumps	18 days	Until 3 weeks from onset if all swelling has subsided.
Poliomyelitis (epidemic anterior)	7 days	Until 3 weeks after onset and the patient's temperature is normal.
Scarlet fever	10 days	Until 35 days from appearance of rash, if no sore throat or nasal or aural discharges persist.
Smallpox	14 days or satisfactory proof of successful vaccination against smallpox within two years or evidence of satisfactory vaccination at the time, or an immune reaction, or satisfactory proof of having had smallpox	28 days, or until all scabs have fallen off and all lesions have healed.
Typhus fever	14 days after complete delousing	30 days and until clinical recovery.
Whooping-cough	14 days	For 3 weeks after commencement of whooping.
Yellow fever	6 days	Until clinical recovery.

Definitions.— By isolation is meant the separation of persons suffering from a communicable disease, or carriers of the infectious organism, from other persons, in such places and under such conditions as will prevent the direct or indirect conveyance of the infectious agent to any person.

By incubation or quarantine (these terms being synonymous for the purpose of these regulations) is meant the limitation of freedom of movement of persons who have been exposed to communicable diseases for the period of time equal to the incubation period of the disease to which they have been exposed.

4. In cases of any one of the communicable diseases named in Regulations 2 and 3, the M.O.H. may, if he is satisfied as to the effectual isolation of the patient, permit those who do not have the direct care of the patient or patients to leave the premises in order to attend to their regular duties, except when such individuals are employed or in any way engaged in the handling or preparing of food or are associated with children away from the quarantined house. Such individuals must, if they desire to attend to their regular duties, change their residence in a manner satisfactory to the M.O.H.

5. If satisfactory proof of a previous attack in the case of a contact of a case of whooping-cough, measles, German measles, mumps, anterior poliomyelitis, or chicken-pox is submitted to the M.O.H., such contacts may be released.

6. Except as in Regulation 7, teachers or children in a quarantined house shall be excluded from school, college, university, or other institution of learning, unless such teachers or children change their residence in such a manner satisfactory to the M.O.H., under which conditions they shall not attend such school, college, university, or other institution of learning until the period of quarantine for the disease to which they have been exposed has elapsed.

7. In case of teachers of children in a house quarantined for chicken-pox, German measles, mumps, or whooping-cough, the M.O.H. may, if he is satisfied as to the effectual isolation of the patient and satisfactory proof is given that such teachers or children have themselves at some previous time had the disease for which the house is quarantined, allow them to attend school, college, university, or other institution of learning without changing their residence.

8. The M.O.H. shall be satisfied that the cleansing and disinfection of any house, building, car, vessel, or vehicle, or any part thereof, and of any article therein likely to retain infection, are satisfactorily carried out before the quarantine is removed.

9. No person shall let for hire, cause or permit any one to occupy premises previously occupied by a person ill of any communicable disease until such premises shall have been disinfected under the supervision of the Medical Officer or official acting under his instructions, in accordance with the regulations of the Provincial Health authority.

10. Whenever the order or direction of the M.O.H. requiring the disinfection of articles and premises is not complied with, the M.O.H. shall forthwith cause to be placed upon the door of the premises a placard in word and form as follows:—

WARNING

.....is a communicable disease. These apartments have been occupied by a ..... patient and may have become infected. They must not be again occupied until my orders directing their renovation and disinfection have been complied with.

This notice must not be removed under penalty of law, except by an authorized health official.

Medical Officer of Health.

11. Every doubtful case of a communicable disease shall be classed and dealt with as if it were a case of communicable disease until such is disproved.

12. No milk-container shall be returned to any dairy or milk-vendor from a house while under quarantine.

13. No person from a house in which there is a patient suffering from smallpox, scarlet fever, typhoid fever, paratyphoid fever, septic sore throat, dysentery, Asiatic cholera, or diphtheria shall handle milk, butter, or any other dairy product which is to be sold or given to any party or delivered to any creamery or butter-factory, nor any utensil or container used in connection therewith. Any of these products may be distributed under precautions to be laid down by the M.O.H.

14. Every physician shall report forthwith in writing to the Secretary of the local Board of Health the death from any communicable disease of any patient under his care, within twelve hours thereafter.

15. The Secretary of the local Board of Health must report as least weekly to the Provincial Board of Health all cases of communicable disease occurring within his municipality.

16. In all communicable diseases where the discharges from the nose and throat or other secretions or excretions of the body are likely to contain the infectious agent of the disease, such discharge must be immediately collected and destroyed.

17. When any of the communicable diseases named in Regulation 2 exist in any municipality, the Provincial Board of Health may, with the consent of the Minister, prevent any person or persons from passing to or from such municipality, and may, for this purpose, prevent the transportation of any person or persons to or from the municipality by means of any boat, vessel, steam, electric, or any other car, carriage, vehicle, or premises. It shall be the duty of the Local Board of Health, the corporation of the municipality, any or every officer thereof, to assist in every possible way in carrying out the provisions of this and every regulation of the Health authority.

DIPHTHERIA

18. A suspected case of diphtheria must be isolated until the diagnosis is confirmed or disproved. A clinical case of diphtheria must be isolated, even if the results of the laboratory examinations are negative.

19. So-called membraneous croup shall be classed, quarantined, and cared for in the same manner as diphtheria.

20. The quarantine of cases of diphtheria in public institutions where the population is resident shall be governed by both clinical and laboratory examinations. Immediately after the appearance of a case of diphtheria in an institution, the Medical Officer of Health shall notify the Provincial Board of Health, which shall supply facilities for taking cultures, if necessary, from all residents of the institution. All individuals in such an institution, whether sick or well, who are found to be harboring diphtheria bacilli shall be quarantined until a negative report is made upon nose and throat cultures. They shall then be properly cleaned and disinfected and held in quarantine as provided for in Regulation 3.

TYPHOID FEVER AND PARATYPHOID FEVER

21. No person affected with typhoid fever or paratyphoid fever or in charge of a typhoid or paratyphoid fever patient shall so dispose of the excreta or other infectious bodily secretions or excretions so as to infect or cause offence or danger to any person or persons, and all faecal discharges shall be placed in a vessel containing an equal quantity of 1 in 500 solution of bichloride of mercury, or any other equally effective, for at least one hour before being finally disposed of.

RABIES

22. When an animal suspected of having rabies has bitten a human being, the fact should immediately be reported to the Medical Officer of Health, who shall secure or cause to be secured such animal alive and without injury if possible. The animal shall be securely chained up and confined in a safe and comfortable place, and a report giving full particulars concerning the action taken sent to the Provincial Board of Health. This report shall include the name of the locality in which the biting occured (city, town, municipality, or unorganized district); the date of the biting; the name, residence, and address of the owner of the animal, together with the place of residence; and the names, addresses, and residences of all owners of animals which have been bitten by the animal in question, together with a list and description of the animals bitten and the disposition made of same.

Such supposedly rabid animal must be kept under observation of the Officer of Health for at least ten days. (If after this interval the animal is alive and well it is not suffering from rabies).

When the animal dies or is killed, care must betaken not to injure the brain or spinal cord. The head and several inches of the neck of the animal must be cut off, and properly packed (in glycerine) and sent to the laboratory of the Provincial Board of Health for examination.

All persons bitten by the animal suspected of having rabies should at once communicate with the Provincial Board of Health, and be advised as to the necessity of receiving the Pasteur treatment.

EPIDEMIC CEREBRO-SPINAL MENINGITIS; EPIDEMIC ANTERIOR POLIOMYELITIS.

23. In every case of cerebro-spinal meningitis or epidemic anterior poliomyelitis, the discharges from the nose, throat, and mouth of the patient must be received on cloths and burned at once. After death or recovery of the patient, all personal clothing and bedding, together with the contents of the room and the room itself, must be thoroughly disinfected under the supervision of the Medical Officer of Health. Every doubtful case of this character must be classed as epidemic and cared for accordingly, until proved to be otherwise.

SMALLPOX

24. Where smallpox is present in any municipality the local Board of Health of the municipality may at once appoint one or more sanitary policemen for the purpose of assisting to arrest the spread of the disease.

If the Medical Officer of Health or Provincial Board require the appointment of any specific number of sanitary policemen, then such number shall be appointed by the local Board. In case the local Board neglects or refuses to make the required appointments, the Provincial Board may appoint as many sanitary policemen for such municipality as it deems necessary; any expense so incurred to be charged to the municipality.

25. Any default on the part of the authorities of any municipality in taking immediate and effective action in carrying out the "Public Health Act," the Regulations of the Provincial Board of Health, or any Health by-law in force in the municipality shall be at once reported by the Medical Officer of Health to the Provincial Board, in order that the said Board may take measures as it deems necessary for placing the said municipality in a position to effectively combat the disease.

CONJUNCTIVE (ACUTE INFECTIOUS); OPHTHALMIA NEONATORUM

26. Every physician or other person in attendance upon a lying-in woman, immediately following the birth, shall instil into the eyes of the newly born child a sufficient quantity (a few drops) of 1-per-cent. solution of nitrate of silver (supplied free by the Provincial Board of Health), or any other approved preparation.

27. If within two weeks after the birth of the child one or both eyes shall become reddened, inflamed, swollen, or show any discharge, every physician, nurse, midwife, or person in charge of a maternity or other hospital where such child is, and every person in charge of a child, shall forthwith report in writing to the Medical Officer of Health the name, age, and address of such child, together with the circumstances of the case.

28. The Medical Officer of Health shall, on receipt of the report referred to in Regulation 27, and if the child is not in the care of a legally qualified physician, direct the parents or whoever has charge of the child to immediately place it in charge of a legally qualified physician, or, if the parents or person in charge are unable to pay the cost of such attendance, the Medical Officer of Health shall provide the necessary treatment at the cost of the municipality.

29. The Medical Officer of Health shall send a weekly report of all such cases to the Secretary of the local Board of Health for transmission to the Provincial Health authority.

SIR ADAM BECK'S SECRETARY ARRESTED ON FORGERY CHARGE

Toronto, Oct. 4.—Arrest yesterday afternoon at the international bridge at Niagara Falls terminated the flight of Clarence Settell, for many years private secretary to Sir Adam Beck, and to-day, according to charges made, the forger of a Hydro Commission cheque for $29,990, for which he secured the cash from the Canadian Bank of Commerce in Hamilton. At the time of his arrest Settell still had $23,000 in his possession.

In the employ of the Hydro Electric Commission since its inception, seventeen years, he was one of the best known and most popular of hydro officials. He had the full confidence of Sir Adam Beck, with whose work he was closely related. His salary as hydro employee was $4,875 a year.

the hotel looking out upon the harbor and the Parliament Buildings. Special furniture and mechanical musical instruments have been installed in the suite. A special dining-room has been equipped there for him, where he will take his meals. No persons except members of his party and his guests will be allowed on the third floor of the hotel during his stay.

VISIT INFORMAL

The Prince's holiday here will be absolutely informal. He has emphasized this again in letters replying to invitations from various organizations by saying that his visit to the coast would be "a purely holiday one," extending just a couple of days, and that it would not be possible for him to accept any invitations.

Beyond the fact that the Prince will be the guest of a few friends at private affairs while here and will play golf and possibly go on a hunting expedition up the Island, nothing has been given out as to his intended movements.

HUNTING EXPEDITION

To-day M. B. Jackson, K.C., chairman of the British Columbia Game Conservation Board, sent to the Prince in Vancouver a special license for himself and his party to hunt game while they are in British Columbia. Besides a hunting trip for birds on Vancouver Island, it is likely that the Prince will go after some bear and other big game in the Rocky Mountains on his way back to Calgary.

The Prince will remain in Victoria until Tuesday night, leaving on a boat some time about midnight for Vancouver from where he will take a C.P.R. special train East at noon.

HAS FIRESIDE CHAT

The Prince in Vancouver, after his arrival here at 10 p.m., spent the last hours of last night in the home of an old friend, John G. Fordham, it was learned this morning. An hour after his arrival here he left quietly for the Fordham home, and there, in the fire-lighted den, enjoyed a quiet hour or two laughing and chatting with the members of the Fordham family and half a dozen guests.

He slept late in his suite, on the eighth floor of the Hotel Vancouver this morning.

This being a holiday trip, the Prince is making a real holiday of it. He did not retire until about 1 o'clock this morning, and was not expected to be out again until around noon.

PLAYED GRAMOPHONE THIS MORNING

Following his visit to the home of Col. John G. Fordham, from which he returned to the hotel at 1.20 a.m., the Prince revelled in his love for music, playing the gramophone and the player piano in his apartment until he got tired.

No plans have been made for his entertainment to-day, though it is known that he intends to play golf or squash early in the afternoon.

EXPECTED TO SEE RUGBY

Though no intimation of the Prince's intentions has been given out, it is though likely he will spend a short time at Brockton Point at Vancouver, where the rugby season will be opened this afternoon.

ARRIVAL IN VANCOUVER

At 10.10 o'clock last night the special train of the Prince rolled into the Canadian National depot at Vancouver and the Prince was given a cordial welcome to the city by Mayor W. R. Owen and the members of the City Council. But for these and a few railway officials the station had been cleared. Crowds of people outside, however, caught a sunny smile as the royal visitor raised his hat while stepping into Mayor Owen's official automobile to be conveyed to the Hotel Vancouver. Five other cars were used to transport his suite.

ROYAL VISITOR CHEERED

A royal welcome awaited the Prince in the rotunda and all about the hotel. Men and women cheered lustily and the Prince, as he left the car, repeatedly raised his hat. Only three minutes passed before he had vanished into the elevator to be whisked up to the eighth floor, reserved for him.

Earlier in the day Mayor Owen had received a wire from Captain A. Lascelles, stating the Prince would be pleased to ride in the Mayor's car to his hotel. The Prince, furthermore, had expressed the desire for no ceremonial observances. Accordingly, no arrangements have been made for his entertainment, beyond the securing for him the same suite, and even the same bed that he occupied on his previous visit to Vancouver, September 22, 1919. The entire eighth floor of the hotel was turned over for his use. His room affords a magnificent view of the harbor, the mountains and the Gulf of Georgia.

Upon the arrival of the Prince of Wales in Vancouver last night it was officially announced that although his complete itinerary has not yet been arranged east of Winnipeg, the Prince has definitely engaged himself to be in Toronto October 15 and 16, and in Ottawa October 17 and 18. He has under consideration invitations to visit New England, as well as Chicago and Detroit, but these have not yet been declined or accepted.

ENJOYS OUTING IN PARK

On his way down to Vancouver on the Canadian National the Prince was greeted at Jasper station by Col. Maynard Rogers, superintendent of Jasper National Park, and Major Ritchie, in charge of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. After a brief stop at the large totem pole outside the administration building, the Prince and his staff proceeded to Jasper Park Lodge. The Prince spent the whole of the afternoon walking over the trails, on the new Jasper Park golf links and up to Maligne Gorge. He was entirely free from crowds and thoroughly enjoyed his walk of fourteen miles. Tea was served on the return of the party to the lodge.

In the evening at the lodge the Prince entertained at dinner a small party of National Park and railroad officers, leaving later to follow the Yellowhead Pass and the Thompson and Fraser rivers to Vancouver.

At the request of the Prince, several buffalo tongues were placed on the special train when it passed through Edmonton, and this is forming a part of the royal menu to-day. The tongues were from Buffalo killed on the Wainwright Park reserve.

GIANTS WIN FIRST GAME OF SERIES

THE LINE-UP

Washington	New York
McNeely, cf	Lindstrom, 3b
Harris, 2b	Frisch, 2b
Rice, rf	Young, rf
Goslin, lf	Kelly, cf
Judge, 1b	Terry, 1b
Bluege, 3b	Wilson, lf
Peckinpaugh, ss	Jackson, ss
Ruel, c	Gowdy, c
Johnson, p	Nehf, p

FIRST INNING

Giants—The crowd let loose roars of applause as the Senators ran to their positions on the field. Johnson also came in for a big hand as he walked to the mound. Lindstrom flied out to McNeely. Frisch popped to Bluege trying to bunt. Young struck out. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Senators—McNeely sent up a high fly to Wilson. Jackson threw out Harris at first. Harris collided with Terry at first and the Giant was slightly hurt. After a moment play was resumed. Rice sent up a high foul to Lindstrom. No runs, no hits, no errors.

SECOND INNING

Giants—Kelly got a long hit into the left field bleachers for a home run. Terry shot a line single over second. Wilson struck out. Jackson walked. Gowdy hit into a double play, Peckinpaugh to Harris. One run, two hits, no errors.

Senators—Jackson made a nice stop of Goslin's grounder and threw him out. Judge walked. Nehf tried to catch Judge off first. Bluege fanned. Peck flied out to Wilson. No runs, no hits, no errors.

THIRD INNING

Giants—Johnson took Nehf's roller and threw him out. Lindstrom struck out. Frisch shot a long hit into centre for two bases. Frisch was caught off second, Ruel to Peck. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Senators—Ruel got a base on balls. The crowd was in an uproar. Johnson hit into a double play, Jackson to Frisch to Terry. McNeely walked. Harris popped to Jackson. No runs, no hits, no errors.

FOURTH INNING

Giants—Young fanned, being Johnson's fourth victim on strikes. Kelly also fanned and the crowd was in high humor. Terry got a home run into the left field stands. Wilson struck out. One run, one hit, no errors.

Senators—Rice flied out to Kelly. Nehf employed a wide curve and Washingtonians were mystified by his delivery. Frisch threw out Goslin at first. Judge got a line single into right field for Washington's first hit. Lindstrom threw out Bluege. No runs, one hit, no errors.

FIFTH INNING

Giants—Jackson fanned. Gowdy shot a hit into centre for one base. Nehf forced Gowdy, Harris to Peckinpaugh. Lindstrom flied out to McNeely. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Senators—Peckinpaugh sent up a high foul to Terry. Ruel flied out to Wilson. Johnson went out, Jackson to Terry. No runs, no hits, no errors.

SIXTH INNING

Giants—Frisch walked. Young struck out for the third time. Kelly flied out to Goslin. Terry sent up a foul to Ruel. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Senators—The crowd was now calling on the home boys for a rally. McNeely got a two-base hit into left. Jackson threw out Harris, McNeely going to third. McNeely scored when Frisch threw out Rice at first. Goslin got a single off Nehf's pitching hand. Goslin went out stealing, Gowdy to Frisch. One run, two hits, no errors.

SEVENTH INNING

Giants—Wilson got a hit into right field for one base. Jackson hit into a double play, Bluege to Harris to Judge. Gowdy claimed the ball hit his hand, but Umpire Connolly would not allow it. Gowdy walked to first. Nehf got a Texas Leaguer into right. Gowdy stopped at second. Lindstrom up. Gowdy went to third and Nehf to second on a passed ball. Peckinpaugh threw out Lindstrom. No runs, two hits, no errors.

Senators—Judge sent out a hot liner which Young took. Nehf tossed out Bluege. Peckinpaugh pushed a hot grounder through Lindstrom for a hit. Peckinpaugh stole second. Ruel got a base on balls. Johnson lined out to Frisch. No runs, one hit, no errors.

EIGHTH INNING

Giants—Frisch sent a high one to Peckinpaugh. Young got a hit into left for two bases. Kelly was thrown out at first, by Peckinpaugh. Young went to third. Terry walked. On an attempted double steal Young was caught off third, the play being Ruel to Bluege. No runs, one hit, no errors.

NINTH INNING

Giants—Wilson shot a single into right field. Jackson sacrificed, Bluege to Judge, Wilson going to second. Gowdy beat up air and sat down. Nehf singled into right and Wilson was called out at the plate. Rice to Ruel. No runs, two hits, no errors.

Senators—Judge struck out. Bluege singled off Jackson's glove. On the hit-and-run play Peckinpaugh doubled to left, scoring Bluege. The crowd was frantic. Cushions were thrown into the field and the crowd yelled and cheered. The game was halted until the officials could clear the field of cushions. Jackson threw out Ruel at first, Peckinpaugh going to third. Johnson filed to Kelly. One run, two hits, no errors.

TENTH INNING

Senators—Lindstrom threw out McNeely. Harris got a hit off Lindstrom's glove. Rive singled into right field, Harris going to second. Goslin popped to Jackson, Judge flied out to Young. No runs, two hits, no errors.

ELEVENTH INNING

Giants—McNeely gathered in Terry's fly. He and Rice almost had a collision. Wilson fanned. Peckinpaugh threw out Jackson. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Senators—Kelly made a fine catch of Bluege's short fly. Gowdy took Peckinpaugh's foul. Nehf took Ruel's hopper and threw him out. No runs, no hits, no errors.

TWELFTH INNING

Giants—Gowdy got a base on balls. The ball hit Gowdy in the back. Nehf got a Texas Leaguer, which McNeely was only able to knock down. McNeely picked up the ball and threw wildly to the stands, Gowdy went to third on the play and Nehf to second. Bentley went to bat for Lindstrom. Bentley walked and the bases were filled. Southworth ran for Bentley. Frisch forced Gowdy at the plate, Harris to Ruel. Nehf went to third and Southworth to second. Nehf scored on Young's Texas Leaguer to centre, Southworth going to third and Frisch to second. Kelly flied out to Goslin and Southworth scored. Terry singled off Judge's glove, Frisch going to third and Young to second. Wilson lined out to Goslin. Two runs, three hits, one error.

Senators—Kelly went to second for the Giants, while Frisch went to third and Southworth to centre. Shirley batted for Johnson. Jackson dropped Shirley's fly and the batter went to Shirley scored on Harris'suthworthS second. McNeely flied to Southworth. Shirley scored on Harris's single over the middle bag. Rice singled to centre, Harris going to third. Rice tried to stretch his hitland was out Southworth to Frisch. Goslin was thrown out Kelly to Terry. One run, two hits, one error.

NO BREAD FAMINE GERMANY DECLARES

Ministry Admits Short Harvest But Denies Alarming Reports

Berlin, Oct. 4.—The Food and Agriculture Ministry has denied reports that the German harvest is alarming. A decrease in the harvest, including grain, vegetables and food is estimated at twenty per cent. over last year.

Wheat and rye are estimated at eleven per cent. less than in 1923, and the general grain harvest only 5.4 per cent. under last year's exceptionally good crop.

The Ministry asserts that it has no thought of introducing the bread car rationing system. The possible shortage it was explained, is already covered by arrangements for purchases of grain abroad.

the two towns for accommodation that night.

On Wednesday the towns from Parksville to the Comox Valley will be visited, Courtenay being the objective after luncheon at Qualicum. The valley city is to be reached at about 3 o'clock, and then the afternoon will be devoted to visits to Cumberland, Comox and other points. At 7 o'clock there will be a dinner at the Courtenay Hotel, with members of the Courtenay-Comox Board of Trade, and the Cumberland Board of Trade.

The party is due to reach the Island Hall, Parksville, for luncheon on Thursday, and in the afternoon will inspect the plant of the Straits Lumber Company at Nanoose, being due in Nanaimo for dinner with the Nanaimo Board of Trade at the Newcastle Hotel, Nanaimo, at 7 o'clock.

On Friday a start will be made early to see some of the mining settlements in Newcastle district, reaching that city in time for luncheon with the Duncan Board of Trade. By giving the morning to Cassidy and South Wellington, and the afternoon to Cobble Hill and Shawnigan Lake, where there is a branch of the Duncan Board of Trade, it is expected to reach Victoria late on Friday evening.

The party will be headed by President C. P. W. Schwengers of the Chamber, and will include Mayor Hayward, and representatives of the commercial, manufacturing, and automobile interests of the city.

Bread Adds Carbohydrates

SCIENCE tells us that many foods are "light" in carbohydrates. Yet, in checking over the list of foods mentioned, we find that it includes a great many foods eaten regularly and often.

We find many meats, eggs, fish, and a large number of vegetables deficient in carbohydrates. When you serve these foods, serve more Shelly's because a pound of this high-food-value loaf contains 38% of the carbohydrates, and 77% of the mineral salts needed by the body daily. It should be eaten in far greater quantities than is your custom.

Too, it adds to the flavor and appearance of many foods, and naturally their food values. Breaded veal chops are an excellent example.

But, because "there's a difference in bread," be sure of the food value when you purchase. Don't say "bread," say Shelly's

MEDIUM'S WARNING FAILED TO SAVE MAN FROM DEATH

New Bedford, Mass., Oct. 4.—A theory that Frederick A. Clements, who turned from a ministerial training in Newfoundland to run a garage in Burlington, was killed by a man after a quarrel over money matters, occupied the attention today of the officials investigating his death.

A warning that his safety was menaced by a "dark man with a club" was given Clements by his wife, known as Madame Sandeen, a spiritualist medium, but the advice did not save him. On Thursday boys fishing in the Shawsheen River found his body in seven feet of water. It had been wrapped in sacking, bound with wire and weighted down with two auto cylinder heads. The body had been in the water two weeks and that the man had been beaten over the head with a hammer was the medical evidence.

DOMINION AND EMPIRE DELEGATES CO-OPERATE

Geneva, Oct. 4 (Canadian Press Cable via Reuter's)—Lord Parmoor of the British delegation to the League of Nations assembly when interviewed by Reuter's yesterday before his departure for home, said an understanding with the Empire delegation had been made throughout the meeting. The Dominion delegates, he added, showed a desire for co-operation in Empire affairs.

RESULT OF FISHING COMPETITION GIVEN

Beautiful Prizes Awarded to Masters of Angling Art

Montreal, October 4.—The results of the 1924 fishing trophy competitions held at the three Ontario bungalow camps of the Canadian Pacific Railway were announced by the judges yesterday.

At French River the competition is declared a tie, as D. W. L. Hawkins of New York City, and H. H. Champ of Hamilton, Ontario, entered small mouth black bass of almost exactly the same dimensions and each weighing four pounds eight ounces.

At Nipigon River, W. Metzer of Detroit is first with a speckled trout of six pounds ten ounces. J. A. Furlong of Winnipeg captured the Lake of the Woods competition with a muskalonge weighing twenty pounds eight ounces. Some larger fish were entered in the contest, but could not be considered owing to failure to comply with the contest regulations.

Suitable awards are being prepared and the winners will also have their names engraved on shields attached to the beautiful trophies, which represent living fish in silver.

UNIVERSITY TELLS OF WORLD'S LEAGUE

Vancouver, Ovt. 4.—Adequate instruction on the League of Nations has been given in both first and fourth year classes of the history department, University of British Columbia since the league was established in the Summer of 1919, according to Dr. L. S. Klinck, president.

The announcement as made in reply to a letter received recently from the Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Borden, in which the suggestion was advanced that universities and colleges of Canada include in their curricula the study of the league's history and purpose and of the great part which it is taking in international affairs.

PORT OF MONTREAL HANDLES MORE GRAIN THAN PREVIOUS YEAR

Montreal, Oct. 4.—Since the opening of navigation to date, the port of Montreal had handled 101,580,271 bushels of grain compared with 85,127,786 during the same period last year, it was announced yesterday at the Harbor Commissioners' office.

Eighty tramp steamers have still to arrive in Montreal for October loading, and others are reporting daily for November sailings. Every indication points to the next two months being the busiest in the history of the port of Montreal.

ANNUAL MEETING OF ALBERTA PUBLISHERS

Officers Named at Vancouver Last Night

Vancouver, Oct. 4.—L. D. Nesbitt of the Bassano Star was elected president of the Alberta Press Association at the annual meeting of that organization held here Friday. The meeting was held in conjunction with that of the British Columbia and Yukon Press Association, whose election of officers, however, was deferred until to-day.

Other officers elected by the Alberta Association were: John Torrance of The Lethbridge Herald, first vice-president; L. D'Albertson of Chauvin, second vice-president; W. J. Huntingford of the Wainwright Star, secretary-treasurer; R. C. Jessop of Nanton, G. C. Duncan of Drumheller, John Imrie of Edmonton, H. G. Thunell of Viking, E. S. Cooper of Vermillion and F. G. Turnbull of Red Deer, executive members.

Delegates to both conventions were guests of Colonel G. H. Kirkpatrick, chairman of the Vancouver Harbor Commission, Friday afternoon, on a tour of the harbor, which to the Alberta delegates in particular proved of great interest, they said, because of their interest in the development of the Pacific route for the export of grain.

The two associations will meet in joint session all to-day to discuss problems of the publishing business in the two provinces. A number of addresses have been scheduled.

Broadway Shows Being Purified

New York, October 5—Broadway is being purified.

Uniformed evangelists of the law have been assigned to various popular shows to see that naughty words in realistic plays and nude scenes in the living pictures of revues are deleted.

The only effect of this annual gesture, it seems, is to make more popular the shows under fire.

One of the first plays picked upon is a war story. The police objected to some of the words placed in the mouths of the soldier actors while on trench duty. It appears the officers want verbal cream puffs to flow from the harassed fighters.

Pat was struggling along with a heavy bundle. A friend, passing in a cart, offered to give him a lift.

Pat was delighted, and jumped up.

"Put your bundle down on the seat, man," said his friend, noticing that Pat was still nursing it.

"Oh, no," said Pat. "Seeing as you're so kind as to carry me I'll not be asking ye to carry the bundle as well."

EX-PREMIER MAY FACE THEFT CHARGE

Preliminary Inquiry Into Allegation Against Sir Richard Squires

St. Johns, Nfld., Oct. 4.—Sir Richard Squires, ex-Premier of Newfoundland, it is expected, will stand trial before the Supreme Court of Newfoundland on charges of stealing monies, the property of His Majesty's Government and receiving monies and property of His Majesty's Government, knowing them to be stolen. The charges have arisen out of the report submitted by T. Hollis Walker, K.C. of Derby, England, the Royal Commissioner, who last Winter, investigated alleged misappropriation of public funds during the years 1920, 1921 and 1922.

PURE BLOOD CATTLE VICTIMS OF PLAGUE

TELLS OF OBSTACLES IN BRITISH FLIGHT

Lt.-Col. Broome Explains Share in World Effort

Special to The Times

Duncan, Oct. 3.—The I.O.O.F. Hall, Duncan, was crowded on Thursday evening on the occasion of the lecture given by Lieut.-Colonel R. E. Broome, who was associated with Major Stuart MacLaren in the British world flight.

C. F. Davie, M.P.P., occupied the chair and in introducing the speaker of the evening said he felt it an honor to preside at any entertainment given, as this was under the auspices of the I.O.D.E. (Cowichan Chapter)).

Lieut.-Colonel Broome gave a most interesting and thrilling account of the British flight and of his own experiences when he went to Japan to make the necessary arrangements for the Pacific stretch, which was 178 degrees of longitude, or half way round the world.

First he said what a bitter blow to them all their failure had been, as they had felt it would be most fitting that the nation which had first sailed round the world by sea should be the first to carry their flag around the world by air.

He mentioned the fact that although the Americans had all the help they wanted from their govrnment, the British Government would not help them in any way whatever, and it was from private firms that their only help came in the Old Country. He was therefore filled with surprise and delight when he found the Canadian Government willing to lend a hand and placed the H.M.C.S. Thiepval at his disposal, with Lieut. Beech of Salt Spring Island in command and Lieut. A. Pressey (whose home is in Duncan) second in command. He told of his meeting with the American fliers in Tokio, and of receiving there a telegram from MacLaren to say that his machine had crashed in Burmah and he thought the continuance of the flight improbable. This was terrible news indeed, but the Americans on hearing of it offered to take a spare machine, which Lieut.-Colonel Broome, had, over to Major MacLaren, a distance of about 6,000 miles. This most generous offer was accepted, and the machine taken.

He told also of a telegram they received from the Air Ministry in London urging MacLaren to call it off, but the reply sent back was "Faint heart never won fair lady."

Colonel Broome gave many humorous anecdotes. When landing in Minato, in Japan, they were given huge bouquets with labels reading "To the Heavenly Heroes of the Air." This they often laughed over and later when flying in a dense fog and expecting every minute to be their last, Major MacLaren sent back a chit to Lieut.-Colonel Broome (talk in a flying machine is impossible on account of the noise) which read "Are we heavenly heroes, or d—— fools?"

FINAL CRASH

When telling of their final crash, Colonel Broome held his audience spellbound as he told how skilfully the pilot brought the machine down into the sea to avoid crashing into rocks and certain death for all.

A very hearty vote of thanks and three rousing cheers were accorded to Lieut.-Colonel Broome, and the evening's entertainment ended with the singing of the National Anthem.

FISHING GOOD AT COWICHAN LAKE

Special to The Times

G. K. Gillespie took a party of fishermen down the river this week and reports good sport. The rain and consequent rise of the water has evidently improved the fishing, as is usual at this time of the year. The presence of spring salmon and and cohoes has already been noticed.

Mr. T. Giles, an employee of the Island Logging Company, while using a claw bar on a railway spur was badly cut on the top of the head. The wound bled profusely until surgical aid was given by Dr. E. L. Garner, who was summoned without delay from Lake Cowichan.

A delightful afternoon was spent on Thursday, October 2, when Mrs. S. Alexander entertained a number of friends at her home. The afternoon was spent in whist. The first prize was won by Mrs. Carl Swanson; second, Mrs. D. Madill; third, Mrs. R. Beech; consolation, Mrs. H. T. Hardinge. Tea was served at the close of the afternoon. Included among the guests were Mrs. G. Stelly, Mrs. Keast, Mrs. R. Beech, Mrs. H. Dawson, Mrs. R. Miller, Mrs. W. Baylis, Mrs. C. Swanson, Mrs. E. Archer, Mrs. G. K. Gillespie, Mrs. Harry Hardinge, Mrs. S. Scholey, Mrs. F. Reed, Mrs. T. Greensmith, Mrs. D. Madill, Mrs. H. Sunderland, Mrs. Cook and friend, Miss Wagstaff.

Frank Baylis, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Baylis, was unfortunate enough to get two particles of steel in his eye.

Mr. E. McKenzie, manager, Cowichan Merchants, Limited (Branch Store), has been spending a week in Vancouver.

Mrs. Hanson, of Duncan, is visiting Mrs. Keast.

TO HOLD DANCE

Special to The Times

Luxton, Oct. 3.—A dance will be held in the Luxton Hall on Thursday, October 16, under the auspices of the Luxton and Happy Valley Women's Institute, for which Pitt's Orchestra has been engaged.

This dance has been arranged to take the place of the adult dance which had been previously announced to follow the children's fancy dress party to be held on All Hallowe'en, it being the intention of the institute to devote the entire evening on that date to the amusement of the children. All children are being asked to attend the party in fancy dress, and as a further inducement, special prizes will be given for the best comic costume—boy and girl; best fancy costume—boy and girl; and best costume for boy and girl under seven years of age.

Refreshments will be served by the institute special committee on both occasions.

10,000 Citizens Lost

One of the most startling facts to come under our observation for some time is, that 10,000 people left our Province for the States last year because there was not work or money here. While these folks were going away, all who are left were spending an average of $110 each for goods made outside, that could have been bought from local factories.

Had we each saved our $110, we'd have kept our 10,000 and brought in another 4,000 to take good jobs.

RESPECT HIS WISHES

WHEN THE PRINCE OF Wales paid his first visit to Victoria five years ago the entire city and brilliant sunshine welcomed him. He came as heir to the British Throne and his tour at that time was in the nature of an official function. He expected ceremonial and all that goes with royal pilgrimmage when such is the object. That he was able to get some time to himself and escape the exactions which his position imposes was a matter for his own personal congratulation.

When the Prince arrives in Victoria to-morrow afternoon he will come as a private gentleman on holiday. He will have to put up with the crowd which will greet him in spite of any edict that may go forth; but from the time he enters his suite at the Empress Hotel he has a perfect right to expect that his expressed wish for freedom and comparative privacy shall be respected to the limit. He has undoubtedly included Victoria in his itinerary by reason of the pleasant memories which have lingered with him since 1919. He may find here all that the holidaymaker desires. He is an ardent sportsman and he knows that this locality can provide him with most of his favorite pastimes. Give him a chance.

It is to be hoped, therefore, that the comings and goings of "Baron Renfrew" will not be impeded by curious crowds. There is no suggestion that demonstrations are necessary to give expression to our loyalty. He will take all that for granted and fully appreciate a strict observance of his desires. None better than he knows how welcome he is to spend as much of his time as possible in this delightful locality.

IT WAS A REAL TEST

WE REFUSE TO BELIEVE that the morning paper is serious when it declares that the by-election in Northumberland will be a better test of the Liberal policies "than any by-election in Quebec."

St. Antoine was a real test of the Government's tariff programme. The Liberal standard bearer took the cause of freer trade right into the citadel of protection. His Liberal predecessor had resigned his seat in the House of Commons because he could not subscribe to that cause. It looked, even to optimistic Liberals, that St. Antoine would once again return a high protectionist to Ottawa and restore its traditional Conservative representation.

Filled with buoyant hope that he had read these pleasant signs aright, Mr. Meighen journeyed to St. Antoine and campaigned as he had never campaigned before. This was the great opportunity to show the people of Canada that the King Government was pandering to the West at the expense of the East. Had not one of the Prime Minister's supporters in the House of Commons lodged the most convincing protest that such was the case? Could anything be simpler than to win St. Antoine for the Conservatives?

All these hopes went aglimmering. High protection was defeated in high protection's stronghold. The election was fought on this issue to the exclusion of nearly everything else. To say that St. Antoine, the riding which never returned a Liberal from the time it was established until 1917, is not as good a test of Liberal policies as will be the by-election in Northumberland, is not as suitable a district in which to ask the electorate what it thinks of the manner in which the present administration is looking after the affairs of the country, is going to extremes.

The long and the short of it is, the result in St. Antoine was a great blow to Mr. Meighen, his party, and its press. What effect it has had on the latter is obvious to the newspaper-reading public. Several influential Tory journals have been literally flying at one another's throats for weeks. They are playing pitch and toss with Mr. Meighen and The Montreal Gazette already has called for his political head.

It must be a sad discovery for the Conservative Party, especially after having developed a very careful campaign to show that Mr. King has been wooing the West and spurning the East, to learn that Quebec is satisfied with policies which it, by its action at the polls, considers are for the general good of the country, and, therefore, good for Quebec.

THE INTERURBAN

IT IS VERY PLAIN THAT there are two definite considerations to be weighed between the people who depend upon the interurban electric railway service and the officials of the British Columbia Electric Railway. Patrons of the street car to the north of the city are naturally worried at the prospect which confronts them. The company is equally hesitant about increasing its losses on a branch of its lines which has not paid and does not yet pay.

Although the prospect of any change in the company's decision does not seem to be particularly bright, it is desirable that the principal parties to the question should once more get together and recanvass the whole situation while there is yet time. Our belief that the district tributary to the interurban is due for considerable development at no very distant date prompts us to hope that the forthcoming conference will be fruitful of a solution which will be satisfactory to patrons and company alike.

DINGY JUSTICE HALLS

IN VIEW OF THE MANY demands which are constantly being made upon the treasury of the Province at this stage it may not be the most opportune time to advocate the building of a new Court House in Victoria. An edifice of appropriate accommodation and dignity of design would naturally cost a good deal of money. At the same time we are of the opinion that there should be no delay in giving the inside of the present building a little attention.

After their long contemplation of the dingy interior of the room in which they are conducting the Fall Assizes Mr. Justice Murphy and court officials would no doubt like to depart from their labors at the present sittings with the feeling that on their next appearance there they would find their surroundings brightened by a few touches of the painter's brush. We hope the authorities will not wait until some future Grand Jury brings in a recommendation for this improvement.

HOW TO AVOID ACCIDENTS

NO DOUBT A LARGE number of street accidents are caused by careless drivers of automobiles. But the blame is not all theirs. Upon the pedestrian devolves an obligation to be careful and observe one or two well-defined rules of conduct.

The streets are obviously for the use of all; but what is known as the road is the only part of the thoroughfare which may be used for vehicular traffic. Consequently there is a rule that the pedestrian should limit the risk of accident by crossing the road at corners instead of plodding his way diagonally across it.

Observance of this simple rule would create a better feeling between the motorist and the pedestrian and curtail accidents. It is just a matter of co-operation between the two that is wanted.

Telegraphic advices from London, Ontario, declare that the sessions of the General Synod of the Anglican Church which have just concluded, were "possibly the most successful" since its inauguration thirty years ago. At least Anglican churchwomen will note the word "possibly" and remember for a very long time that it was at this meeting that a resolution forbidding women to take their places as delegates was passed amid cheers.

A TAX ON GASOLINE

From The St. Catharines Standard

Those who use the roads the most should contribute most to their cost and upkeep. Undoubtedly this is what the Minister of Highways had in mind in his remarks the other day, and the conclusion to be drawn from what he said is that a tax on gasoline is to be expected in Ontario. These are arguments against such a tax, but the Government will have little difficulty in presenting a strong case in favor of levy of this nature.

DR. FRANK CRANE —ON— "THOUGHT"

In order to acquire the desired stage of thought, one must escape from the drifts of the unthinking ages. These are compact of the accumulations of customs and culture. Every item of this culture was practically selected for survival because it supported the autocratic social organization of these ages and helped to subordinate the masses of mankind to the few.

So that one who has an ambition to escape from custom and to live a life of intelligence faces the necessity of being constantly a rebel. It is safe to say that at no time has a group or a people ever demonstrated that it lives thinkingly and that it is conducted solely by thought. It is rather dominated by long stages of custom, interspersed with episodes of passion. Once in a while we get tired of customs and find that they contradict each other. Obedience is not easy. Sometimes the orders are ambiguous or impractical. We rebel against them and ask the question, "Why should I do this thing at all?" But sooner or later it becomes necessary for everyone to stick to the rules of the game.

For instance, the last war would not have occurred if there had been found a sufficient group able to think for themselves. And it is a curious phenomenon of our modern civilization that it is governed by those who appeal to party spirit or to passions rather than to intelligence, and independence.

The very fibres of our body are the roots of habit, the fibres which are the structure of the group. We find it in wresting ourselves free when we are in danger of extinction.

All the forces around us are arranged for the conservatism of reaction. Society itself is a network of social relationships and antagonisms. These may be of old customs and attitudes of mind inherited from the past.

The primitive tragedy is that of the individual struggling against habit. Intelligence is the last of all in the scale of social evolution and one who gives himself wholly to it finds that he is out of touch with his fellow men.

Just how far intelligence should guide us is a matter for everyone to decide for himself as intelligent action has its danger quite as much as the adherence to social conditions around us.

WHO'S WHO IN HISTORY TO-DAY

ST. FRANCIS OF ASSISI

Celebrated Italian monk and preacher, died on October 4, 1226. After a serious illness in his youth he turned to a life of ascetic devotion. In his later years he retired as a hermit to Mount Alverno. He founded the order of the Franciscans.

EDMUND MALONE

Irish literary critic and Shakesperian scholar, was born on October 4, 1741. While practicing law in Dublin, his father's death left him enough money to live upon, and he went to London to devote himself to literary work. There he counted among his friends Samuel Johnson, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Edmund Burke and others. He published one edition of Shakespeare, and left material for another.

HENRY CAREY

English poet and composer of musical farces, died on October 4, 1743. He was the reputed author of "God Save the King." Among his known works are the ballad "Sally in Our Alley" and "Namby-Pamby."

FREDERIC AUGUSTE BARTHOLDI

Noted French sculptor, died on October 4, 1904. Among his works are the great Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor and the statue of Lafayette in Union Square, New York.

VICTORIA'S WAR MEMORIAL

To the Editor:—The news item concerning the memorial, which appeared in Wednesday's issue, contains the following:

"'It would be a Utopian idea,' stated H. T. Ravenhill, vice-chairman of the committee, to The Times today, 'to have followed out what we were advised to do—make an appeal limited to twenty-five-cent subscriptions.'"

I called at the committee rooms today for a dual purpose: To ask Mr. Ravenhill to correct his misstatement, and to offer my services in any capacity if the committee would issue an official statement announcing that the Lieutenant-Governor's subscription would be applied to the whole memorial and not to the exclusive purchase of the statue.

This offer met with a torrent of abuse. Three members of the committee joined together in calling me a wrecker and other choice epithets. An emphatic refusal to issue the statement was given. My declaration that I would call a public meeting and reveal the whole sordid story was too much for them, the meeting adjourned in disorder.

Mr. Ravenhill refused to correct his remarks concerning the twenty-five-cent limit, consequently I am compelled to do so myself. My suggestion was a subscription limited to sums of from one cent to $2, in order that all might subscribe and none feel crushed under the weight of the large donations of the wealthy. In round numbers the population of Victoria and district is 60,000. 3,000 contributions of $2 each would be $6,000, 3,000 at $1 would be $3,000, making a total of $9,000 and l...ving 54,000 people to subscribe $6,000 in amounts of less than $1. I believe $15,000 could be collected in short order by such a method.

The real point, however, is the denial of the right of the people to subscribe to all parts of a public memorial.

It is my intention to correct every misstatement emanating from the commitee, so long as the privilege of the press is extended to me.

W.I. MAKES CHANGES IN PROPOSED FALL FAIR REGULATIONS

The Victoria Women's Institute met on Friday in their rooms, Surrey Block, Yates Street, for a "social" afternoon when the programme of rules and regulations of the Fall Fair were thoroughly gone over and discussed. As so many of the outside Institute members were present it made a very entertaining afternoon, and also an educational one. Different suggestions were given and a few alterations made in the present rules, so that both judges and Institutes may understand fully what is meant.

The Fall bazaar was also announced as to take place on October 18, and all the members of Victoria Institute extend a hearty invitation to the public to attend so as to make it both a financial and social success. Miss Ivy Cobbett favored the gathering with two songs, which were very much appreciated, and after refreshments were served the meeting adjourned.

Gordon Head W.I. — At a special meeting held by the Gordon Head Women's Institute Mrs. Watson and Mrs. Fielding were appointed as delegates to attend the district conference, to be held in Victoria next week. It was also decided to hold a combined wool bee and institute meeting on October 16. All of the neighborhood women as well as institute workers are cordially invited to attend. The making of wool comforters will be demonstrated at this meeting.

PIONEER OF MAYNE ISLAND IS DEAD

Thomas Bennett, Prominent Farmer, Lived Forty-six Years on Island

Mayne Island lost one of its oldest and best known pioneers in the death last evening of Thomas Bennett, a prominent rancher, who passed away at his home at the age of eighty years. It is forty-six years since Mr. Bennett, a native of County Down, Ireland, took up his residence on Mayne Island, and has lived there since as a prosperous farmer, prominent in the public life of the Island and in any matters tending to its progress. His death will be a great loss to the community.

He is survived by his widow, five sons, two daughters and nineteen grandchildren on Mayne Island, two sisters and one brother. The funeral will be held from the residence on Monday at 2 o'clock, Rev. Mr. Porter officiating. Interment will be made at Mayne Island cemetery. The arrangements are in the hands of the Sands Funeral Company.

WEST SAANICH MAY EMULATE LAKE HILL AND RUN BUSSES

Deputation to Ask Manager Goward For Terms

In an effort to discover exactly what the people of Saanich want done to meet the transportation crisis caused by the abandonment of service on the Interurban Railway at the end of this month, the Municipal Council last night at Royal Oak held informal and free discussions with delegations from the various wards most affected.

The delegation from Ward Four, regarding the B.C. Electric Company's decision as final, made the suggestion that the Council should submit a referendum at the next election, to a delimited area, for municipally operated buses, with the understanding that should there be any loss in operation, the deficit would be assessed against the lands benefited by the service in similar manner to the agreement with Lake Hill which preceded that successful municipal venture.

The Marigold delegation also asked that the Council should establish regulations for running times of jitneys, a standard of comfort for passengers, and require jitneys and buses to carry passenger insurance. The immediate temporary improvement of roads necessary to serve isolated districts such as Goward and Eberts was also requested by this delegation.

These recommendations became lost to sight in the course of the following hour, when delegates and Councillors endeavored to discover some practical inducement which the municipality can offer the Railway Company to continue operation of the line.

The annual operating deficit of more than $19,000 was conceded to be too great to be borne, and the suggestion that Saanich should exempt the right of way from taxation was advanced hopefully until the delegates were informed that the $3,345 involved was "a drop in the bucket."

A proposal that competing jitneys should be eliminated was also advanced, calculations showing that this concession would increase the earning of the railway by a further $7,000 or more. This proposal met with considerable opposition, however, and finally the meeting struck a committee which, with the whole of the Council, will wait on Manager Goward early next week and ask that "the cards be placed on the table," that the B.C. Electric Company definitely state what concessions will induce continued operation of the line.

The personnel of this joint committee, in addition to the whole Council, is as follows: F. F. Beckett and F. Mellor, Marigold; R. Morton, P. B. Darnell and W. J. Johnson, Prospect Lake; W. W. Wallace and R. Sluggett of Sluggetts, H. H. Grist of Royal Oak.

STATEMENT ISSUED ON GERMAN LOAN BY U.S. COMPANY

Fifty Per Cent of Issue to be Placed in U.S., Thirty-five Per Cent in England

London, Oct. 4. — Continued progress of the negotiations going on between Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank; Dr. Hans Luther, German Finance Minister, and American and British continental bankers, regarding the £40,000,000 German loan, is indicated by a statement issued by J. P. Morgan & Company.

FIRM SATISFIED

The head of the Morgan company declared his firm had already satisfied itself concerning the underlying security and had been requested by the British, French and Belgian Governments to facilitate placing the loan by issuing a portion of it for the American market. The statement follows: "Our position at present is that we have been requested by the British, French and Belgian Governments to use our good offices to facilitate the placing of the German loan under the Dawes plan by issuing a portion for the American market; that we have satisfied ourselves as to the undeslying security of the bonds; and have already begun negotiations with the authorized representatives of the German Government.

FIFTY PER CENT IN U.S.

"The necessity of simultaneous discussions with various continental markets whose co-operation is essential to the success of the issue has necessarily delayed the completion of the matter. Meantime, while it is known that approximately fifty per cent of the issue of £40,000,000 will be placed in the United States, thirty-five per cent in England and the remainder on the contnient, considerable speculation has been rife as to the interest yield and other details. But it is unlikely these will be finally arranged until preliminary matters, such as the exact apportionment, arrangement of securities and the terms for the issue, have been settled.

FAVORABLE EFFECT

"The favorable results of the preliminary conference already has had an effect in London, where a pronounced hostility was displayed against the loan a fortnight ago. This now appears largely to have been mitigated by assurances that the U.S. experts see little difficulty in the way of the successful flotation of the same.

"With the arrival of Dr. Luther Wednesday night, the conferences began to take on a more official character. Financial circles expect it will be a matter of only a short time before the loan document will be ready for Dr. Luther's signature."

The Key To Prosperity

An Advertisement to Young Men

Carnegie, Rockefeller, Hill—financiers who have succeeded in a marked degree—say that the key to prosperity is the ability to save in youth.

John Wanamaker laid the foundation of his colossal fortune with the proceeds of his endowment insurance policies.

No other method of saving has been found superior to the endowment policy. It involves almost compulsory saving, yet if taken out in The Mutual Life with the splendid annual dividends applied to reduce the premiums, the policy is not difficult to carry. Certainly not too difficult for a young man who is determined to succeed.

At the end of the term of the policy—say 10 years, 15 years, or 20 years—the principal is available for re-investment. It becomes a partner to toil night and day for you and to help you to success.

Many Children Cross Atlantic

Ages of Boys and Girls on Montclare Vary From Seven to Fifteen Years

Quebec, Oct. 4.—There were at least a dozen unaccompanied boys and girls whose ages varied from seven to fifteen years on the Canadian Pacific steamer Montclare, which arrived here yesterday morning from Liverpool. Among the youngest of these children might be mentioned Ines and Frederick Williams, whose ages are seven and nine respectively, and who are going to relatives in Sherbrooke, Que.

Nine-year-old Walter Syomila is going to his uncle in Nipigon and Mary Sheridan, thirteen years of age, will join her relatives in London, Ontario.

Among the cabin passengers who continued on the steamer for Montreal was Percy Hutchison, accompanied by his wife and members of his theatrical party, including Lord Lyvedo, who will open their Canadian tour with Mr. Hutchison's play, "Bulldog Drummond," in Ottawa on October 13. Mr. Hutchison and party declared they had enjoyed the trip across the Atlantic immensely when seen on board the Montclare this morning, and they are looking forward to a successful tour in this country.

STUDENT POISONED PARENTS FOR GREED

Essen, Germany, Oct. 4.—Hans Mueller, twenty-year-old student, was found guilty yesterday of poisoning his father and mother and was sentenced to death. A desire to gain possession of the business owned by his parents was the motive.

See Rose and See Better

Symptoms Are Danger Signals

Headaches, certain stomach disorders, dizziness, dull heavy pains at the base of the skull, generally point to a defect in vision. When any of these symptoms fail to respond permanently to ordinary treatment, it is highly advisable to consult a skilled opthalmic optician. He can determine if the trouble is caused by the eyes, and if so, correct it at a very moderate fee.

TO-MORROW'S HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

SUNDAY AND MONDAY, OCTOBER 5-6

Sunday's horoscope is not particularly auspicious, although spiritual matters and ecclesiastical activities should flourish.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of anxiety in certain directions, although other affairs will flourish. A child born on this day should be educated in perseverance as well as self-reliance.

Monday's astrological forecast is for an active year, with new business and gratifying renewal of contracts, but speculation and all risk of moneys should be avoided.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a prosperous year, with new business and contracts. A child born on this day will succeed in its affairs.

LADIES' GUILD FOR SAILORS PLAN SALE

At a well-attended regular meeting of the Ladies' Guild for Sailors, Mrs. Thomson in the chair, final arrangements were made for the sale of work and home cooking to be held in the Alexandra ballroom on Trafalgar Day, October 21. It will be opened at three o'clock by Mrs. R. B. McMicking. Stall holders will be as follows:

Woolies, Mrs. Thomson and Mrs. W. R. Sayer; aprons, Mrs. T. Kingham; fancy work, Mrs. Wilders and Mrs. Swayne; miscellaneous, Mrs. and Miss Jardine; home cooking, Mrs. Bass and Mrs. Bunbury; afternoon tea, Mrs. Gillatt, Mrs. E. Y. Thomson and Mrs. Snowden; art gallery, Mrs. McMicking; candies, Mrs. Fisher. A musical programme is being arranged.

Overseas League.—At the regular meeting of the Overseas League to be held in the Hudson Bay private dining-room on Monday next, the Very Rev. Dean Quainton will address the members, and Miss Justine Gilbert will contribute to the musical programme.

PRINCE TO OCCUPY LUXURIOUS SUITE DURING STAY HERE

Empress Hotel Management Makes Elaborate Plans For Royal Guest

When Victoria's popular visitor, the Prince of Wales, arrives at the Empress Hotel to-morrow, he will find awaiting his accommodation a suite of a luxuriousness worthy of its Royal occupant. For days past an army of painters, decorators and furnishers has been at work preparing for the coming of His Royal Highness and their finished efforts would awaken envy in the most "house-proud" woman in Victoria.

MAGNIFICENT VIEWS

The suite chosen for the accommodation of the Prince is on the southwest corner of the third floor. From every window a magnificent view is to be obtained. The front overlooks the harbor girt with the Sooke hills in all the glory of their Autumn dress, while the dining-room has a veritable picture window, with a beautiful vista of the gardens of the hotel and the Parliament Buildings.

There are four rooms and two bathrooms in the suite, including sitting-room, dining-room, bedroom and dressing-room. The sitting-room is a symphony in Autumn tints, with a pile carpet of Havana brown of a faint indeterminate leaf pattern, curtains of shot brown and orange silk, and luxurious chairs covered with a beautiful chintz of black background and a pattern of orange and yellow foliage and birds. On the walls of cream tint are a few fine reproductions of Reynolds and Gainsborough, while a glowing fire in the ivory-tiled fireplace and a profusion of bronze and yellow chrysanthemums will give the final touch of cosy welcome.

The dining-room is furnished in a suite of the Tudor period with carpet of soft leaf-green. On the cream-tinted walls are two very fine old English sporting prints, while a vase of the Ming dynasty gives a further note of color. The chintz curtains are of deepest cream with a bold pattern of foliage and fruit. Lamp and electrolier shades throughout the suite tone with the various color schemes.

ROYAL PURPLE

In the beautifully appointed bedroom, dressing-room and bathrooms, velvet pile carpet of Royal purple, unpatterned, gives effective contrast to the French grey walls and ivory paint of the fireplaces and wall trim. The bedroom curtains and chair coverings are of a French grey chintz with a striking pattern of dahlias and other Autumn flowers and gay parrots. The suite is of mahogany, similar to that in the dressing-room, in which room a lovely chintz of deep cream and ribbon effect lends an effective note of contrast to the purple and grey of carpet and walls.

All of the curtains and upholstery represent the handiwork of the hotel staff and meticulous care has been given to the tiniest detail.

SPECIAL CHINA

The Prince and his suite will use the beautiful twenty-four-piece China service with the Crown design, which is reserved specially for Royalty.

Knowing that His Royal Highness is an admirer of modern dance tunes, Mr. Wilson, the manager, has secured a fine gramaphone from a local firm, with a number of "jazz" records.

"JAZZ" FOR PRINCE

Known as the finest musicians on the continent in their own sphere, members of the Canary Cottage Orchestra of New York, will arrive in Victoria and will remain at the Empress Hotel during the visit of the Prince of Wales in this city.

After creating a furore in New York the orchestra, including six players, has been in Canada for over a year, playing at the C.P.R. Royal Alexandra Hotel, Winnipeg, for a year, and for the past two months at the Hotel Vancouver.

Jazz is the specialty of this orchestra which is renowned for its inimitable expression, and the repertoire is composed of the very latest syncopated dance hits.

W.C.T.U. DISCUSSES GAME OF MAH JONG

Ontario Women Defeat Motion to Ban Game as "Demoralizing"

St. Catharines, Ont., Oct. 4.—All members of the Ontario Women's Christian Temperance Union are called upon to protest to their local municipal council against the "dance hall evils" in a resolution which was before the annual convention of that body in session here. The resolution has been referred to the provincial executive.

On the testimony of missionaries that the game of mah jong was demoralizing, a resolution was submitted urging members of the organization to refrain from playing the game and use their influence with others to this end. The resolution was defeated.

Resolutions passed included one calling for consolidation against the liquor traffic and to make the objective of the union "a dry Canada." Another resolution urged upon the Board of Education of Ontario to set aside one day a year as temperance day for the children in the schools.

Kumtuks Club—The monthly business meeting of the Kumtuks Club will be held at the Alexandra Club, 419 Pemberton Building, on Monday evening at 8 o'clock, when all members are urged to attend.

MISS BRETHOUR WED AT SIDNEY FRIDAY

Popular Girl Becomes Bride of Redvers E. Smith at Pretty Ceremony

Sidney, Oct. 4.—A quiet but very pretty wedding took place on Friday morning at 10.30 o'clock at the St. Andrew's Church, Sidney, when the principals being Redvers Endicott Smith, younger son of the late Mr. Bedford H. Smith and Mrs. Smith, and Bessie Vivian, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Brethour, East Road. The bridegroom's father was for many years collector of customs at Nanaimo. The ceremony was performed by the rector, Rev. T. M. Hughes.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked sweetly pretty in a log-cabin Canton crepe dress with a brown hat trimmed with ostrich feathers to match, and a string of pearls round her neck. She carried a white prayer book.

The bridegroom has just returned from a voyage to Australia on the sailing ship S. F. Tolmie.

The church had been very prettily decorated with creeper traveler's joy and Autumn foliage by the bride's sisters, Mrs. J. J. White and Mrs. L. Wilson. Mrs. McKenzie was at the organ and played Lohengrin's bridal chorus as the bride entered and Mendelssohn's wedding march as the bridal couple left the church. Mrs. McKenzie's little girl, Aileen, looked sweet in pale yellow organdie with lace hat and carrying a basket of rose leaves tied with orange tulle, walking down the aisle scattering rose leaves in the path of the bridal couple. The bride's mother was handsome in black silk with a corsage bouquet of heliotrope.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, only relations and old-time friends being present. The house was decorated with Autumn leaves and flowers. About thirty sat down to the wedding breakfast, the table being decorated with pink sweet peas and clematis paniculata, with the large wedding cake in the centre.

For traveling the bride wore a brown coat trimmed with fur. The bridegroom's present to the bride was a gold wrist watch, the bride's present to the bridegroom a platinum watch chain. The wedding presents were numerous and costly.

The happy couple left to catch the afternoon boat for Vancouver, from where they will go to Portland and the Sound cities.

'VARSITY PLAYERS PLEASE DANCERS

Big Crowd at J.B.A.A. Dance Last Night; University of Washington Orchestra

Adding further to their laurels as popular hosts, the members of the James Bay Athletic Association entertained a crowd numbering over 400 at their opening dance of the season last evening. The Empress Hotel was again the rendezvous and the spacious ballroom presented an animated scene throughout the evening.

The students' orchestra of the University of Washington under the direction of Graham French provided the dance music including a number of the newest features, the spontaneous applause of the dancers showing their appreciation of this aggregation of "jazz" performers.

The committee in charge of the affair received many congratulations on the success of the affair which will be the forerunner of many similar social gatherings during the Winter.

SOCIAL SERVICE BROAD IN SCOPE

Local League Prepares For Big Conference Here on October 13 and 14

The quarterly meeting of the Social Service League was held in the Arcade Block on Friday, Dean Quainton presiding. Rev. Father Scheelen and Mrs. Hescott were unanimously chosen to fill two vacancies on the board of directors. Special mention was made of the coming Social Welfare Congress on October 13 and 14, during which afternoon and evening meetings will be held in the First Presbyterian Church. Distinguished speakers give addresses on most interesting subjects and these the public should not fail to hear.

To conserve and promote normal family life has been the object of the Social Service League from the beginning. This is done (a) By helping families and individuals to overcome their difficulties and find opportunities for development. (b) By emphasizing health, education, industry, recreation and character as essential elements. (c) By encouraging thrift, initiative and responsibility within the family group. In the 125 familes which have been visited by the social service worker during the last six months, the following have been the types of problems receiving treatment: Illness, unemployment, dependent children, mental, desertion, misguided girls, begging, old age, drugs, low wages, intemperance, non-support, tuberculosis, delinquency, domestic incompetency, domestic infelicity, imprisonment and unemployable.

Families requiring material relief are reported every month. Some need help in managing their household affairs, others need suitable employment, medical advice, legal aid o simply encouragement and friendship. These problems do not become untangled in a few days or weeks, but rather intensive work for months and even years.

A family or individual is reported or come themselves. First a careful inquiry is made into the causes of the trouble, relief, if necessary, is secured from relatives or other friends, difficulties are analyzed and solved, suitable employment is found, church ties are strengthened, court action instituted, medical or hospital cure obtained, admittance to institutions secured, children supervised. Always is borne in mind to do that which will help to work out a constructive plan, and raise them to or above the standard at which they lived when at their best.

Dance at Lake Hill—Lake Hill Community Centre held their second dance of the season on Wednesday, October 1, in the Community Hall. There was a good attendance and dancing was much enjoyed, Pitts's orchestra supplying the latest dance hits in their usual pleasing style. Refreshments were served by the committee. The next dance will be held on October 15.

LIGHT SUFFICIENT FOR CITY USED MAKING PICTURE

Sufficient light was on tap at Universal City during the filming of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," the Universal production now playing at the Columbia Theatre, to illuminate a city of over 100,000, and the current consumed during the production would supply an average small city for a year. Ten huge generator plants mounted on trucks were constantly employed on the grounds. A corps of 175 electricians manned those and the other equipment used in illumination the vast areas in which the scenes were laid.

Difficulty was experienced for a time by Director Wallace Worsley and his chief cameraman, Robert Nehard, in keeping in touch with his electricians and other aides until a loud speaking device, which carried his voice a quarter of a mile in all directions, was installed.

TEAMWORK IN FAMILY SHOWN IN "PEG O' MY HEART"

Teamwork seems to be the wachword in the Manners household. J Hartley Manners, noted playwright who wrote the stage play "Peg O' My Heart," for Laurette Taylor, his wife, and who assisted in the filming of the production when produced by Metro, with Miss Taylor as the star, has again collaborated with Miss Taylor in the filming of his stage play "Happiness," written especially for Miss Taylor, by adapting and writing the continuity of the screen version, which is now showing at the Playhouse Theatre. Incidentally King Vidor, who directed the stage star in the screen version of "Peg," wielded the megaphone on the Metro lot for the filming of "Happiness."

SEEKS TO SHOW WHY FAT MEN ARE GOOD NATURED

A great many persons have attempted to give satisfactory answers to the question: "Why are fat men good natured?" but it remains for Walter Hiers, the corpulent comedy character starring Paramount pictures, to find an entirely original solution.

One famous fat man asserted that "A fat man is good natured because, in the first place, he can't run, and, in the second place, he can't fight."

But, according to Hiers—"I believe that fat men are goodnatured because the world has got them bluffed. They have a feeling of disavantage toward the remainder of mankind, and that remainder, having discovered such feeling, utilize it to the limit.

"What is funnier than a fat man who is very, very angry? Nothing, perhaps than a fat man who is very, very, merry. Now, fat men are nobody's fools; they realized many thousands of years ago that everything they did merely furnished amusement for others—so they quieted down and have been enjoying life ever since."

"Fair Week," a new Paramount picture, starring Walter Hiers, opens a day's run at the Columbia Theatre to-day. It's packed with laughs—the funniest thing you've seen in months with Constance Wilson, Carmen Phillips and others in the supporting cast.

"FEET OF CLAY" DE MILLE FILM AT DOMINION

"Feet of Clay," Cecil B. De Mille's latest production for Paramount, which features Rod La Rocque, Vera Reynold, Victor Varconi, Ricardo Cortez, Julia Faye, Theodore Kosloff and Robert Edeson at the Dominion Theatre. The story is an adaptation of the immensely popular magazine serial by that name by Margaretta Tuttle. Beulah Marie Dix and Bertram Millhauser wrote the screen play.

Traveling in its locale between a brilliant Winter resort, a poor Harlem flat and a gorgeous eye-filling home of wealth, "Feet of Clay" is one of the most entertaining productions DeMille has ever offered the picture public.

The story starts with a yachting party at Catalina Island. All sorts of beach noveities are worked into a series of colorful scenes which in costume combine bathing suits on lovely girls with the latest Summer creations of the modiste and the tailor. The eye-filling piece de resistance is a race between twenty girls in jockey bathing suits on surfboards behind fast speedboats.

Capping the beach scenes is a luxurious sequence aboard the world's largest yacht. It is amid the spacious comfort of this three-hundred-foot pleasure craft that dramatic scenes occur, following a water series where La Rocque's foot is mangled in a fight with a shark.

In the story Julia Faye, wealthy half-sister of the penniless Vera Reynolds, has a "society cat" part of the sort which gained her such reputation in "Saturday Night," "Triumph and other pictures. She, her husband, Robert Edeson, and Ricardo Cortez, wealthy and in love with Vera Reynolds, form interlocking cogs in a plot which leads to dramatic consequences when La Rocque's foot makes it necessary for his new wife to support her husband. Misunderstanding is bred by the situation, which DeMille solves in a unique manner.

TOM MIX TO SHOW AT CAPITOL IN WILLIAM FOX FILM

"Slang is an awful thing—contagious as chicken-pox, but the effects are more lasting." It was Tom Mix talking and his attitude surprised his listener, the owner of an orange grove.

"Why are you so concerned over it? I didn't know you were a purist."

"Language didn't bother me much until recently, when my little girl, Tomasina, began to talk," replied Mix. "She learns rapidly and slang seems easier to her than the regulation words. Early last evening when I came home she was still sitting in her chair, looking as sleepy as an Ostermoor ad. I asked her why she wasn't in bed and she answered that 'mummy said she could stay up to see the crazy bird.' I couldn't understand the idea, so I asked my wife. She explained that the youngster pleaded to see the cuckoo when the clock struck six.

"Then I went to my daughter again and asked her why she called the cuckoo a crazy bird. She answered, 'mummy says nice people don't say cuckoo; they say crazy."

Tom Mix will be seen at the Capitol Theatre for six days starting Monday, in the William Fox special production, "The Last of the Duanes," a story by Zane Grey.

"ISLE OF SPICE" WILL BE COMEDY ON ROYAL BOARDS

Few shows give the opportunity for combined beauty and humor that is contained in "The Isle of Spice" which is to be Reginald Hincks' next production at the Royal Theatre. Musical comedies are undoubtedly the most generally popular type of theatrical entertainment, and in this particular show the fun runs fast and furious intermingled with some of the most delightful music that one could wish to hear. Great care has been given to the casting of the parts and with the introduction of one or two up to the minute numbers the play has been made practically perfect. "The Isle of Spice" will play for a week commencing on October 13, with a matinee at 2.30 p.m. on Saturday.

MEN AND HORSES

How closely related is man to the more intelligent of the animals is seen in many of the ailments to which both are prone and the remedies to which they answer.

Doctors and veterinarians are oftentimes surprised to learn of the similarity of their methods of handling the ailments of man and beast.

Sprains, burns, scalds, scratches and many other minor injuries, many everyday ailments, too in men and animals take the same course, and both answer immediately to the same treatment—Absorbine Jr.

Absorbine was first discovered by a very close student of the horse, W. F. Young, and by him, devoted to its cause. Its very exceptional benefits, however, were promptly seized upon for the human race and, in a milder form, the preparation is sold all over the continent today as Absorbine Jr. It is used for men, women and children everywhere as a positive germicide—a germ killer—and a prompt and certain healer of all hurts. It is useful not only for all the purposes served by ordinary liniments and embrocations, but as a mouth-wash and for anything else where a germicide is needed. Don't wait until you need it. Get it in the house today. $1.25 at your druggist's.

FERRY WILL OPEN IMMENSE FIELD FOR MOTOR TRAVEL

Mill Bay Connection, Besides Being An Attractive Water Trip, Joins the Chief Highways of the Island Together and Draws a Cordon of Fine Roads About Victoria

The latest development of resources which will be all-important in impressing tourists to this part of the world favorably, is the Mill Bay ferry, which will ply regularly all through the year, and which the owners believe will be a very popular means of conveyance. The ferry boat, the Cascade, operated by the Cascade Freighting and Towing Company, will run from Brentwood across the Brentwood Arm and to Mill Bay, on the Malahat Drive, and starts work immediately. In this way the two greatest scenic drives of the Island are linked together and a tourist need not cover the same road twice in order to see Victoria and its hinterland.

The West Saanich and East Saanich roads have for a long time been popular routes of travel. The Malahat is famous. Now there is connection between the Saanich roads and the route on the other side of the water. And the connection is a pleasing one. What could a tourist want better than a pleasant break in the monotony of driving than a short excursion upon the water? That is what the Cascade ferry boat will offer.

ATTRACTIVE WATER TRIP

The trip across the Saanich Arm is one of profound beauty. Bordered by heavily wooded slopes on all sides, sheer cliffs and rugged scenery, this sheet of water is one of the most beautiful about the Island. It has long been a haunt of fishermen and campers and will be remembered by those who travel over it in the years to come by way of the Mill Bay ferry.

The docking facilities for this ferry are ideal. There are floating jetties, just completed, which rise and fall on the tide, and which are always at the right level for the landing of automobiles. There is no need for the cautious driver to worry about a landing. It is as easy to get on as it is to get off. Beautiful roads run in every direction. The Malahat runs North and South. The East and West Saanich roads run all over the most attractive and choicest portions of the Saanich peninsula. There is everything to encourage a tremendous increase of motor travel there and the traveling public is sure to make the most of it.

SHOULD BRING THOUSANDS

When E. G. McMicken, passenger traffic manager for the Pacific Steamship Company, whose headquarters are in Seattle, was here a few days ago, he stated that the drives which Vancouver Island offered in the neighborhood of Victoria were largely responsible for the greater influx of tourists which came here yearly. Mr. McMicken state that owing to splendid advertising which the Island got through the many tourists who had already come here, that it was inevitable that the place should gain a reputation second to none. The beauty of the place alone would bring thousands. Then there was the climate to be considered. Ideal weather and spots for camping kept many of the visitors out-of-doors. And after all, he said, this was the best way to travel and see a country.

"Some day I'm going to take in every bit of Vancouver Island I can reach by motor car," said Mr. McMicken. He has already seen a great part of it, but there is so much still to be seen that he feels he must come back.

There are probably others who feel as he does. What they say about Vancouver Island is the finest publicity which could be gained, and the additional attraction which cames with the new ferry boat, which begins operations at once, will mean a great deal for Victoria particularly, and the Island as a whole

BRITISH COLUMBIA SALMON PACK WELL OVER 1923 FIGURE

Alaska's Total Although Large, Less Than Last Year

The total pack of canned salmon in 1924 is estimated at 6,430,309 cases by The Pacific Fisherman, in an elaborate and detailed review of canning operations. Of the season's total the pack of British Columbia was 1,015,309 cases, as against 626,266 cases in 1923, made up of: Sockeyes, 351,613 cases; springs, 20,418 cases; bluebacks, forty-three cases; steelheads, 742 cases; cohoes, 28,291 cases; pinks, 533,028 cases, and chums, 81,174 cases.

The Alaska production approximates closely that of last year, the features being the shortage of reds and a heavy pink pack in Central Alaska. The absence of any real pink run on Puget Sound leaves the total American pack considerably short of 1923. Production in South-eastern Alaska was better than antcipated, while that in Central Alaska was far above all previous records, due to the short pack last year. The Columbia River spring pack was somewhat below that of 1923 and the probable shortage of over 500,000 cases on Puget Sound represents the difference of the two seasons. The shortage of reds appears to be over 40,000 cases under last year. Pinks for the entire Coast will be short by a somewhat similar figure.

ALASKA TURNED OUT 5,048,000 CASES

The Behring Sea canneries, including all Western Alaska, packed approximately: Kings, 12,000 cases; reds, 812,000 cases; medium reds, 10,000 cases; pinks, 40,000 cases; chums, 20,000 cases; a total of 894,000 cases.

The total for Central Alaska is 1,604,000 cases, made up of Chignik and westward, seven canneries operating, 536,000 cases; Kodiak, Afognak Island, nine canneries operating, 373,000 cases; Cook Inlet area, seven canneries operating, 130,000 cases; Copper River-Prince William Island, thirteen canneries operating, 565,000 cases.

Southeastern Alaska turned out 2,550,000 cases. Canneries north of the fifty-seventh parallel, eighteen in number, packed 700,000 cases, and thirty-four south of that line put up 1,540,000 cases. The West Coast, Wales Island section, with twelve canneries added, 310,000 cases.

Ten canneries on Puget Sound packed 100,000 cases and seventeen canneries on the Columbia River turned out 267,000 full cases.

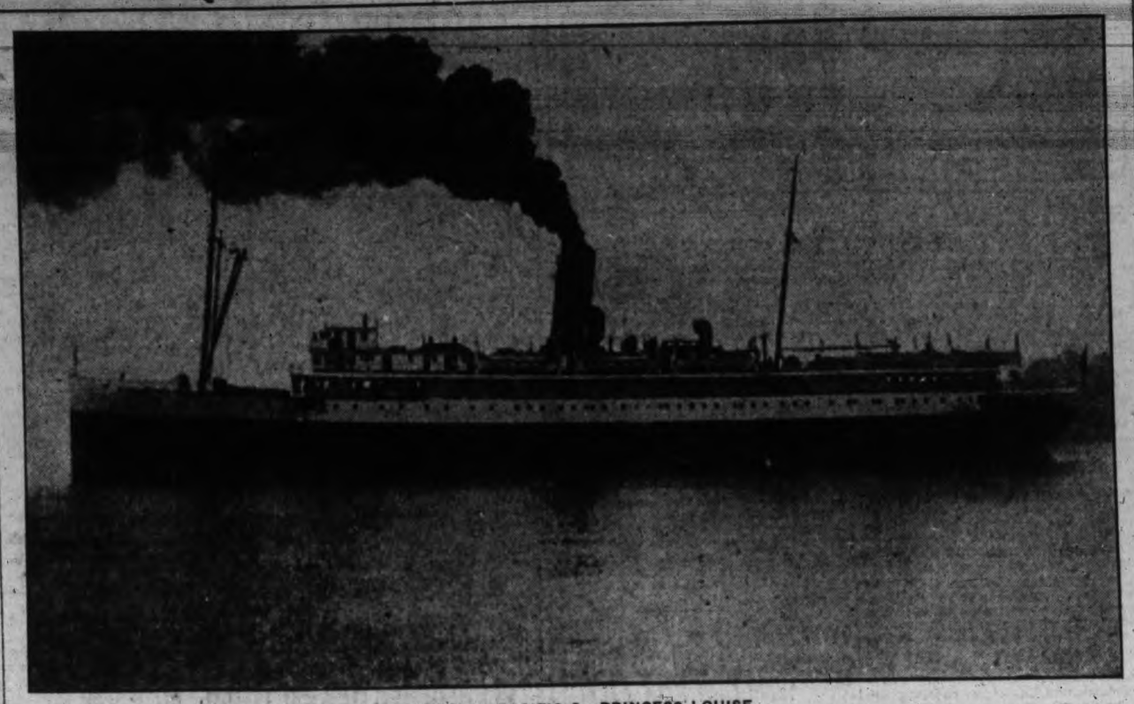
Owls Saved From Grave in Ocean

Seattle, Oct. 4.—When the freighter Admiral Peary docked here, two land owls, who were picked up at sea after they dropped on the deck limp with exhaustion, were in possession of Capt. O. H. Hansen. The owls were picked up in a dense fog several score of miles off shore from Point Arena. They are to be presented to Golden Gate Park when the ship reaches San Francisco. They have been chirstened "Port" and "Starboard."

WHEAT CHARTER

San Francisco, Oct. 4.—The steamship Erviken has been chartered for wheat, North Pacific to the United Kingdom and continent, 40s, October loading.

QUEEN OF COAST SHIPS BRINGING PRINCE HERE



CANADIAN PACIFIC Ss. PRINCESS LOUISE

which has been ordered to bring His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and his party from Vancouver to Victoria, and which will probably leave for this port to-morrow morning at an early hour. The Princess Louise is expected here some time before noon, but there is no definite information as to when she will leave Vancouver.

TOO SWEEPING

The village blacksmith had lingered too long in the Drovers' Arms. Rising unsteadily to his feet, he said, thickly: "Oi can lick any mon in this village."

Nobody took up the challenge and the smith continued: "Oi can lick any mon in the hull county of Warwickshire."

The words were hardly uttered before a hefty man from Birmingham gave the boaster a thrust that sent him sprawling on the floor.

As he picked himself up, the smith, with a rare sense of humor, turned to the company and said: "Gentlemen, Oi be ready to acknowledge that Oi covered too much territory."

The time used is Pacific standard, for the 120th Meridian west. It is counted from 0 to 24 hours, from midnight to midnight. The figures for height serve to distinguish high water from low water. Where blanks occur in the table, the tide rises or falls continuously during two successive tidal periods without turning.

Capt. LeMarquand Back From Seattle Says Catches Have Been Poor All Over Pacific Coast; Alaskan Station Shows Fair Record; Fewer Whales in Pacific Waters

The third whaler from Kyuquot arrived in this port to-day from the West Coast whaling station of the Consolidated Whaling Corporation, it was announced by Captain G. LeMarquand this morning, who has just returned from Seattle, where he spent several days on business. "The remainder of the whaling fleet will be back in port either to-morrow or Monday," said Captain LeMarquand.

"The steamer Gray is up North at present," Captain LeMarquand continued, "and is bringing the remainder of the season's oil from our stations. She will, I expect, have about 500 or 600 drums of oil aboard. The greater part of this will be sperm oil. This is a fairly good cargo, but there are all too few of them," Captain LeMarquand said sadly. The ship is expected here on October 11 or 12.

The disappointment of a poor season, when a record catch was expected, still rankles in the hearts of the whalers who have returned to Victoria. Captain LeMarquand is deeply concerned over the poor catch when earlier in the year he was so hopeful of a splendid season.

GREEN HERE

It was the Green, skippered by Captain John Christian which came into port this morning. She is the third boat from Kyuquot. There are five more ships to come to port and all are expected in the course of the next two days, it was stated to-day.

The Bay City whaling station, on the Washington Northwest, closed down and ceased operations over a week ago. The season was unusually poor, the interests in the station report. The only station which can report a fair catch is that at Akutan, Alaska, which brought in a total of 281 whales during the Summer and Spring months.

"But even the Akutan catch is nothing much compared with her old-time hauls," Captain LeMarquand said to-day. "In 1918 or 1919 they used to bring out a hundred whales for each of the four boats at the station. Their total was always well over 400. Now it is less than 300. Times have changed," the captain added.

Captain LeMarquand returned today from Seattle where he has been on a visit of business, and in conversation with other authorities on the whaling situation on this Coast learned that conditions were equally bad elsewhere, as they were on Vancouver Island. The falling off of catches throughout the Pacific whaling districts seems to forbode evil days. The weather has been largely responsible for the poor catches. It is reported that whales are disappearing from Pacific waters.

SEATTLE SHIPPING

Seattle, Oct. 4—After five months of extensive operations in Alaskan waters, during which a number of dangerous pinnacle rocks and other dangers to navigation were chartered or obliterated, the United States coast and geodetic survey steamers Pioneer and Discoverer arrived here yesterday and are to be retired shortly to Winter quarters.

The steamship President Jackson shifted from here yesterday to the Todd Drydocks, where the vessel is to be overhauled and repainted.

Lack of cargo space prevented the loading here of several large freight consignments on the steamship Jacob Luckenbach when she sailed last night for Gulf of Mexico ports via San Francisco.

Withdrawn from service to South-western Alaska during the Winter, the Pacific Steamship Company's liner Admiral Evans departed yesterday for Portland, Ore., where she is to ply in the coastwise passenger and freight traffic between that port and California points.

J. J. McGowan, general agent here for the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company, yesterday announced the appointment of T. G. Newgord, formerly in the passenger traffic business in Minneapolis, Chicago and San Francisco, as a member of the local staff of the company.

ARIZONA MARU IS DUE NEXT TUESDAY

Has Freight and Passengers For Victoria; Making Fast Trip

The Arizona Maru is expected here, according to a wireless message from the vessel, on Tuesday of next week. She has about sixty tons of general cargo for Victoria, four first-class passengers, seventeen steerage and a large consignment of mail. There are eight bags of mail for the seroplane service between here and Seattle.

The Arizona is making excellent time across the Pacific for although she left a day late she will arrive on her scheduled time, the offices of the local agents announced to-day. The Arizona, it is understood, has an exceptionally large cargo for the Pacific coast ports.

Bringing in the Yuletide log was a feature of the Christmas festivities a number of years ago, but the people of those days hadn't the same opportunity of welcoming visitors from across the seas as your friends in the Old Country have now. In connection with the Christmas sailings to Europe as advertised, the Canadian National Railways are operating special trains running on fast schedule to the ship's side. Special cars from the coast to be consolidated in these special trains at Winnipeg. Representatives of the company will travel on these "specials" to see that every need of the passengers is met. Information, reservations, etc., from City Ticket Office, 911 Government Street, telephone 1242.

PROMINENT FIGURE OF ORIENT COMING

Will Pass Through Victoria on Way to Hongkong Shortly

Quebec, Oct. 4.—Completing a fast voyage from Hamburg, Southampton and Cherbourg, during which perfect weather was enjoyed, the Canadian Pacific steamship Empress of France docked here last evening with many notables among its cabin passengers. Outstanding among these were Sir Paul Chater, C.M.G., J.P., a member of the executive council of Hongkong, China, and one of that city's most prominent residents, accompanied by Lady Chater and a party of friends from the Orient. Included among the latter were the Hon. Mr. McMosser, Colonial treasurer of the Colony of Hongkong, K. O. Burke of Shanghai and A. J. Cartaill, also of Shanghai, and who on this voyage completed his fiftieth trip across the Atlantic by the Canadian Pacific service. When Mr. Cartaill returns home across the Pacific he will have traversed the ocean sixty-six times. The party had a car to themselves on the special Canadian Pacific train, which left Quebec with a large number of the cabin passengers this evening. Other notable passengers on the Empress included John Lane, a well-known publisher, who is accompanied by Mrs. Lane, a novelist of international reputation. Sir Evan Spicer and Sir Newton Moore, K.C.M.G., both of London, England.

WHAT WORRIED HIM

An old salt was watching a crowd of youngsters playing perilously near the edge of the pier. Suddenly he proceeded to thrash one of them.

A passer-by stopped and questioned the old man.

"Well," said the man, as he ceased his hold on the boy's collar, "'tain't as if I care a hang whether they fall in or whether they don't, but it's the darned uncertainty I can't stand."

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, throat tickle, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get 16 ounces—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

FAREWELL LECTURE

Chamber of Commerce Auditorium, Tuesday Oct. 7, 8 p.m.

I want to publicly thank the citizens of Victoria for their patronage and at the same time tell those whom we have not yet had the pleasure of meeting, that there is a way of preventing disease, preventing in turn loss of time and loss of money, through illness.

My Winter series of health lectures begin in Vancouver the first of November and for this reason I will be unable after this date to longer give my personal attention to the Victoria office.

Our system has been introduced here, however, and you have many proofs of its efficiency by the large number of citizens benefited. Those requiring our services will find Dr. J. Ross Higginbotham thoroughly conversant with and efficient in the application of my system, and for this reason he will be left in charge of the Victoria office after November first.

If you desire to know more about disease causation and prevention than you have gleaned from our advertising HEAR MY ILLUSTRATED LECTURE.

BRING YOUR FRIENDS AND YOUR QUESTIONS

A. McKAY JORDAN, Energician,
1009 Cook St., Victoria, B.C.

What Constance Errol and a press representative discovered after four weeks continuous investigation of the Jordan system in the Vancouver office, and published in the magazine section of The Sunday Sun October 1, 1922.

CONSTANCE ERROL

So much interest was aroused by an article which I wrote recently describing the success of Dr. Jordan in treating advanced cases of tuberculosis; and so many inquiries poured in upon me from all parts of the country, that I was forced to the conclusion that the only way to satisfy in any measure public curiosity and interest, was to apply to Dr. Jordan himself for a clear exposition of his theories and their application to the eradication of disease.

Some of the inquiries plainly showed scepticism regarding the possibility of effecting the cure of diseases, which if not pronounced incurable by medical authorities, are yet considered by them to be beyond the reach of medicine. These doubters cannot be blamed for their distrust. I confess that when on the suggestion of one of Vancouver's best known women I undertook to investigate the claims of Dr. Jordan regarding his discovery, I approached the subject with more than a little scepticism, and it was only when I had seen case after case where the patients were literally snatched from the grave, after a long course of treatment by orthodox medical methods, that I was compelled to believe that Dr. Jordan had in reality discovered a principle of health hitherto neglected, and a means of applying it with success to diseases hitherto considered incurable.

It is a difficult matter to free the mind of accepted faith. There are still persons in this Twentieth Century, ages after the earth was first circumnavigated, who believe that our sphere is flat, and the discoveries of geologists, backed by incontestible evidence, have failed to convince a very considerable number of people that the Universe was not created by the Deity, in six days, a matter of five or six thousand years ago.

It is to be expected then, that Dr. Jordan's theories will meet with unbelief, and at times with obloquy, even though there are many living proofs of their soundness going about their daily tasks in Vancouver and elsewhere to-day. That these theories are founded on a basic law, must be acknowledged, for the number and diversity of the cases coming under my own notice, are too great to be the outcome of blind chance or happy coincidence. Further, this principle of his was not hit on by accident. It is the result of a lifetime of study and research, of single-minded purpose and bulldog tenacity. It was one-third inspiration and two-thirds perspiration. Though primarily his researches aimed only at the eradication of disease, Dr. Jordan discovered, in the course of his studies, that there is one fundamental law underlying all true science of whatever kind, and that the principle which he applies to healing has a universal significance. Whether one agrees with his findings or no, there are no scientists alive to-day, not excepting Sir Oliver Lodge and the now famous Dr. Abrams of San Francisco, who have been able to produce an argument to dim the brilliance or lessen the magnitude of this science of the cause and eradication of disease.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Owing to shortage on the staff the children's room at the Victoria Public Library will be in future closed at 8 p.m. instead of 9.30 as heretofore.

Miss Bessie Anderson, secretary of the Inland South American Mission Union, will speak on her work to-night at 7.30 at the Reformed Episcopal Church.

An interesting paper on enlarged thyroid will be read at the meeting of the Graduate Nurses' Association, to be held at the Jubilee Hospital on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

Building permits have been issued to E. Kirkbright for an addition at 1413 Edgware Road, and to the Cameron Lumber Company for an office building at 355 Garbally Road.

The publicity campaign on the prairies to be conducted by the Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau will be delayed until the result of the present drive for funds is known.

A beautiful four-point buck weighing 175 pounds dressed was brought down from the Malahat on Wednesday by A. Bertucci, the well-known fisherman of Saanich Arm.

The postponed meeting of the Tolmie Parent Teachers' Association will be held next Wednesday at 3.30 at Tolmie school. The concert which was to have been held October 8 has been postponed to a date to be set.

The monthly meeting of Rockland Park W.C.T.U. will be held at the home of Mrs. F. W. Laing, 1419 Stanley Avenue, on Monday, Oct. 6, at 2.30 p.m. Mrs. Enwright, Dominion Superintendent of Social Hygiene, will address the meeting.

Reimer Remidav, editor of The Swedish Canadian News, Winnipeg, will make a tour of Island points reached by the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway, in the interests of Scandinavian settlers, it was stated at the company's offices this morning.

The Saanich tax sale this year included property valued at $20,377, the council was last night informed. Parcels sold totalled $4,705, and the municipality bought in lands valued at $15,667. A number of parcels have since been sold by the council, subject to redemption in the usual manner.

Two parcels were sold at the city tax sale this morning, the upset price being $381. Some of the lots in the general list have not yet been offered, but there will be a postponement until after the consolidated list is disposed of next week. This must begin Monday, as advertising to that effect has already been issued.

Charged before Magistrate Jay in the city police court to-day with the theft of four bottles, some containing opiates, from a Johnson Street drug store, Frederick Dean pleaded not guilty and was remanded for trial on Monday. The accused, say the police, startled poolroom crowds on Thursday night by a sudden dramatic entry and collapse. He received medical attention and recovered from the effects of his indisposition.

Lake Hill W.I.—Lake Hill W. I. will hold their regular monthly meeting on Tuesday, October 7, at 2 p.m., in the Community Hall, Quadra Street. The Institute will also hold a military five hundred drive on Monday, October 6. Prizes will be awarded and players are asked to be seated at 8.15 p.m. Every Monday evening scores of the players will be kept and prizes donated jointly by Lake Hill W.I. and Lake Hill Community Centre for the highest average scores at the end of the season.

Grass Hockey Club Dance.—The members of the Victoria Grass Hockey Club and their friends have arranged to hold their opening dance on Wednesday, October 22, in the K. of C. Hall, Government Street. The music will be furnished by Ozard's orchestra. The ladies of the club will supply the refreshments for the occasion. This affair, which promises to be a very enjoyable one, will be the first of a series of dances to be held by the club throughout the Winter. Tickets may be obtained from members of the club.

SPENCER DISPLAY AIDS "Y" IN DRIVE

The membership drive of the Y.M.C.A. has received powerful impetus from the interesting display in the Broad Street windows of David Spencer Limited.

Two demonstrations took place yesterday afternoon and were repeated to-day, youthful athletes, directed by Assistant Physical Director A. McKinnon of the Y.M.C.A. staging a series of boxing contests, supported by tumbling and callisthenics.

The display of cups and trophies also proved a feature of interest, many old-timers in the ranks of the Y.M.C.A. stopping to inspect the old group photographs which support the silverware. The associations with the early days in Victoria are recalled by these emblems and souvenirs of contests organized from the headquarters on Broad Street in the old Green Block, many of to-day's prominent businessmen of Victoria being included in the groups of athletic stars of the past.

VETERAN ENGINEER DEAD AT OTTAWA

Ottawa, Ot. 4.—Napoleon Rheaume, formerly consulting engineer for the Canadian Government with the Department of Railways and Canals, died here to-day aged seventy-seven. He was born in Quebec City and entered the Government service with the accession to power of Right Hon. Alexander Mackenzie. He was superannuated four years ago.

Rev. Father Rheaume parish priest of St. Edwards, Winnipeg, was at the bedside of his father when the aged civil engineer died.

Mr. Rheaume was the only survivor of the original party of surveyors who set out in 1872 to map out the first route which it was proposed the C.P.R. should follow through the Rockies, but which is to-day followed by the C.N.R. Under his direction may of the important waterway controls were constructed on the St. Lawrence.

CANNOT CHANGE CIVIC DEBENTURES

Counsel of City and Company Clash on Sterling Bond Issue

Solicitor Advises Withdrawal of Motion to Take Plebiscite

The whole situation with regard to the payment of sterling debentures is now at an impasse at the City Hall, and Mayor Hayward will be unable to recommend a settlement to the City Council on Monday.

The advice of the city counsel, and counsel for the Dominion Securities Corporation is diametrically in opposition on the construction of a vital section of the Municipal Act, entailing cancellation and exchange of debentures. In the light of the legal opinions before him City Solicitor Pringle has written to the Mayor, asking him to request the council to rescind the resolution standing on the city's books. This motion would submit the whole question to a vote of the ratepayers at the ensuing municipal election.

The Mayor stated to The Times this morning that in view of the documents before him he was as yet unable to make a recommendation, but it did seem to him evident that if the ratepayers voted on the matter as it stood, any action they might endorse could not be legally carried into effect. This is the situation as it stands at the present time.

UNEMPLOYED TOLD NOT TO SEEK WORK IN PROVINCE NOW

Harvesters Begin to Drift Westward But Find Little Work Here

Warning to outside workers not to come to British Columbia to look for work was issued to-day by J. D. McNiven, Deputy Minister of Labor. A number of men who were employed during prairie harvest are drifting West now, Mr. McNiven said, but there was nothing in the present labor situation in this Province, he declared, to encourage them to come here.

"Every Winter we have strangers coming to us from the prairie, and have spent their money in traveling from place to place looking for employment," Mr. McNiven said. "We are sorry for them, but naturally the men who have their homes in this Province, and know the local conditions, have the best chance of getting work. I would strongly advise any man not to come as a stranger to British Columbia within the next four or five months, unless he has either enough to maintain himself throughout the Winter or assurance of obtaining employment. Otherwise he is liable to find that his hard-earned money has been swallowed up in traveling expenses, and that there is nothing at the end of it.

"In the last week of August and early September, British Columbia sent 6,000 men to the harvest fields. In the ordinary way they would not be expected back so early as this, and probably there would not be a large number returning until the latter part of this month.

"At Fernie, where some of these men have arrived," said Mr. McNiven, "there has been a coal strike in progress for some time, and hundreds of men out of work, so there are enough people on the ground to take care of all the employment that may be offering. Further West in the interior and on the coast there is no shortage of labor. We have always a number of concerns closing down in the Fall, and though we are hoping that these will be off-set by some of our lumber camps and mills opening up, we are anxious about the prospect of employment when our own men return to us."

TEN MILLION DOLLAR RUM CONSPIRACY

U.S. Prohibition Officers Take British Steamer With $500,000 Cargo

Canada and Great Britain Alleged to be Involved in Gigantic Liquor Plot

New York, Oct. 4.—Prohibition officials claimed to have uncovered a gigantic Anglo-American rum running onspiracy with $10,000,000 involved, when they towed into harbor to-day the twin screw British steamer Frederick B., with its crew of twenty-eight men and two women under armed guard and with $500,000 liquor cargo aboard.

BOUGHT CONTRABAND

Five special government agents, under leadership of William A. Walker of Washington, general field superintendent of the dry forces, made the capture after they had, according to Mr. Walker, dickered for the purchase of 25,000 cases of whisky from the vessels' master, paying $100,000 in currency and cheques for the contraband. Bankers in this country, Great Britain and Canada were concerned in the conspiracy, Walker said.

The Frederick B. of 196 tons, was seized fifteen miles off Monmouth Beach yesterday after an investigation of three months. She was brought into port, under a heavy guard. Coastguard officials who made the seizure under Walker's instructions, said details of the international plot would be made known after the prisoners had been taken before the United States district attorney.

TELEPHONE SERVICE AT COWICHAN LAKE

Improvements Are Being Carried Out; New Circuits Installed

Improvements in the service at Cowichan Lake, which will be of material advantage in telephoning from Victoria to subscribers on the local system there, are reported from local offices of the B. C. Telephone Company.

The company ended its service with the toll connection at Cowichan Lake, the subscribers having a local line connection. Now ciruits and switchboard have been installed, and Mrs. Carr has been appointed toliagent at the lake. She will handle local subscribers' calls, as well as trunk calls outside. There are local lines both sides of the lake, and the camps of the James Logging Company and the Victoria Lumber and Manufacturing Company will be served, as well as other district subscribers.

There passed away in this city yesterday afternoon Joseph L. Jenks, aged sixty-two years, a native of Edwardsville, Ill., U.S.A. He leaves to mourn his loss a sister, now in California, and a cousin, A. Griffith, of this city. The remains are resting at the Thomson Funeral Home, 1625 Quadra Street, pending funeral arrangements which will be announced at a later date.

The funeral of the late Henry Westlake, who passed away at the Royal Jubilee Hospital on Wednesday afternoon, took place from McCall Bros.' Funeral Home on Friday afternoon. A large number of friends attended, showing the esteem in which the deceased was held. Mr. Geo. Bone conducted the service, during which two hymns were sung—"Oh Weep Not for the Dead," and "Short is the Measure of Our Days." The following friends were the pallbearers: Messrs. A. Badcock, E. Bird, J. Coverdale, W. Hamilton, E. Hibberd, and J. Snowbeten. The remains were laid to rest at Ross Bay Cemetery.

There passed away at the Royal Jubilee Hospital on Friday evening, Ann Bolton, aged seventy-three years. She was a native of England, coming here to reside fourteen years ago, and leaves to mourn her loss her husband, W. H. Bolton, of Bay Road, Mt. Tolmie, also one brother, Thos. Haddock, of Victoria. The remains are resting at McCall Bros.' Funeral Home and will be taken to St. Luke's Church, Cedar Hill Crossroads, at 1 o'clock on Monday afternoon, where service will be conducted at 2.30 o'clock. Rev. W. Carroll will officiate, after which the remains will be laid to rest at St. Luke's Cemetery.

The funeral of the late William Limmer, who passed away at his home, 2925 Grosvenor Street, on September 30, took place yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Sands Funeral Chapel. Relatives and numerous friends were in attendance. Rev. M. Bruce officiated and the hymn sung was "Peace, Perfect Peace." The casket was covered with many beautiful flowers. The pallbearers were Messrs. P. R. M. Wallis, Adam Godlene, J. Crossen and F. C. Mawhinney. The remains were laid to rest in Ross Bay Cemetery.

EVENTS TO COME

Sale of work committee of Court Maple Leaf, A.O.F., are meeting on Tuesday afternoon in the Foresters' Hall at 2.30 for the purpose of furthering their plans for the coming bazaar. Refreshments will be served during the afternoon.

BRITISH PARTIES PREPARE FOR ANY EVENTUALITIES

Rumors Rife But no Developments Concerning Political Crisis

London, Oct. 4.—Rumors of every kind are rife concerning a possible political crisis, but nothing definite is developing. Premier MacDonald has gone to Chequers Court for a few days' rest. He will return Monday for a Cabinet Council which, it is expected, will decide on the Government's policy.

Meantime all three parties are busy preparing the party machinery for eventualities and are generally engaged in what is known as manoeuvring for position.

The Statesman which, although not a Government organ, represents Labor's attitude, strongly urges Premier MacDonald against resignation or dissolution, either on the question of the Russian treaty or because of The Workers' Weekly case.

NOT ISSUES

The Workers' Weekly case, it says, is too insignificant an issue, and the Russian treaty is not a good issue on which to fight an election.

"It is perfectly clear," The Statesman adds, "that there is an overwhelming majority, both in Parliament and the country, against subsidizing the Soviet Government out of the pockets of the British taxpayers. Therefore, there is no sense in pressing that policy and Mr. MacDonald would be well-adviseed in declining to submit the Russian treaty to Parliament for ratification and resuming negotiations with the Russian delegates in order to get a more acceptable agreement."

Hornsby Piles Up Splendid Batting Record This Year

Averages Released To-day Show Rogers as One of Best Hitters of All Time

Ruth Leading Hitter in American League, Leading in Homeruns as Well

Chicago, Oct. 4.—Battles are over in the major league pennant year.

The 1924 campaign, while lacking the sensational individual home-run hitting that marked Babe Ruth's performance in 1922 and 1923, as a whole, nevertheless, was a phenomenal season in batting.

Rogers Hornsby, repeating as batting champion of the National League, finished with an average of .424, setting a new mark for hitters. Babe Ruth closed the season with a mark of .378, falling down in his home-run hitting in the closing days of the race. He made forty-six homers, however, the high mark of either league.

Hornsby, if not for a sprained back that put him out of the game for ten days at a time when he was at the top of his form, possibly would have established an inconceivable batting record. Still, the St. Louis star lacked one of sharing with Frisch, of the Giants, the honor of being the league's leading scorer. He crossed the plate 121 times and was two behind Jack Fournier of Brooklyn, in hittin ghomers. Fournier finished with 27. In total base-hitting Hornsby was in a class by himself. Playing in 143 games he made 227 hits for a total of 373 bases. He hit 25 homers, 14 triples and 43 doubles.

In base-stealing honors of the league went to Max Carey of Pittsburg, who had 49, with Cuyler, also of the Pirates, second with 32. Zack Wheat of Brooklyn wound up the season as second best hitter with .375. Young of New York was third with .356, and Cuyler of Pittsburg fourth with .354. Other leading batters: Rousch, Cincinnati, .350; Bressler, Cincinnati, .347; Fournier, Brooklyn, .333; High, Brooklyn, .333; Williams, Philadelphia, .327; Frisch, New York, .327; Bottomley, St. Louis, .326; Gowdy, New York, .325; Kelly, New York, .325.

LOT OF .300 HITTERS

Final unofficial averages for the American League shows more players batting above .300 than there were in 1923. In team batting Detroit forged ahead sufficiently in the final week to tie Cleveland for the honors in team hitting with .298. The conquering Washington club and St. Louis tied for third and fourth places with marks of .293.

Jamieson of Cleviand played second fiddle to Ruth in batting, closing the season with .358, while Falk of Chicago was third among the regulars with .352. Eddie Collins, also of the White Sox, was fourth with .350. Collins was the leading base-stealer with 44.

Ruth's nearest rival in home run hitting was Hauser of Philadelphia, who hit 27 homers. Ruth made 200 hits for the season, but Sam Rice leads the league with 216. Stanley Harris, youthful manager of Washington, led in sacrifice hits with 42. Other leading batters: Bassler, Detroit, .347; Speaker, Cleveland, .346; Heilmann, Detroit, .344; Goslin, Washington, .343; Miller, Philadelphia, .340; Cobb, Detroit, .337; Myatt, Cleveland, .336; Rice, Washington, .335; Boone, Boston, .335.

Cowichan Golfers Will be Here For Match at Macaulay

A team of twelve men from the Cowichan Golf Club will play a return match against the Macaulay Point Golf Club on the latter's links to-morrow. Canadian Ruggers Open Schedule in The East To-day

Toronto, Oct. 4.—The big Rugby season in Ontario and Quebec opens to-day when the inter-provincial league, known as the Big Four, Hamilton Tigers, Toronto Argonauts, Ottawa Senators and Montreal A.A.A. (Winged Wheelers) play their opening games at Ottawa and Montreal. The Argonauts play in Ottawa and the Tigers visit Montreal.

The seniors of the Ontario Rugby Football Union opens in Toronto when the Varsity second team play the newly-organized Balmy Beach Aquatic Club. The third team in that series, the Hamilton Rowing Club, last year's champions, remain idle.

The inter-collegiate league does not start for another week, but two items of the University's triangle will play exhibition games to-day. McGill will measure strength under the American Code with the Dartmouth Students in Hanover, N.S., and the Toronto Varsity squad will take on the Varsity Old Boys' team here.

MAKES WAY BACK TO THE WORLD'S SERIES

ROGER PECKINPAUGH

Two years ago the New York Yankees discarded "Peck" in favor of Everett Scott, who came in a deal with the Boston Red Sox. The deal whereby "Peck" went to Washington caused quite a stir as he is regarded as one of the steadiest and most reliable shortstops in the game to-day. He joined Washington last year and the club finished fourth. The Yankees made the world series. This year, however, Washington wins its place in the world's series and the Yankees are out of it so that "Peck" is all square to date. He will be a big factor in Washington's display against the Giants.

Thinks Pros Will Be Taken Back at Meeting Next Year

S. Malcolmson, of New Westminster, Back From Amateur Meeting

Claims He Did Not Get Support From Other British Columbia Delegates

Vancouver, Oct. 4.—Despite refusal of the A.A.U. of C. to favorably consider the suggested reinstatement of New Westminster Class A professionals as amateurs eligible to take part in sports other than lacrosse, Sydney Malcolmson of New Westminster, the man who carried the burden of the fight from the West, is satisfied that the appeal will be successful not later than next year.

"I am sorry to say," Mr. Malcolmson related on his return here from Winnipeg, "that we did not have the support from British Columbia which we naturally expected in view of the unanimous decision of the B. C. branch to support the appeal.

"Arthur Manson of Victoria was lukewarm; A. E. Tennant, chairman of the National Registration Board, wrote the officials to say that he would like the suggestion to carry, but hardly saw how it could be without violation of the constitution.

"In face of this evidence and the lack of support from B. C.'s other delegate in the pinch, it was extremely difficult for me to convince the delegates that my statement regarding the unanimity of the B. C. branch was true.

HURT B. C.'S CASE

"In spite of these deterrents, however, when the issue went to a vote, the result was ten to seven against, so you can readily see we had support from unexpected quarters. I am affraid we alienated Saskatchewan's support when Mr. Manson spoke strongly against the reinstatement of a player named Wilson, who had played but three minutes as a professional in a hockey game after signing a contract. He refused to play any more and next year would not renew his contract. This man was not reinstated, yet a chap named Campbell, an admitted eastern professional, was.

"Taking everything into consideration, therefore, and analyzing the feelings of Eastern leaders with whom I talked at length after the meeting, I am convinced we can still put the thing over. They have asked me to compile all available data on the issue and the personnel of the applicants, forward it East and they promise to give the matter full consideration.

A GOOD CHAIRMAN

"I would like to say, too, that President Findlay, to my mind, was an ideal chairman. When the registration committee reported to the meeting that the reinstatement applications had been turned down, someone observed: 'Well, that's that; there's nothing more to be said.'

"I at once asked for a vote of the meeting and President Findlay upheld me. The vote, as I say, was 10-7."

The professor was a very absent-minded man, but he looked up as some of his family trooped into his study.

"Well, children, what do you want?" he said.

"We've come to say good night, daddy!" they all shouted.

"Well," said the professor, absent-mindedly, "wait till to-morrow morning. I'm much too busy now."

Dempsey Worries Over His Future In Ring Affairs

Lack of Engagements Makes Champion Feel That He May Get His Soon

Anxious to Fight; Champs Have All Fallen Through Lack of Competition

BY ROBERT EDGREN

Jack Dempsey hasn't had anything to do in the ring for a year because there has been no one for him to fight, except Wills; the promotors and boxing commissions dodged that match. He is in the position Jim Jeffries found himself in years ago, with no opponents who could interest the promoters. Another thing that has deprived Dempsey of ring chances is the high cost of heavyweight championships. Dempsey's last four fights have netted him one million, seventy-five thousand dollars, and according to Jack Kearns his price is going up.

Dempsey got $100,000 for fighting Brennan, $300,000 for Carpentier, $200,000 for Gibbons and $475,000 for Firpo.

Of course, Dempsey didn't get all the money, or even a large part of it. Uncle Sam grabbed about half of it for taxes, after working expenses had been deducted, and there was Jack Kearns' cut as manager. So while Dempsey got some money he didn't get anywhere near a million. His share for all four fights may have been a quarter of that sum. He has made something in theatrical work and pictures, but not the press agented prices, by a long shot.

WANTS TO FIGHT

Dempsey is worrying, and it isn't money that worries him. He isn't crazy over money anyway. But he is worried. He wants to fight.

"I was happier when I was fighting every two weeks and getting small purses than I am fighting once a year for a big purse," Dempsey told me before the Wills-Firpo bout.

"I know that I have only a couple of years more before I begin to drop down a little from my best form if I go on the way I've been going," he said. "I may have only a couple of years more at my best anyway, and I hate to waste those good years. No fighter that ever lived could go along with a year or more between fights and not drop back. I was best when I was fighting my way up to the championship, and I know so much more now that I ought to be much better. I'm not getting enough work in the ring—that's the answer. I train months at a time in the gymnasium and do a lot of boxing. I never get out of condition. But that can't take the place of fighting. A fellow ought to fight every couple of months.

WAS ALL AT SEA

"You know how I was at Shelby," Dempsey went on. "I hadn't been fighting for a couple of years, and the Carpentier fight didn't amount to much. I hadn't had a hard fight since I met Bill Brennan. I did a lot of boxing with sparring partners and told them to fight me, but that's all different. It isn't like being in the ring. I didn't know what shape I really was in until I had gone several rounds with Tom Gibbons. I didn't feel sure of myself and didn't know just how to handle myself. It was a funny feeling. When I was fighting often getting into the ring with some big tough bird was like going out to punch the bag.

"That fifteen rounds with Tom was what I needed to get in shape for the Firpo fight, and it was lucky I had it. I was right at home with Firpo. Now I have been out another year, and I want to get back into the ring. I don't like the stage and I don't like working in the pictures. I'd rather fight any time. There's more in it, too.

"What I want to do is to fight about six times a year for the next two years. I don't care for the big purses. I ought to get more fights for smaller purses. Unless I get a bunch of matches I might as well retire. Anybody who stays out of the ring a year or more at a time is going to retire suddenly some time when he doesn't expect it."

THE PAST PROVES DOPE

Dempsey has it doped out right. Athletes who stay out of competition for long periods of time seldom come back in their best form.

Jim Corbett knocked out John L. Sullivan in 1892, polished off Charlie Mitchell, and became the world's boxing idol. He liked the life so much that he refused to recognize the challenges of Bob Fitzsimmons for years. It was five years later, March 7, 1897, that he fought Fitzsimmons, and his only ring experience in the meantime was a four round bout with a rough sailor, Tom Sharkey, in which he made a poor showing. He trained several months for the Fitzsimmons fight. But Bob, who had been fighting middleweights and heavyweights continually, was in perfect fighting form, while Corbett was merely a clever boxer. Corbett was knocked out in the fourteenth round.

Jim Jeffries, greatest heavyweight of his time, dropped out of the ring six years for lack of opponents. He had nothing at Reno against Johnson, although in his training work he looked able to fight anybody.

Jack Johnson in turn stopped fighting for three or four years. Champion five years, he had only a couple of second rate bouts. He met Willard in Havana in 1915, and was whipped, beaten down gradually without ever having a chance to win, and knocked out in the twenty-sixth round.

WILLARD WENT TO

Willard stayed out of the ring while champion. He lived luxuriously. He boxed one short no-decision bout with Moran, and a couple of years or so later fought Dempsey, who outclassed him and

The huskies in the above picture who were responsible for winning both the Vancouver Island and B.C. water polo titles are as follows: Back row, left to right, Tommy Wellburn, "Bob" Hibberson, Bert Buller and Dave Balnave. Centre row, George Silburn, Percy Pitt, president V.A.S.C.; "Jock" McNeill, captain; Tom Brooke, secretary; and Earl Squire. Front row, Jackie Clyde and Brian Hunning.

For the third time in the five years of its existence the Mrs. E. T. Lee Water Polo Trophy, emblematic of B.C. water polo supremacy, has found a resting place on the already laden shelf of the Victoria A.S.C. Judging by the form displayed by the team in its 6-0 victory over the Vancouver poloists here recently the trophy is likely to rest here for some time provided none of the team heads for other climes in the meantime. Reserves, however, are numerous in the V.A.S.C. ranks. Vancouver supporters were unanimous in declaring the team to be the best aggregation ever seen in B.C. and greatly admired the team work and clean play of the victors.

Splendid Entry List For Ladies' Golf Championship

Forty-four Players Will Tee Off in Qualifying Round on Monday at Uplands

Forty-four of the leading lady golfers in this city will tee off on Monday in the qualifying round of the women's golf championship of Victoria at the Uplands Golf Club. All clubs will have representatives in the tournament, which will undoubtedly produce the keenest play that any similar event has in many years.

The sixteen with the lowest scores in the qualifying round will enter the championship flight and the defeated eight in the first round will drop into the first flight while the remainder will compete for the championship.

Flights are to be formed for all other players.

Mrs. Pocock and Mrs. Todd.
Mrs. Abell and Mrs. Wilding.
Mrs. Gillespie and Mrs. Hutchison.
Mrs. Paterson and Mrs. King.
Miss Pitts and Mrs. Ross.
Miss Kinloch and Mrs. Lennox.
Mrs. Godfrey and Mrs. Burton.
Mrs. Boyd and Miss T. Wilson.
Mrs. Fairbairn and Mrs. Armstrong.
Mrs. Goward and Mrs. Philbrick.
Mrs. Rithet and Mrs. Parry.
Mrs. Carr and Miss McIntosh.
Mrs. Harris and Mrs. Mitchell.
Miss Fowkes and Miss Gordon.
Mrs. Staden and Mrs. Nickson.
Mrs. Hedley and Mrs. Rickaby.
Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Unsworth.
Miss M. Wilson and Mrs. Pierce.
Mrs. Hepburn and Miss M. Fraser.
Mrs. Leeming and Mrs. Sanders.
Miss Bodwell and Mrs. Colbourne.
Mrs. Green and Miss K. Fraser.

School Girls Pass Royal Life Saving Examinations Well

Candidates from St. Margaret's School to the number of twelve presented themselves at the Y.M.C.A. swimming pool this week for the purpose of undergoing examination in the methods taught by the Royal Life Saving Society. The following are the results:

Proficiency certificate—Joan M. Paitson, Yvonne E. Stewart, F. Margaret MacKenzie, Margaret E. Little, Louise G. Pollard, Margaret E. Morrison, Pauline D. McDonald, Jean S. Waldie, Jean Lindsay and Merle G. Rolston.

Honorary instructor's certificate—Miss Vera C. Cussans, Physical director St. Maryaret's School.

Miss Cussans is to be complimented on the very excellent showing made by the girls under her charge. Miss Grace Wellburn and J. D. McNeill acted as examiners for the R.L.S.S.

Bill Smith, a country shopkeeper, went to town to buy some goods. They were sent home before him. When the boxes arrived Mrs. Smith, who was attending to the shop, uttered a scream, seized a hatchet, and began to force off the lid of the largest.

"What's the matter?" asked a bystander.

Faber's Spitters Baffle Cubs and Sox Take Another

Fluke Homerun by Sheely Unnerved Jacobs and Flocks of Runs Followed

Chicago, Oct. 4.—The White Sox made it two straight from their Cub rivals yesterday by winning the third game, 6 to 3. Red Faber, star spitball twirler of the American Leaguers, had his opponents baffled most of the way, and only in the late innings did he become unsteady. The White Sox got the jump on their foe in the sixth frame, after two were out. Collins worked Jacobs for a pass and Sheely drove the ball to right field. It struck the fence and rolled under the stand for a home run.

This unnerved Jacobs, and Falk followed with a hit and Kamm walked. W. Barrett smashed one for two bases and two more runs scored. Two more runs were added to the White Sox total at the expense of Vic Keen. He hit Schalk and walked Hooper and both scored on Collins's triple.

CUBS START RALLY

Grigsby started the rally for the Cubs in the eighth, which netted three runs. He singled and Hollocher, who came from his home in St. Louis to help his mates after being absent most of the season, batted for R. Barrett and walked. Cotter shot a double to centre, sending two runs home and registered [illegible] on Adams's hit to centre.

The Cubs threatened to score again in the ninth, but Hollocher nif into a double play, Collins to Sheely, Collins making a great play.

Attendance 15,101.
Gross receipts $13,940.10.
Commission's share $2,091.01.
Players' share, $7,109.45.
Each club's share, $2,369.82.

Baltimore Blanked In Second Game of Junior Ball Series

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 4.—Helpless before the sweeping southpaw curves of Miles Merritt of St. Paul, the Baltimore Internationals were whitewashed in the second game of the "little world series" here yesterday by a score of 6 to 0. Only three Orioles hit safely and after the first innings when an error and a walk put two men on bases, with one out, the Birds had no real chance to score. This game makes the series stand one-all.

GRAND CIRCUIT RACING

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 4.—Favorites swept the card in the final day's racing of the Fall Grand Circuit meeting. The feature event of the afternoon, the free-for-all trot, produced the best race of the day. Czar Worthy, prohibitive favorite, won the first heat in impressive fashion, but Ethelinda won the second by trotting the second half of the mile in 1.00 and overcoming Czar Worthy's big lead. Cox tried the same tactics with Ethelinda in the third heat but could not reach Czar Worthy.

Russell Onagale won the 2.08 pace in straight heats, not being extended in any heat. The favored Fair May proved the best of the big field which started in the 2.09 trot, while Billy Burke won the 2.13 trot.

TILLICUM FOOTBALLERS

The Tillicum Athletic Club will hold a soccer practice at the Royal Athletic Park at 10.30 a.m. to-morrow. All signed players are requested to attend this workout.

Victoria Man Will Be Third on Tennis Ranking Committee

Vancouver, Oct. 4.—Secretary E. J. M. Cardinall of the Pacific Northwest Tennis Association, received notice this morning that Rev. Wm. Carroll of Victoria had been appointed third member of the ranking committee, the other two being Secretary Lacey Hofius of Seattle and Mr. F. D. Nicholson of Vancouver, as chairman. Once their recommendations are issued they will be forwarded to President H. S. Bray of Portland, who will confer with President Blake of the Seattle club and Mr. Cardinall.

Difficult Job To Rank Net Players On Season's Play

Tilden Comments on Way Tennis Stars Performed During Past Season

Most Confused Problem He Has Ever Faced; Has Ten Men For Five Places

By WILLIAM TILDEN

Too many cooks have a well-known reputation for spoiling the dishwater. Sometimes too many good tennis players spoil the season's records, so ranking becomes almost impossible.

Some time soon, if ever I muster courage, I am going to try to make a first ten of the United States and of the world. This article will be an attempt to point out some slight difficulties that await me.

In the United States during the present season the most notable players have had a somewhat embarrassing year. Howard Kinsey defeats Billy Johnston, but loses to Elliott Binzen and Peck Griffin. Harvey Snodgrass beats Griffin, the Kinseys and others, but loses to Al. Green of Chicago and Washburn. R. N. Williams ii goes down to George Lott. Wallace Johnson beats Frank Hunter and John Hennessey, but is defeated by Fritz Mercur.

ALL TIED UP

The Kinsey Brothers, Griffin and Snodgrass are all tied up in a series of victories and defeats among themselves that only a mind reader and fortune teller could solve. Luke Williams took a fall out of Snodgrass, Alfred Chapin beats Green and Squier in Chicago after they put out Snodgrass and Pat O'ara Wood in the Illinois State. Chapin divides with George Lott and loses to Snodgrass. Carl Fischer beats nobody all year, nor does Washburn until the nationals, when he defeats Bob Kinsey and Snodgrass. Dr. George King almost beats Billy Johnston and Howard Kinsey.

From the world standpoint things are even more sonfused. Vincent Richards beats La Coste, Alonso, Wallace Johnson and Josee to Borota, who in turn is beaten by Washer, Morporgo, O'Hara Wood and Hennessey. La Coste beats Alonso, Cochet, Patterson, but loses to Borotra. R. N. Williams beats Kingscote, but loses to La Coste and George Lott. Washer beats Borotra, but loses to Morporgo. Brookes beats Hunter but loses to Kelicher.

PLENTY OF CONFLICTIONS

O'Hara Wood gains victories over Borotra, O'Komoto and Shimizu, yet is defeated by Alex. Squier and Kirk Ried. Gerald Patterson beats Washburn, Lott, Snodgrass, and loses to Hennessey, Norton and La Coste. Norton beats Patterson and Griffin, but loses to La Coste and Howard Kinsey. So it goes, every player adding complications almost beyond reconciling.

J. O. Anderson of Australia has not played this year. Cochet and Kingscote have not played much. Frankly, I have never seen any season that has me so hopelessly up i the air as to ranking. I can justify placing at least fifteen men in the ten places of honor and since that is impossible, I know after I make my choice I shall decide I am wrong.

The chief element of trouble is caused by Borotra's collapse after his Wimbledon victory and the splendid showing of La Coste and Richards, following their defeats at Wimbledon. Manuel Alonso has been very unlucky in his draw at every big event. His worst bit of luck was to draw me in the first round of the American championship.

The only men I am convinced should be in the top of the world's first ten are Johnston, Richards, Borotra, La Coste, H. Kinsey, Patterson, O'Hara Wood, Alonso, Cochet. Well, well, there I go again—ten names for five places. Take your pick.

Some time soon I am going to make a careful selection with expert criticism. To do so I will place all the names in a hat and draw them. I believe my chances of correct placement are just as good as if I study the problem a few hours and choose. In either case I'm wrong, so why worry?

FURNISHES FUNDS FOR "WET" CANDIDATES

Washington, Oct. 4.—Charging that the French wines' exportation commission is redoubling its efforts in the present political campaign in the United States in seeking to get "wet" candidates elected to office, W. B. Wheeler, counsel for the anti-saloon league, said to-day that this commission has confessed its activities in Canada in an article published in L'Exportateur. In this article Mr. Wheeler says it states that part of its programme includes "furnishing of funds at the right moment."

Governing Forces In Baseball Near Point of Conflict

Commissioner Landis Tells Them to "Keep Their Shirts on"; Trouble Ahead

Washington, Oct. 4.—Factional strife involving baseball's highest officials may grow out of the O'Connell-Dolan bribery deal that has thrown the diamond world into turmoil.

Although the day failed to add fresh sensations to the bribery scandal, or point further suspicion to anyone outside the two Giant players banished from the game, there were strong indications that the governing forces of the game were at the point of sharp conflict.

Culminating factors in this situation last night were the announcement of Ben Johnson, president of the American League, that he would not attend the series because of the suspicion surrounding the Giants, and a statement by Barney Dreyfuss, Pittsburg club owner, which was viewed here as a challenge to the decision of Landis, which placed the guilt for the bribery scheme upon Dolan and O'Connell alone among the Giant players.

OPENING GUNS OF OPPOSITION

Johnson, who reiterated his contention that the series should have been called off, and Dreyfuss apparently have taken the leadership of forces believed to be antagonistic to the regime of Commissioner Landis. Their statements yesterday, following attacks of similar vein on Thursday, are interpreted as the opening guns of a campaign which may shake baseball's whole governing structure.

Landis, whose retort to Johnson and Dreyfuss was that they "keep their shirts on," refused yesterday to comment upon the statements of either official or upon the announced purpose of the Pittsburg owner to come here to-day and demand the re-opening of the Giant investigation.

KEEPING OPEN MIND

The commissioner declared he was keeping an "open mind" on the subject of the scandal, but at the same time he indicated that nothing had developed, that no fresh evidence had been unearthed to alter the decision he made in New York disbarring O'Connell and Dolan, but exonerating Frisch, Young and Kelly, who were declared by O'Connell to be "in" on the deal.

WALKER SUSPENDED

New York, Oct. 4.—Carrying out a threat of suspension to Mickey Walker, world's welterweight champion, if he engaged in a match before meeting Dave Shade, coast welterweight, in a title match, the New York State Athletic Commission yesterday barred the titleholder from further matches in this state, because of his meeting with Bobby Barrett at Philadelphia, on Wednesday night.

The suspension is indefinite and also includes Barrett, his manager, Jimmy Dougherty, and his entire stable of fighters.

NEWS AND NOTES OF THE CHURCHES

COMMUNITY CHURCH TO REOPEN SUNDAY

Variety Theatre Will be Used in New Cause Henceforth

The Community Church will reopen in the building that was formerly the Variety Theatre on Sunday. The minister, E. Howard Durnin, will give a series of evangelistic lectures every night, except Saturday, in the following week.

Mr. Durnin states that "the Community Church aims to combine fundamentalist fervor with modernist exposition and interpretation." When we submit the problems of religion to intellectual analysis, there is a tendency for faith and fervor to recede as knowledge advances. This tendency needs correction. Religion is quite as much a matter of heart as of head," he says.

"These lectures will be both analytic and synthetic, and above all constructive. Science is giving us a new understanding of the fundamental acts of religion. Sin, conversion, salvation and regeneration are persistent facts in human experience. Science has discovered that these are matters of psychology rather than of theology.

"The came idea applies to the social side of religion. Then like Edward Bellamy, Henry George and Walter Rausenbusch have found that religion has a profound economic and sociological signifance," he points out.

"Then comes psychical research and and we find men like F. W. H. Myers and Sir Oliver Lodge pursuing these problems beyond the grave. The upshot of it all is that these legitimate inductive sciences are crowding theology off the map.

THE NEW THEOLOGY

"Inductive science proceeds otherwise. It begins with the obvious facts of experience, taking nothing for granted. By observation, experiment, hypothesis and verifications, it treads the path of certainty toward the discovery of laws and principles. Thus psychology, sociology and psychical research are giving up a "Scientific Theology." But this needs to be saturated with spiritual dynamic and ethical passion," Mr. Durnin states.

The Community Church proposes to combine those two elements and give them both tangible and practical expression in both the personal and the social aspects of religion.

An office is being fitted up in the Community Church for the carrying on of this work seven days a week. Mr. Durnin purposes giving special attention to vocational guidance in the scientific study and practice of spiritual healing for body, mind and spirit.

The particular aims of next week's lectures is to set forth the religious philosophy of the Community Church and make the necessary preliminary preparation for the enrolment of members.

Harvest Home At Centennial Church To-morrow

Both services at Centennial to-morrow will be in celebration of Harvest Home. The church is being beautifully and suggestively decorated with the products of the fields and gardens, visible reminders of bounty.

The sense of gratitude, says Rev. R. W. Hibbert, the pastor of the church, is one of the most necessary qualities in a balanced life and one of the most easily lost. The celebration of Harvest Home is of inestimable value in retaining and stimulating this sense of gratitude.

On this occasion the choir will provide special music, in the morning singing "O Lord, how manifold," and in the evening "O come, let us sing" and "Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem," with the solo part by Miss Mitchell.

STUDY OF THEOSOPHY

W. B. Pease will give part two of his "Introduction to a Study of Theosophy" on Sunday evening at 8 o'clock before the Victoria Theosophical Society in their rooms, 101 Union Bank Building. The meeting is open to the public and discussion is invited.

WILL EXAMINE ARGUMENTS FOR SECOND COMING

Topics at City Temple To-morrow by Rev. Dr. Davies

Referring to his morning subject on the "What If There Were No Christ?" at the City Temple to-morrow, Rev. Dr. Davies says: "The Second Coming of Jesus Christ is a subject which, at the present time, is being pushed in the forefront of the world's thought by revolutionary events issuing from the greatest of wars, and by the equally portentous changes looming up in the industrial, social, and political worlds. Many in their sore perplexity are raising the question whether the startling things now taking place may not presage the speedy coming of Christ to roll back the forces of evil and establish His kingdom. The hope of the second coming of Christ, which events of recent years have intensified, has persisted throughout the Christian centuries. It took its coloring first out of Judaism, out of which Christianity grew. Thousands of people desire a short cut to the millennium, which is quite natural: changes come by revolution as well as evolution. Some expect Christ to come in a revolutionary manner. Others expect that He will come without cataclysm and that He is now here and His royal rule is now going on; no one wields greater power than He and that in the mighty religious, social and political upheavals now going on the "Son of Man is coming in His kingdom."

"There is a great need for dogmatic modesty and for the exercise of tolerance towards those who do not see eye to eye with us. At best we know in part and prophecy in part. We kneed other's help. Controversy about the second coming is hurtful, friendly discussion is helpful. Truth is a torch, the more it is shook the better it shines."

EVENING SUBJECT

In the evening Dr. Davies will speak on "When Is Christ Coming Again?" A negative contemplation he says helps us to see of what real value the Christian religion is. "Many are apt to under-estimate the value of Christianity until they envision its absence and behold in prospect the appalling absence of those blessings and institutions of Christendom which make this world worth living in at all. Even some Christians will say, "If Christ came would he find faith on the earth?" and say it in a manner indicating that there is no such thing as real vital universal faith. I do not think it is right to underestimate in this way the exceeding value of Christianity. There is room for a just appraisal of the work of Christ in the world through his followers and in Christian institutions."

The church officials request that the evening congregation do not gather till seven p.m.

The City Temple Pulpit may be secured at the church services or from the Victoria Book Exchange. The following numbers are now being printed or have been printed in booklet form:—"Shall We Go to California?" "British Columbia Politics." "British Columbia and the Liquor Question." "Vancouver's Underworld." "Modernizing Our Medical Methods."

MUSIC AT ST. COLUMBA

At the morning service W. H. Ruffell will sing "My Shepherd." The evening anthem will be "Sun of My Soul," Turner.

Rev. R. F. Kibler, the pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, corner Princess Avenue and Chambers Street, has returned from the biannual convention of the Pacific Coast conference held at Winlock, Wash., and will occupy the pulpit on Sunday as usual. Sunday is Mission Day at St. Paul's Church and the pastor will preach on the theme at 11 o'clock: "Sharing Christ."

The annual Harvest Thanksgiving Services will be held in Christ Church Cathedral to-morrow. The Very Rev. C. S. Quainton, Dean of Columbia, will preach at both services, his subject at 7 p.m. being "The Beauty of Common Things." Holy Communion will be celebrated at 8 a.m., and after shortened Matins.

The Ladies' Aid Society of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, will hold its October meeting at the home of Mrs. Cherneff, 82 Hampton Road. Each member will report on the amount of work done in preparation for the annual sale.

IF LITERAL WORD REJECTED, WHAT?

Will be Subject of Rev. A. K. McMinn at First Church To-morrow

The evening subject at the First Congregational Church will be: "If Not the Literal Word, What?" This will be a follow up sermon to the one preached by the pastor on Sunday evening last on "The Bible and Literalism." Mr. McMinn undertook to answer the question "Whether we should accept the Bible literally." He declared that the question was not one of yesterday, that it was not raised by "Modernism" so called or by any twentieth century invasion of the church by worldliness. The modern scientific method of literary criticism had presented a new phase of the question and added fresh vigor to controversy, but the question itself goes back almost as far as written documents of religion.

Mr. McMinn described typical scenes of strife in church history which showed that theological controversy usually turned upon this ground of literal interpretation of the Bible and that where the parties were unyielding on that "all-important point" it never failed to lead to prolonged wrangling and endless division. The pastor then experiments with literal method in interpreting the Bible and allowed the people to see for themselves that it only led to endless confusion or lent itself to fanciful and absurd theories and theologies which were neither true to the spirit of Christianity nor the ethics of the Bible.

Mr. McMinn then claimed that the prophets certainly were not literalists that Jesus, judged by the literalist's standards, was a heretic and that He was put to death primarily because He would not adhere to the letter of the Jewish scriptures. Literalism said the pastor, in concluding, is the safeguard of all evils that are in good social standing; it is the most successful and subtle method of misleading sincere and uninformed; it is an effective block of all progress and the bitter enemy of Jesus and the spirit of Christianity now as then. What then is the alternative to literal interpretation?

Mr. McMinn's morning subject, "The First of the Prophets" is the second sermon in a series "The Great Religious Leaders."

GREAT RALLY SERVICE ON SUNDAY

Sunday School Rally at First Presbyterian Church

Arrangements have been completed for the Sunday school rally to be held in the auditorium of the First Presbyterian Church to-morrow commencing at 3.30 p.m. Special decorations hrave been arranged and a programme of exceptional interest has been prepared. Promotions will take place at this service and every department from the cradle roll upwards will participate in this interesting function.

The Sunday school choir will lead the singing and will render a special number during the offering. Mr. Gurney will conduct the choir. Miss Carol Menzies will render a vocal solo and there will be a number of special items which should be of interest to both young and old. The Sunday school will occupy the body of the church and it is hoped that the remainder will be filled to capacity with parents and friends of the school.

On Monday at 8 p.m. the annual Rally Day concert will be held in the church hall. A very fine programme has been arranged for the occasion, and it is fully expected that there will be a large attendance.

Rev. John Campbell, D.D., has accepted an invitation to speak at the First Unitarian Church to-morrow at 11 o'clock.

Times Sunday School Lesson

THE SERMON ON THE MOUNT

Matthew, chapters v to vii.

The Sermon on the Mount is the message of love in relation to the hard realities of our existence. The Beatitudes reverse all the ordinary standards of conduct and find the source of power in qualities which the world despised. Christ calls those blessed whom the world considered miserable. He found the source of power in a temper which the world regarded as weak, and took the crown of victory from the brow of the world's conquerors and placed it on the heads of the persecuted who suffered for righteousness' sake. The only enduring victory is won by those who build up the lives and souls of others rather than by those who crush their brethern by force.

1. The inwardness of the true righteousness is one of the great lessons taught in the Sermon. (Matt. v 21; vi 18).

(a) The only obedience which God values is that of the heart. What we are means more to Him than what we do. The desire to do wrong is itself a violation of God's law. Hatred is an actual violation of the Sixth Commandment. He who wishes to kill his brother and would do it if he were not restrained by fear of the consequences is essentially a murderer. A man once remarked to the writer: "I have been so angry that I have actually killed men in thought." It is out of thoughts like that, deliberately cherished and used to feed the passions of the soul, that real murder springs. The lustful eye and word are a violation of the Seventh Commandment. So in regard to all God's law. It is inward; it seeks character more than conduct; it aims at purifying the springs of life out of which all its issues flow. Our actual condition matters in His sight. The murderer who escapes is held as such guilty under the law of God and must answer not only for his action but for his purpose and for the imaginations of his heart before the bar of everlasting righteousness.

(b) In worship it is the state of the heart that God regards (Matt. vi 1-18). Form and parade are of no value in His sight; they may be hateful if they are used to cloak real sinfulness of soul. (Isaiah i 10-17). (Matthew 23). Men may make a great display of their religion, but God enquires into what they mean. In almsgiving and fasting as well as prayer, God looks to the real intent of the heart and values its expressions by what He sees there.

2. One of our great temptations is to seek life's ends by perishable means. We have only to look around us to see how men are trying to satisfy the soul with earthly gains. When man builds everything on the perishable he loses his life thereby. He pursues the world and its rewards to the exclusion of the spiritual and eternal. He builds up only those powers which deal with earthly things. Not only are the interests of eternity neglected but the qualities of soul that last forever are allowed to atrophy. Jesus deals with this in Matthew vi 19-34. He points out that the things of the world last only for the moment. He also points out that the man who stakes everything on them loses everything. He loses the results of his labor and he also loses himself because he built the edifice of his soul upon a perishable foundation. Hence He calls men to turn away from earthly things and seek first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness. This gives power on earth, for He adds, "All these things shall be added unto you." Character is the greatest force in the world's affairs and character is built up by giving the supreme place to the things of God. But the interests of His Kingdom must be life's chief end; only so are the rewards God promises obtainable.

3. The ends man seeks are ends for himself and not ends for others. Jesus deals with this in Matt. v 38-48 and by inference in the Beatitudes, Matt. v 1-12. That is to say, man emphasizes his own interests as against his brothers. He seeks to further his own ends without regard to the good of others and often by preying on others. One of the great sources of the world's oppression and misery is the determination of the strong to make the weak serve their ends. The result is endless conflict, and also loss to those who seem to succeed as well as to those who suffer by their success. In fact, those who gain by wrong are in the end the greatest losers. Hence Christ calls men to pitch their aims high enough to be inclusive. We must seek the good of all, in which our own is ordinarily included; we must seek the universal good even if it means temporal sacrifice for ourselves. This is the only way to eternal gain. In his own interests man cannot afford to give himself to the selfish. The only principle of life and happiness is to give rather than to get.

This involves the Christian attitude toward wrong; hence Christ's great message of non-resistance to evil. The great New Testament discovery is that wrongs are righted, not by the suffering of the wrong-doer, but by the suffering of the wronged —that is, when the on wronged takes it up for the wrong-doer's sake and bears it with a view to his emancipation. The whole life of Jesus was lived on this principle. He had opposed sin; He would not get out of its way when it marshalled its forces against Him; He suffered the world's hate because of His opposition to their sin and bore the worst it could do in order to save men from it.

I do not know a more striking instance of the convicting power of suffering love than that given by Miss Caroline Macdonald in her book, "A Gentleman in Prison." Miss Macdonald is carrying on a mission of extraordinary effectiveness in the prisons of Japan, and in this book she describes the conversion of a criminal, the sheer wickedness of whose life passes comprehension. He was caught and put on trial for murder. She ministered to him and he appreciated the attention. She gave him a copy of the Gospel of Luke and he read it because he had nothing else to do. His interest deepened as he went on, until he came to Jesus's prayer for His murderers—"Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." He said, "When I read that, my heart was pierced as with a five-inch nail." He knew of a Japanese patriot who had loved his people enough to die for them, and he too was impaled, but in his death-agonies he imprecated fearful curses on those who slew him. But that prayer for the men who were nailing Him to the Cross revealed such irresistible love that the man's whole nature was changed by it. The story of the Cross is, as it has always been, the power of God unto salvation, and it is such because the love that will not let men go is there shown to be unchangeable even by the uttermost hatred that can be brought against it.

All that is distinctive in the Gospel is based on this principle of non-retaliation. God does not deal with us as we deserve. He forgives and restores. Here, then, is Christ's position in this sermon. The law of righteousness fails utterly in the dealings of God with men; they are unable to rise to the standard of righteousness, and, if justice be meted out to them, it means their undoing; in precisely the same way the law of exact righteousness breaks down in the dealings of men with men, and, if we insist on justice being done, human life becomes intolerable and spiritual renewal impossible. To give life and love their opportunity, we must bear one another's mistakes and faults and heal the wounds of the soul

"My trouble began with red blotches and itching and burning on my arms and face, and then eczema broke out with a rash. My face was disfigured and my clothing aggravated the breaking out on my arms. I could not put my hands in water, neither could I do my regular work. At night I lost my rest on account of the irritation.
"The trouble lasted about a month. I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and they helped me and after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment I was completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. Leon Hallock, 104 Atkins St., Bellows Falls, Vt.

SCHOOL ESTABLISHED IN FRANCE FOR INSTRUCTION IN GLIDING—The French Government has established a school for the encouragement of gliding. One of the features is a trial of a new type of glider, which was made to fly up from flat ground with the aid of a rope being pulled on it from either extremity.

HELD AS SLAYER — Rev. Lawrence M. Hight of Ina, Ill., has confessed to the murders of his wife and Wilford Sweetin, a member of his congregation, according to authorities at Mt. Vernon, Ill. The age-old triangle of illicit love is blamed by officials. But the minister contends he poisoned both while they were ill "to end their sufferings."

FED HUSBAND POISON—Mrs. Elsie Sweeten, who has confessed that she poisoned her husband, Wilford, in order that she might marry Rev. Lawrence M. Hight of Ina, Ill., a circuit-rider pastor, who has confessed to administering arsenic to his wife.

WIFE OF A POOR BARON—Baroness Patricia De Grand Court, who is seeking legal separation from her husband, a scion of one of France's oldest families. During the war the baroness gave up a career on the stage in order to do her bit in an army hospital. Following the armistice, they came to America, where, it is understood, the baron has been devoting himself to literary work and to act as press agent for Gloria Swanson. The baroness, in the action filed for separation and alimony, alleges neglect. This her husband denies.

SPURNS LIBERTY — Sadie Champion spent ten months in the county jail in Buffalo, N.Y., because she didn't know where she was born. A newspaper man finally was instrumental in obtaining her release by immigration authorities.

YUKON BISHOP AT SYNOD—Bishop Stringer of the Yukon, who is attending the General Synod of the Church of England at London, Ont.

NOW JUDGE—E. L. Newcombe, Deputy Minister of Justice under seven ministers, who has been appointed a judge of the Supreme Court of Canada.

VICTORIANS WILL GREET PRINCE OF WALES LOYALLY

Official Guest of Five Years Ago Comes on Social Visit This Time

Prince Is Playing Big Part in West's Live Stock Circles

On His 6,000 Sunny Alberta Acres, He is Breeding Best Imported Thoroughbreds

He is Real Dirt Farmer, Keen on Developing Ranch; Mixes Freely With Neighbors

The Prince of Wales became a landowner in Canada in 1919 while he was on his first tour across Canada to the Pacific Coast.

On that trip he was the guest for a few days of George Lane, formerly of Des Moines, Iowa, at Mr. Lane's "Bar U" ranch, forty miles south of Calgary. The Prince became so enthusiastic about the country, just the other side of the foothills of the Rockies, in sight of the inspiring mountain peaks themselves, that he told Mr. Lane he wanted to have a ranch of his own. He picked out the land which is now the site of the famous "E. P. Ranch" and had Mr. Lane make the purchase of it for him.

The "E. P. Ranch" is 6,000 acres in size. It is in the centre of one of the richest grain growing and stock raising countries in North America—"Sunny Alberta!"

As soon as he had made his purchase, the Prince engaged Prof. W. L. Carlyle, one of the best known agriculturists in the West, as his manager. And then when he reached home in England, he sent out from the Old Country some of the highest-grade, pure-blood stock to be found in Britain. Some of the horses that came to Canada as a result were from the royal stud, the cattle were of the King's own, the sheep were the finest; Shropshires from the Duke of Westminster's estate.

The Prince also shipped out and introduce to Western Canada the hardy Dartmoor ponies from the Devon Moors. These ponies are of a type of animal previously unknown to this part of the world.

NOTABLE LIVESTOCK

In an area such as Western Canada, which has for years devoted itself to the elevation of the quality of livestock and has become internationally famous for the superior type of its horses and cattle, importations must be of an outstanding distinctiveness to be worthy of special note. But this the "E. P. Ranch" has effected.

In its brief history, the "E. P. Ranch" has come to play an important part in the Western Canadian livestock industry. And it has done not a little in the development of a more sympathetic understanding for Canadian agriculture in the British Isles. Its establishment was an indication of the importance attached to agriculture in the Dominions of the Empire, its continuance and promotion is an encouragement to the Western livestock industry, faith in the future, and a stimulus to the attainments of perfection in breeding.

The Prince, himself, directly when he is in the country, and continuously through the staff of the ranch, takes the most active part in all that pertains to the development of the livestock industry in the West. At Alberta and other Prairie Provincial exhibitions, the animals from High River are always attractive features. He even sends a representative selection of his big high-grade animals to the Coast to make the round of the exhibitions in this part of this country. The most interesting of livestock exhibits at the recent Fall fair at Victoria was the exhibits marked "E.P." that came from the Royal ranch at High River. At the last Saskatoon fair, animals from the "E. P. Ranch" captured prizes totaling $500 in value.

HIS EARLIER VISIT

The Prince crossed the Atlantic to visit his ranch in September of last year. For the greater part of a month he lived there "with the boys" on the farm, sharing their life, helping to build fences and pens, forking hay and riding the range. He made his home in the low rambling farm bungalow, a home-like but non-pretentious place, typical of any rancher's home on the great Canadian plains.

On his present visit, which he cut short in order to make the trip to the Coast, he was more interested than ever in the operation of the ranch. This week he attended the auction sale of surplus high-grade stock on his farm, mingling with the buyers and other settlers who came from miles around to attend the sale. For when the Prince is on his farm every vestage of royalty is shed.

Prince Factor In Cementing Empire Ties

Is Greatest Asset to Imperial Cause by Genial Interest in Everything

Many Sided Character Wins Admiration of All Classes And Races

No single factor in the British Empire is of greater value to the maintenance of the bonds of the Empire, and devotion to the British throne than the winning smile and genial personality of the Prince of Wales.

The patriot sees in him the embodiment of devotion to that throne which has survived the Hapsburgs and the Romanoffs, which cradled in a small island group in the North Sea has spread over continents and principalities. The war veteran sees the fellow soldier who "found his manhood," as the Prince himself puts it, on the blood stained fields of Northern France. The romantic maiden sees the care free bachelor who dances divinely, and enters into the fun with the enthusiasm of a young boy. The statesman sees in him the potential factor in retaining the affection of the people for a monarchial system in a day when thrones and crowns are tumbling in the wave of republicanism which has removed the ancient families that reigned from the Baltic to the Aegean Sea.

HIS WONDERFUL PERSONALITY

The visits which the Prince has made to various parts of the Empire, following the Canadian tour of 1919, when he officially met the leading people of the Dominion, have done wonders in helping the British people overseas to understand the value of royalty. Often personal contact dims the lustre of fame, but not in his case. Dusky personages from remote islands have rubbed shoulders with the white residents at receptions to the heir to the throne, and have caught something of that magnetism which the Prince radiates, and which appeals to the most inspiring emotions of humanity.

Third generation of royalty to tour extensively, His Royal Highness has followed in the footsteps of his grandfather and father in seeing the Empire at first hand. The impression King Edward VII made in the sixties has been intensified and developed, the Prince bringing grace and bearing to the discharge of those formal duties which accompany such tours, while his social interests are more accentuated and thorough than were possible to King Edward, and his brother, the Duke of Edinburgh, during their tours, and of the present King and Queen, when, as Duke and Duchess of York, they made the Empire circuit. His great-uncle, the Duke of Connaught, and Prince Arthur, have also set a splendid example of public spirit.

THE EXHIBITION

As one who has seen so much of the Empire, its industries and activities, it was not surprising that the Prince should take a leading part in the organization of the British Empire Exhibition and his leadership has been practical more than ornamental. Before his present tour he was a regular visitor, and has participated actively in some of the principal events of the Summer. His name throughout has been closely identified with the gigantic effort which has drawn millions to Wembley from all parts of the Empire.

AMERICAN INTEREST

The value of the Prince's personality in cementing the excellent relations which have fortunately prevailed for the past twenty-five years with the United States has again been appreciated during the last few weeks his wonderful reception on Long Island being the means of securing thousands of columns in the American newspapers which would under ordinary circumstances be rather inclined to ridicule the representative of monarchial institutions.

AS A SPORTSMAN

The Prince is a good sportsman, ready to take the ill luck with the good, and that has endeared him to a large number of Britishers overseas, who have carried their love of athletics into every clime and country. The overseas Briton appreciates those qualities of courage, endurance, and zeal, of which the Prince is so often demonstrating possession, and that gains for him friends in quarters which are of infinite value in maintaining the prestige of the imperial connection.

AUTOMOBILE NEWS

Widely Popular, Economical And Comfortable, is This New Model

Seldom, if ever, has a motor car in its first year of production achieved the popularity of the Maxwell Club Sedan. Since its introduction into the Maxwell line of models last October, the percentage of club sedan production to total production has steadily risen and now represents an extremely high figure, the car having become one of the largest selling closed models in the industry.

The club sedan is of unusual construction, because of which it makes an ideal type utility vehicle. The bridge type construction of body framing produces unusual strength without adding undue weight. It will actually withstand more hard knocks than most touring cars.

The same design that has produced good looks has likewise given practical answer to the particular business or social needs of its owners Maxwell dealers say. Its doors are extremely wide. The seating arrangement is convenient and the seats are comfortable. A tonneau passenger may easily leave the car without disturbing those in the forward compartment. The rear compartment provides generous baggage space capable of receiving large, bulky objects—even a trunk or baby carriage—because the doorway is so wide and the seats in front tip forward to clear the entrance entirely.

Using the club sedan, salesmen can travel with all their sample cases; commission merchants can carry their produce; the neighborhood tailor can deliver clothes; campers not only enjoy comfortable transportation, but by a few simple changes of cushions, and back seats, have a snug warm bed and shelter for the night without hotel expense.

Averages of more than twenty-eight miles per gallon of gasoline and negligible upkeep and repair costs have been reported to the factory by hundreds of club sedan owners. Tire mileage, as with other Maxwell models, should be extremely high because of the well balanced construction.

HOME FROM VISIT LOCAL MAN TELLS OF BIG PROSPECT

A. W. Carter, Hudson-Essex Dealer, Sees Coming Increase of Trade

"The Hudson-Essex cars are outselling everything but the Ford in the United States at the present time," said A. W. Carter, prominent motor car dealer of this city, and dealer for the Hudson-Essex manufactures, just arrived from a visit and tour in the United States.

"Last month," said Mr. Carter, "our factory in Detroit was turning out between 700 and 800 cars a day. The first day I was there 786 cars went out for the markets, and even at this rate the factory cannot supply the tremendous and ever-increasing demand.".

The coach, a strictly Hudson-Essex product, brought into being by this great manufacturing firm, is getting a grip on the country which knows no breaking, asserted Mr. Carter. The public appreciate the value being offered them, for the Hudson coach sells at the same figure as the touring car.

"In Detroit there is a car for every four people," continued Mr. Carter. "Times are wonderfully good, and the city is growing rapidly. But conditions generally all over the United States are quiet. This is especially true of the Pacific Coast, and it is to presumed that the pending U.S. presidential elections are to blame."

Wherever one goes in America now there is nothing but the most insistent praise for the city of Victoria, said Mr. Carter. The advertising campaign which the Puget Sound and Northwest cities are waging and have been conducting for some time past, has brought about results of a surprisingly successful nature. There was a time, stated Mr. Carter, that when a person said he was from Victoria it made no difference to those who heard him. Probably they did not know where the place was, even if they had heard of it. But now it is different. A Victorian, when he announces himself, always calls forth a storm of praises for the city he has left. This sort of publicity is the finest thing that the city can have, Mr. Carter believes.

"I am looking forward to a big expansion of trade in Victoria, for when the people come to realize what we are offering them in the coach, so will the sales of this model grow and expand. I expect to have a big season next year," said Mr. Carter.

The Hudson-Essex factory was the first to pass the last year's production record of any plant in America, Mr. Carter announced, and this indicated the immense growth of trade which the makers of the popular automobiles have attained.

LOCAL DEALER HAS PRAISE FOR TIRES OF BALLOON TYPE

All Chryslers Are Equipped With This Gear in Standard Models

The Chrysler Motor Corporation announces through Thomas Plimley & Co., local Maxwell-Chrysler dealers, that it has adopted special six-ply balloon tires as standard equipment on all Chrysler Six models. The size is 30 x 5.77.

"The Chrysler Six is designed for balloon tires from the ground up," Mr. Plimley said yesterday. "But not until tire makers, working in conjunction with its engineers, had designed and perfected a special six-ply cord tire, stronger and more durable than other balloons, would it adopt them.

"The six-ply, high speed tires now used on the Chrysler are specially designed and constructed to meet the car's higher speed capacity and also to provide the greater resiliency of ordinary balloon types," he stated. This gives the ideal combination. The Chrysler, with its pivotal steering, its new type of Spring construction that eliminates side sway, and its extra wide fenders, is actually built for the adoption of balloons. And the tires, in turn, are built to measure for the Chrysler," he said.

"The result is that the Chrysler, with tires 5.77" in width, drives as easily as though its pavement contact was no more than a narrow line. The design of the steering mechanism accounts for this. The steering pins are inclined to a line that passes through the centre of the tires' contact with the road. In addition the steering spindles turn on ball thrust bearings. That does not mean much until you get in the drivers' seat. There you'll find you can turn the wheel with your little finger.

"Chrysler special balloons in combination with Chrysler special chassis design for balloons has served to develope every advantage claimed for the low-pressure tire and at the same time has eliminated every disadvantage," he concluded.

It was in a lecture on India. The lecturer had been describing some of the sights he had seen there.

"There are some spectacles," he said, "that one can never forget."

"Oh, I do wish you'd tell me where I could get a pair," said an old lady in the audience. "I'm always forgetting mine!"

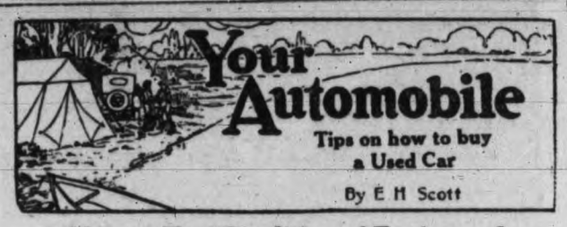
Mr. Meane: "I have nothing but praise for the new minister."

Deacon: "So I noticed when the plate went round."

COACH GAINS POPULARITY

A. W. CARTER

who has just returned from the United States, believes that an unprecedented market is opening up for the Hudson-Essex products, and particularly the coach, which is purely an invention of the manufacturers of these cars. The factory, with an ever-increasing output, cannot supply the demands of the markets in America, and the sales reports show Hudson-Essex second to Ford as the most popular car in the United States and Canada.



How to Test Condition of Engine and Electrical Equipment

To determine the condition of a used car, you must make a systematic examination of it.

First test out the electrical equipment. Switch on the lights and see that all lamps light. Note the condition of the reflectors and see that no lenses are broken.

With the ignition switch OFF, press in starting motor switch and keep it pressed in for 10 or 15 seconds. If the starting motor and battery are in good order the engine will be turned over briskly all the time the starter switch is pressed in. If it only turns over very slowly, the battery may be worn out or the starting motor may be in poor condition.

Now start the engine and observe the ammeter to note if the generator is charging the battery properly. The needle should swing over the "charge" when the engine is running and go back to "O" when it is stopped.

The next thing to do is to give the car a low speed and a high speed test to determine the condition of the engine. Drive to some quiet street and ask the owner to leave the engine in high gear, then throttle it down and let the car run as slowly as possible. Tell him at the same time to KEEP HIS FOOT OFF THE CLUTCH AND BRAKE PEDALS as it is a very simple matter to make any car crawl along at two miles an hour if you slip the clutch. If the engine is in good condition and properly tuned up, it will run along quite smoothly and regularly at from four to six miles an hour or about a brisk walking pace.

If the engine throttles down and pulls on high gear at a walking pace, it is fairly good evidence that it is in good condition. If, however, it WILL NOT throttle down, it may be that the carburetor is not adjusted correctly or a spark plug is misfiring. Usually, however, when a man is trying to sell you a used car he has it tuned up as well as possible so that when it refuses to pull slowly, the probability is that the engine is in poor condition and has no compression.

It is quite easy to test the compression and get a very good idea of the condition of the engine. First make certain that the ignition switch is OFF, then insert the hand crank and note the amount of resistance there is when you pull up on the handle of the hand crank. If the compression is good there will be considerable resistance felt. Pull up firmly for nearly a quarter of a turn, then let the handle spring back. See-saw the handle up and down four or five times "feeling" the compression, then pull it up a full quarter turn and get another cylinder on compression and test in the same way. The resistance you feel should be quite strong and the same on every cylinder.

If the compression is good on some cylinders but weak on others, it is possible that the cylinder walls are scored, piston rings worn or the valves are leaking. If the cylinder walls are scored or the piston rings worn, you will notice a lot of blue smoke comes out of the exhaust especially when the engine is speeded up. As a further test remove the spark plugs and examine the porcelains. If they are dry and a clean reddish brown color, the cylinder walls and piston rings are in good condition. If, however, they are covered with a soft, black, oily deposit, the probability is that the cylinder walls are worn or scored or the piston rings are worn. Of course if the owner has been keping the level of the oil in his crankcase too high it will foul up the spark plugs, but when you find the compression in a cylinder very weak and the spark plug fouled up, you can depend on it that the cylinder is in poor condition.

Before you start to test the compression as shown above, the engine should be run for at least 10 minutes to get it warmed up.

When you see-saw the hand crank up and down, listen for worn connecting rod bearings. If the bearings are worn you will hear a distinct rap or knock every time you push down on the handle. If you hear what sounds like loose bearings, it is a good idea to leave that car alone and let someone else have the grief.

If the slow speed and compression tests are satisfactory, test the engine for acceleration. To do this leave the car in high gear and throttle down to six or seven miles an hour then suddenly open up the throttle and speed up the engine. It should accelerate instantly without the slightest hesitation and reach a speed of twenty or more miles an hour within a few seconds. There should be no noise from the engine except a gentle purr. If it knocks or clanks badly during this test, it shows there are loose bearings or pistons.

The above tests will give you a very good idea of the condition of the engine. Next week I will show you how to make an examination of the steering gear, brakes, wheels, springs, etc.

Dolly: "Oh, Auntie, I've planned such a lovely holiday. Celia and I are going to take a tramp through the Welsh mountains next week."

Aunt: "Well, I suppose it'll be all right if your father approves, but do you really think the tramp will enjoy it?"

"How did you screw up courage to propose to the rich Mrs. MacTavish, Sandy?"

"Losh, mon, 'twas awfu'! I'd sworn I'd do it come Monday nicht, so I took her for a ride in a taxicab, and wi' one eye on the meter tickin' awa', I had her won at the end o' half a crown."

CHRYSLER RETAINS GREAT POPULARITY

Sales Record is One of Greatest Things in Autos' History

The tremendous international demand that the Chrysler Six has created has resulted in an output of this widely heralded automobile which has shattered all records ever made by a motor car in its first six months of production, it was announced from Detroit through local dealers, Thomas Plimley & Son.

The 10,000th Chrysler Six rolled off the final assembly line of the Chrysler Motor Corporation's Detroit plant before the middle of June.

The record achieved by the organization headed by Walter P. Chrysler in producnig 10,000 motor cars in less than six months following a car's first announcement is a record unapproached by the automobile industry. It is believed in Detroit that no industrial enterprise ever created has shown, within a similar period, a demand for a new product resulting in sales of more than $15,000,000 worth of merchandise.

"This achievement is even greater than it sounds when the unusual precautions taken to insure quality are considered," Fred M. Zeder, vice-president in charge of engineering of the Maxwell and Chrysler motor corporations, said yesterday. Mr. Zeder and his organization spent nearly four years designing the car. "Only strict attention to every detail of quality has kept Chrysler production from being much larger, for the demand for cars has been overwhelming, with production still behind demand. But Mr. Chrysler has issued unmistakable instructions that quality must be the foremost consideration in every operation."

Chrysler production recently has averaged slightly more than 170 cars a day. Plant changes will soon enable this to be moved upward slightly, it is thought. Officials now estimate that 15,000 cars will have been produced by or before August 1.

Incidentally, this would seem to indicate that business conditions throughout the country are fundamentally sound, and that continued good business is in prospect.

Many nationally prominent American and Canadian men and women are already Chrysler Six owners — high government and state officials, corporation executives, bank presidents, artists, actors and actresses, railroad executives and publishers. These include Rear Admiral John Keeler Robinson, engineer-in-chief of the U.S. Navy; Thomas H. Ince, the moving-picture producer; Charles A. Otis of Otis & Company, bankers and brokers, Cleveland; L. M. Williams of the Sherwin-Williams Company; William Hodge, the actor, and William C. Potter, president of the Guaranty Trust Company, New York. In addition to Rear Admiral Robinson, these men, each of them thoroughly conversant with motor cars, are also numbered among Chrysler owners: Capt. E. D. C. Herne, the English aviator and skywriter; Joe Boyer, the millionaire race driver; Thomas H. White of Cleveland, and Jimmy Murphy, former champion racing pilot and Indianapolis winner.

USE TRUCKS TO CONVEY HOGS

Stockyards Are Served by Road Now Instead of Rail

New York, Oct. 4. — Ninety per cent. of the hogs received from within a radius of fifty miles of the Indianapolis stockyards are now delivered by motor truck, according to E. L. Browne, Agricultural Economist of the U.S. Bureau of Public Roads, who has just completed a study of shipping conditions in the Indianapolis district.

The transportation of livestock over the highways to markets where they are butchered, has become quite general. In Indianapolis the transportation of hogs by truck has grown up where a steam and electric service unequalled in few agricultural areas has existed for several years, more than twenty such lines entering the city from all directions.

The use of motor trucks for delivering livestock from the farms to these stockyards, which are the largest East of Chicago, began in 1912 and since that time has increased rapidly. In 1913, the first year truck receipts of hogs were recorded separately, they amounted to 4.55 per cent. of the total, while in 1923 the truck receipts of hogs amounted to 32.54 per cent. of the total. The volume of such receipts has become so large in recent years that the Stockyards Company has found it necessary to establish a separate division for trucked-in stock.

LONGER DISTANCES

Although the bulk of the hogs received at these stockyards comes from within the fifty-mile radius, there are scattering shipments from territory 75 to 100 miles away. Normally these latter shipments move by rail, but with the number of miles of good roads constantly increasing in this territory, the trucking radius is being rapidly pushed back to the economic limits of truck haul on improved roads.

While no comparative figures are available, it is said that fewer hogs die in transit by truck than by rail. This is due largely to the fact that trucked-in hogs move by night during warm weather, whereas rail shipments are often loaded and moved during the heat of the day.

With many farmers now owning their own trucks, or living near operators of trucks for hire, the opportunities for taking advantage of varying market conditions are greatly increased. Many farmers who own radio receiving sets, now catch the market openings and still have plenty of time to truck their stock to the best paying yards before they close.

TOURIST TRADE BRINGS MILLIONS OF REVENUE TO CANADA

In a recent issue of The Sarnia Canadian Observer is a comprehensive article dealing with the growth of the tourist traffic in Canada. It was written by Johnson McAdam, president of the Blue Water Highway Association, which pioneered the tourist invasion of the Dominion through extensive publicity work.

Mr. McAdam estimates that tourists left in Canada last year $156,000,000, and his authority is the commissioner of Canadian national parks, whose first report gave $112,000,000 as the figure for 1921. Astounding as the total is at first glance, it appears to be quite reasonable and well within the mark when the separate reports for the provinces, on which it is based, are examined in detail.

GROWS RAPIDLY

Of course, the term tourist is treated in its broadest sense, but the proportion borne by autos is disclosed and it is no small factor. Assuming the figures to be correct, the writer shows that, compared with the 1921 Dominion estimate, the tourist traffic has been the most rapidly growing source of wealth in Canada, excelling the total export value of minerals and mineral products, equaling the export value of animals and animal products, and exceeded only by Canada's greatest exports, the product of the field and forest. Moreover, he points out, all this revenue is secured without entailing any loss or depreciation of assets such as results from exploiting the natural resources referred to. And it may increase indefinitely and still leave unimpaired "our assets of breezes, sunsets, scenery, camping, boating and bathing, perennial and undiminished."

This $136,000,000 left in Canada by the 1923 crop of tourists was made up in the seven provinces concerned, as follows:

British Columbia	$36,000,000
Saskatchewan and Manitoba	10,000,000
Alberta	20,000,000
Ontario	30,000,000
New Brunswick	4,000,000
Nova Scotia	6,000,000

The British Columbia estimate is based on a report of Fred Crone, chairman of the Vancouver publicity bureau, which stated that 60,000 foreign motor cars, carrying an average of four persons, conveyed 240,000 tourists into the Province. Averaging five days per person with a $10 average daily expenditure, this accounts for $12,000,000. The report adds that the auto tourists form only twenty-five per cent of the total traffic, and that another $24,000,000 was left by tourists using the steamships and railways.

It was considered this was a conservative estimate, as the figures for November and December were excluded.

VALUABLE ASSET

In conclusion the writer, after stating that everything indicated a new record for 1924, opines that "the tourist traffic has become a favoring force in supporting the value of the Canadian dollar on exchange," and he expresses wonder that the Federal and Provincial Governments do not foster it as is done in other countries, such as Switzerland, for example. He is inclined to blame the farmers as a class for the attitude of the lawmakers. He advocates government appropriations to be spent in Europe and the United States in judicious advertising as an effective means of doubling and trebling the tourist traffic to Canada. He suggests a small gasoline tax to bring the alien motorist in line as a taxpayer without affecting the local man and show the farmer an invasion of consumers must be of some advantage to a producer like himself. The doubter, who thinks tourists spend less than a dollar day, should be launched on a trip to demonstrate it day by day, retaining all the surplus left out of the daily dollar after paying for gasoline, oil, souvenir, hotel, food, inner tubes and repairs. The opponent of new-fangled business should ponder upon the fact that the tourist trade has been a definite factor in the business of older lands for centuries, back to the day when the silversmiths of ancient Sphesus "had great profit thereby." In these days of high taxation and low export prices, any business which brings millions into Canada and which can be hugely increased annually is worth the keen attention of all who yearn for easier taxation and better times.

USEFUL CAUTIONS TO MOTOR DRIVERS

Baer Puts Warnings in Attractive Form, and They Are Heeded

"Bugs" Baer, well-know newspaper humorist, has written and published a series of "road signs," probably merely intended to entertain. But many of them might be erected with benefit to the safety of traffic.

"Don't run up your mileage with skids," contains a lot of real caution in tabloid form. "Don't do you thinking with your brakes," will strike a responsive chord in every man who has had near-nervous prostration at the sight of the reckless driver stopping in a hurry.

"There are three grades of eggs, but only one grade of crossing and that's dangerous," ought to be pasted in the hat of all those who try to beat the train across its right of way.

"The glass in your windshield is the same stuff they put in hospital windows. Which would you sooner look through? Fifteen miles an hour may be a chill, but fifty is a fever." All of which is not too medical to be understood by the average motorist.

To towns troubled with too much speeding by tourists, Baer suggests "Speed limit in this town fifteen miles and hour. One day for every mile over that!" or "We have seven hotels and one jail, take your pick!"

"Don't try to scare locomotives with your horn." "The minute you save may be your last one." "You wouldn't travel on a freight train, so don't try to travel under one," are all good to remember.

Baer intended to be funny, and succeeded; he may not have intended to be serious, but many can take his cleverness seriously with benefit to themselves and the general public.

ASKS MEMBERS TO VOTE APPROPRIATION

Appeal on Transprovincial Highway Sent to Members of Legislature

As the impression has spread that it is the intention of the Government to divide the cost of the transprovincial highway over a period of three years, the Automobile Club of B.C. is circularizing the members of the Legislature who meet here shortly, urging them to press immediate construction, and have the work carried out within a year.

The main argument is naturally that if the work occupies the working seasons of 1925, 1926 and 1927, the interest in the project may suffer, add that the return to the traveling public may be delayed—in other wordh that the taxpayers will be kept out of the fruit of their reward for an indefinite period, as the road would not be open until the Fall of 1927.

She was anxious to find out where her husband was, so she rang up a club to which he belonged.

"Is my husband there?" she asked the hall porter.

"No, madam."

"But I haven't told you my name," said the astonished woman.

Vicar (at the village concert): "I shall not allow this concert to proceed until I know who called the last singer 'a blithering idiot.'"

Voice (after a long pause): "'Tain't no use, vicar. We ain't botherin' about who called the singer a blitherin' idiot, but who called the blitherin' idiot a singer."

A Step Forward

Painstaking research on the part of the Canadian Westinghouse Company has brought forth the improvements needed to make radio entertainment more enjoyable. There was a need for non-radiating receivers, for super selectivity, for more melodious tone reproduction, for dry battery receivers which would be more sensitive for long distance reception, for even simpler operation. There was a need for the worth-while receiver at a popular price—thus we have a "good Radiola for every purse."

Radio Frequency and Regeneration Combined in This Receiver

Tuning Coil and High-frequency Transformer May Be Built at Home

By L. G. INGRAM

With the increasing popularity of tuned radio-frequency amplification many radio fans have tried to construct a one-tube amplifier to add to their present receivers. Generally this mode of adding radio-frequency amplification does not increase either the volume or the reception range of the set. Then came the neutralized radio-frequency amplifier to the aid of the fan. These operated much better and did increase the efficiency of the regenerative tuner.

Still, however, the full efficiency of the radio-frequency amplifier is not obtained unless it is constructed with the regenerative tuner as an inseparable unit. Therefore, in this article, will be given instructions for building a four-tube receiver having one stage of neutralized radio-frequency amplification, a regenerative detector and two stages of audio-frequency amplification.

The construction and the operation of the set are rather critical until it is properly neutralized and until the operator understands the workings of the set. This is given as a foreword so that those who do construct the set will not become discouraged if everything is not brought in on the set the first night. It will probably be a week or more before the constructor can tune the set to obtain full efficiency after the set is properly balanced. The balancing will either take a few minutes or quite a few hours, depending upon the construction of the set.

Another thing upon which the efficient operation of the set depends is the efficiency of the equipment used. The coils herein described are of the standard single layer coils because they are the easiest to make, but if the constructor wishes to make the set ultra-efficient, it is suggested that he construct low-loss tuning coils. The ones used in the model are those described and the set operated well, but the author feels sure that low-loss coils would greaty improve the set. It is worth trying.

EQUIPMENT NEEDED

The parts needed for the construction of the set are: 17 by 24 inch panel with baseboard to fit; one cabinet to fit; four tubes, sockets and rheostats to fit. All types of tubes were tried in the original model and UV-201A's or C-301A's were found best, though the UV-199's and C-299's worked very well.

The A tubes were easier to neutralize. The same constants hold true for both; two composition tubes three inches in diameter and three inches long; one composition tube, or rotor ball, two and one-half inches in diameter and one and one-half inches long; two audio-frequency transformers; two double circuit jacks; one single circuit jack; two seventeen-plate condensers; one-half pound No. 22 double silk covered wire; one-eighth pound No. 33 double cotton covered wire; No. 14 wire for connections and binding posts.

The aerial and secondary coils should be made first. This coil is shown in Fig. 1. The small coil is the primary and consists of nine turns wound on one of the three-inch composition tubes. The winding is started one-quarter of an inch from one end of the tube. Do not use any dope on the coils. To fasten the ends of the coils in any other manner than the usual two holes at start and finish, use a drop of sealing wax.

The secondary coil is wound on the same tube as the primary and is started one-quarter of an inch from the primary. The coil is wound in the same direction. The secondary is wound with the same size wire as the primary, that is, the 22 double silk-covered wire. Sixty turns comprise the secondary coil. Sealing wax should be used here also, if found necessary.

The primary of the radio-frequency transformer should consist of nine turns wound on the second three-inch tube. Start the winding one-quarter of an inch from one end of the tube and start the secondary coil one-quarter of an inch from the primary. The secondary coil consists of sixty turns wound in the same direction as the primary coil.

When the secondary of the radio-frequency transformer is finished, two holes should be drilled in the tube opposite each other for a shaft upon which the tickler coil is to rotate. Three holes should be about one-quarter of an inch from the end of the secondary coil, as shown in Fig. 2. The holes should be large enough to take a quarter-inch shaft.

TICKLER COIL

The tickler coil is prepared by first drilling two holes in the two and one-half inch tube, if a rotor ball is not being used, opposite each other. These holes should also be one-quarter of an inch in diameter. After drilling the holes the tickler coil is wound with forty turns of No. 33 double cotton covered wire. Twenty turns should be placed on each side of the shaft holes. Do not use dope on the winding.

The shaft for the tickler coil is made from a six-inch piece of brass tubing, one-quarter of an inch in diameter. This piece of tubing may be procured in any large hardware or metal dealer's store. One and three-quarters inches from one end of the tube a hole should be filed through the wall of the brass tube. This hole should cut away half the tube down to the hole in the centre.

The shaft and tickler are then mounted on the radio-frequency transformer. To do this place the tickler coil inside the radio frequency transformer so that the holes in the tickler coil line up with the holes in the transformer. Then push the shaft through the transformer and the tickler holes. If it is found that the tickler coil does not rotate as the shaft is turned, that is if the rotor is not tight on the shaft, then drill a small hole in the centre of the tickler coil tube in the centre of the space left by the windings.

Through this hole a piece of No. 14 wire should be forced, so take care that the hole is not larger than this size wire. The inside end of the wire should be bent at a right angle about one-quarter of an inch from the end and this straight piece laid on the shaft. Solder the wire to the shaft. This will hold the coil on the shaft solidly.

TICKLER CONNECTIONS

Two flexible leads seven inches long should then be obtained. It is preferable that the leads be obtained in one long piece, fourteen inches long, to be exact. Double this piece of wire and force the double end through the end of the shaft. When the wire has been forced through the tube as far as the hole that was filed in it, pull the wire through the hole. Cut the wire in two pieces and solder them to the ends of the coil.

The outside ends of the flexible leads are, of course, the tickler coil connections. These may be fastened to the wall of the composition tube and binding posts used for connections if the constructor desires to do so, but this is unnecessary work and it is possible to just make the connections to the leads and let them play in air if no other wires are brought where they can be touched by the leads when the tickler coil is rotated.

The actual layout of the panel is left with the constructor, though it is suggested that the following plan be followed as much as possible. At the left hand end of the panel place the first condenser, the one tuning the grid of the radio-frequency amplifying tube. Next the raido-frequency transformer and then the condenser tuning the grid circuit of the detector tube.

The aerial tuning coil is mounted directly behind the first condenser and is laid down on its side with two legs holding it firmly to the baseboard. These legs are made in the shape of the letter Z and a hole is drilled in each straight edge. One for fastening to the legs to the coil, and the other for fastening the legs and coil to the baseboard. One leg is placed at each end of the tube. The legs should be made from strip brass, one-half inch wide and one-sixteenth of an inch thick. The length of each strip before bending should be two inches. The bends are made one-half inch from each end. The bends in the strip can, of course, be made as right angles instead of acute angles, as mentioned above.

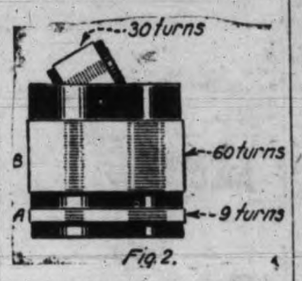

Fig. 2.

TRANSFORMER MOUNTING

The mounting of the radio-frequency transformer is slightly more intricate, but, with care, can be made into a very neat job. Again brass strips are used, the same size as form the legs used on the other coil. One strip is made with a bend three-quarters of an inch long. This bend is made at right angles to the strip and the bent part of the strip is bent to fit the contour of the composition tube.

The straight part of the strip is one and one-half inches long. Another bend then made in the strip one-half inch from the other end. This one-half inch part is fastened to the panel, the other is bolted to the composition tube at the bottom, that is on the end opposite the tickler coil.

To hold the top of the tube two strips are necessary. Each one has a right angle bend one-half inch from the end. Then one and one-half inches from these bends the strips are shaped for a length of one-half inch to fit the contour of the tube. These are then bolted to the tube and the right angle bends attached to the panel.

This type of mounting affords the constructor a neat and professional looking job and the tube will be held firmly. It is not necessary to copy it if the constructor has some ideas on mounting the coils of his own. But remember in mounting the coils they must be at right angles to each other and at least four inches apart. If they are not the set will not operate efficiency because it will be impossible to neutralize it.

After the parts have been mounted the set should be wired as per the diagram given in Fig. 3. As will be noticed, the plate coil of the radio frequency transformer though wound in the same direction as the secondary coil is connected with the plate at the end farthest from the grid end of the tube and the "B" battery to the end next to the secondary coil. This is necessary for complete neutralization.

BY-PASS CONDENSERS

The by-pass condenser from the "B" battery to the negative filament is necessary and should have as short leads as is possible to make. The capacity is not critical, though it must be at least .01 mfd.

When the set is wired test it by placing the tubes in the sockets and putting the "A" battery on the "B" battery binding posts. Turn on the rheostats and if they do not light the "A" battery may then be connected to its proper terminals and the high potential "B" battery may then be connected without burning out the tubes.

If the tubes do light with the filament battery connected to the "B" battery posts look over wiring carefully to find where the short circuit is. Be sure and fix it before attaching the "B" battery. It will save four tubes.

To test the set for reception first remove the radio frequency amplifier tube and connect the aerial and ground to the plate coil of the radio frequency transformer. Tune in a station using the set as an ordinary detector and two step regenerative receiver. If signals are received as with any other regenerative set then that part of the set is correct. If not then look over the outfit and locate the trouble.

AMPLIFIER TEST

When the regenerative tuner, detector and amplifer are working then connect the aerial and ground leads to their respective binding posts and place the radio frequency amplifying tube in its socket.

Tune in a station. Be sure there is a station operating, and if none comes in then look for loose connections on the radio frequency amplifier. When a station has been tuned in the amplifier should be neutralized by moving the neutralizing condenser's sliding tube until the tuning condensers can be rotated, together, to tune in and out the station without the set flopping into the signal and out. This must be done with the detector in a non-oscillating state.

When the correct position of this sliding tube is found it should be locked in some manner, the author used sealing wax, so as to hold the adjustment. However, and this is not meant as a discouragement, it is highly probable that the set will not neutralize at first.

If such is the case first look over all connections and see if there are any parallel wires. If so make new leads that are short and at right angles to each other. A parallel lead will make compete neutraliziation impossible.

If the set still further refuses to neutralize then experiment with the tap on the grid coil of the amplifying tube. Even though the set does neutralize at first it is best that this tap be moved, as, the nearer the filament end of the coil the tap is placed the greater the signal strength. For non-neutralized receivers shift the tap on both sides of the centre tap.

Still further trouble in neutralization may be caused by the size of the neutralizing condenser. If it is too small connect the sliding tube by means of a flexible lead to one of the incide wires. If too large the size of the sliding tube should be reduced a little at a time by sawing off one end a little at a time.

RADIO ORATORS ARE FORCED TO OBSERVE VERY STRICT RULES

Audiences Will Tune Out on Speaker Who Violates Them

A well known architect was asked why the people of the nineteenth century had abandoned the simple beauty of Colonial architecture for the hideous, wedding cake style that is so much in evidence in our small towns.

"The invention of the scroll saw," was the laconic reply.

The answer may not have been wholly correct. Doubtless many other factors contributed to the change. But the fact remains that inventions have far reaching indirect influences which were never foreseen by those responsible for the innovations. Many attribute prohibition to the victory of the movies over the saloon. The simple cotton gin, designed merely to lighten labor and increase output, intrenched slavery and hastened the Civil War.

It is perhaps too early to measure the effects of radio on our institutions, but it is possible to detect the trend of its influence in certain directions. Practically, radio is merely a vehicle for speech and music—a wireless telephone. As a carrier of speech, how far will it modify the character and use of our language?

To begin with, let us enumerate the peculiar conditions under which the radio speaker works. They will afford a basis for the better understanding of his problems and his methods of meeting them.

1. Radio as a medium tends to cloud utterance.
2. The speaker is seen not, only heard.
3. The speaker's time is strictly limited.
4. The audience is divided into small groups of one's, two's and three's.
6. The audience is comprised of every class and all strata of society.

The results of the speaker's efforts to meet these conditions may be discussed from two viewpoints—delivery and style of discourse.

QUALIFICATIONS

If there is anything in a radio speaker which an audience appreciates and likewise condemns for lack of it, it is a clear, clean-cut enunciation and articulation. Even with the best of receiving sets, the carrying of the voice is none too good. There is always more or less interference. Special care, then, is required in the formation of sounds.

The ease with which we read the lips of the screen actor shows the large part which the eye plays in catching the spoken word. The platform speaker unconsciously tunes his physical action to the thought and feeling of his phrases. He can afford to be a bit careless with his vocalization, because his message is being carried to the eye as well as to the ear. But the microphone divorces the voice from the body. It darkens the stage and imposes the task of communication entirely upon the spoken word. The voice must not only be heard distinctly, but it must assume the functions of stage scenery and all the facial and bodily movements of the actor. Radio, therefore, demands more highly developed enunciation, articulation, inflection and shading, together with slower, more deliberate delivery than the platform or the drawing room.

STYLE

So much for delivery. What about style? All the remaining five conditions above enumerated must be taken into consideration in constructing the ideal form or radio discourse.

Radio programmes must be run on trainlike schedule. Furthermore, lectures or speaking numbers are wisely limited to ten or fifteen minutes. For obvious reasons the speaker must meet these conditions by a most thorough preparation. This means a written speech and either a careful memorization or reading of it on the occasion of the delivery. Written discourse is always more compact, more involved and more finished than conversation or impromptu speaking. The reader can regulate his speed while traveling over the printed page. If he fails to comprehend a sentence he can repeat as often as is necessary to grasp the full meaning. But the auditor, like the passenger on a scenic railway, must perceive and appreciate as he goes along or not at all. The speaker, then, must frame his remarks so that every thought is instantly intelligible. Instinct seems to take care of this need in conversation, but when a man thinks on paper he must keep this factor constantly in mind.

The importance of this was fully appreciated by Lincoln. Certainly no man had a greater passion for simple direct, understandable language. During his later years he read most of his important speeches. But he prepared them while pacing to and fro or lying on a sofa, and no address was reduced to writing until his ear had weighed and approved every word, phrase and sentence.

The short Anglo-Saxon words are at a special premium in oral discourse. First, they are economical. Second, their meaning is within the grasp of all. Third, there is greater connotative value in their euphony than is found in the longer Latinized synonyms.

The average listening group consists of one to three persons, and each auditor feels that he is the only member of the speaker's audience. He wants an informal, conversational style. But the purely conversational style is not economical in point of time. The speaker must compromise. His sentences must be short but more neatly and meaningful than in conversation. Every word must pay its freight. Obstraction must be reduced to a minimum. Attention must be held continuously by means of alliteration, figures of speech, specific instances and illustrations. Every sentence must be concrete to the nth degree.

IDEAL SPEECH

Having discussed the desirable characteristics of the ideal radio speech, we come to the question "How far will radio speaking affect the conversation and platform speaking of to-morrow?" But before meeting this question, let us consider another element in the situation. Until the problem of paying for radio entertainment is settled, we shall have to be content with mediocre talent. But when that problem is solved, and it must be solved soon, radio will attract the best ability in the land. Fewer stations will cut down the number of speakers required and keen competition will produce radio specialists, men and women, who will develop their art to meet the special requirements, just as the cinema has produced screen specialists.

BERLIN STARTS RAID ON "RADIO SPONGERS"

Berlin, Oct. 4.—"Radio Spongers" are so numerous in Germany that the Government threatens a general raid on houses suspected of having unlicensed radio sets. Owners must pay a license fee of fifty cents monthly. This decree has generally been disregarded so that the fees received have been insufficient to even pay the radio artists.

BROADCAST BILL'S RADIOLAYS

By WM. E. DOUGLASS

SCOTTISH CONCERT

The first Scottish concert of the season is to be held in the Chamber of Commerce auditorium on Saturday evening, October 18. The proceedings will be under the chairmanship of John Hosie, president of the Victoria Burns Club, and an exceptionally fine programme is in course of preparation.

A number of Victoria's favorite exponents of Scottish music will give of their best and Mrs. W. H. Wilson, Mrs. J. Longfield, R. Morrison and Major W. G. Firth are sure to attract a large audience. The Boys' Pipe Band in all their full regalia of new kilts and equipment will also have a place on the programme.

This concert is being held under the auspices of the ladies' committee of the Girls' Refuge Club on Stanley Avenue, of which Miss Crease is president, and the proceeds will be devoted to the funds of this very worthy work of providing shelter to homeless girls in the town while in search of employment. The object in view as well as the excellence of the programme ought to appeal to a large number of people.

TOMMY'S VERSION

The class was being examined by the local school inspector, and after a lapse of an hour or so the pupils were told to write an essay on "Oliver Twist."

While correcting the essays the inspector came across this sentence: "In the kitchen stood the statue of a policeman."

Having no recollection of reading this in Dickens' famous book, he called the scholar and asked: "Tommy, would you mind telling me where you read this?"

"Certainly!" he answered. "It says in the book, 'In the corner of the kitchen stood a stone copper.'"

VALUE FOR MONEY

After morning service the family dined, and churches and the procedure came in for criticism.

Father criticized the sermon. Mother disliked the blunders of the organist. The eldest daughter thought the choir's singing was atrocious.

But the subject had to be dropped when the small boy of the family, with the schoolboy's love of fair play, chipped in with the remark: "Dad, I think it was a jolly good show for a penny."

Citiman: "Has your volunteer company bought a fire engine yet?"

Subbubs: "Yes, but we haven't had a chance to test it!"

"No houses on fire, eh?"

RADIO IS GREAT HELP TO CHURCH

Wonderful Invention Aid in Bringing Non-Church-Goers Into Church

In addressing the Victoria Radio Club last evening on "Radio and Religion" Dr. Clem Davies pastor of the Victoria City Temple stated how radio is doing more to bring non-churchgoers into the church than anything else. Some people are so situated that it is practically impossible to attend church and with the aid of radio they are able to hear sermons.

The speaker stated that all the leading churches have broadcasting stations. When a number of the large sets were installed a number of people wondered who would pay for their upkeep. The new idea created a great stir among the people and congregations grew steadily which meant a greater revenue to the church and helped the churches to do better work. Dr. Davies stated that the radio had not only done good work for the churches, but also for the hospitals. At the present time a great number of these institutions are equipped with large sets and the patients are now entertained.

Dr. Davies spoke of the exceptionally fine programmes that are broadcast every evening from Pacific Coast stations. William H. Christie gave a brief talk on Ultradyne sets which was greatly enjoyed by the members. After the meeting a six-inch tube set was used to demonstrate.

J. Frampton gave an address on "Resistance."

DISPUTE OPENS IN BRITAIN ON TEACHERS' PAY

Faculties, Strongly Unionized, Resist 10 Per Cent Cut in Salaries

Average Now £265 a Year; Newspaper Contends Profession is Overpaid

London, Oct 4—There begins this week a controversy which, before it ends, doubtless will have enlisted on one side or the other a majority of the public personages in England and Wales. In its simplest terms the question in which the nation is asked to give its judgment is this: Is £265 too much to pay the average qualified school teacher a year?

Throughout England and Wales, except in London, the government pays 60 per cent of a teacher's salary and the local authorities 40 per cent. Under what is known as the "Burnham scale" teachers' salaries have been cut 10 per cent since 1920. Now the representatives of local authorities propose another 10 per cent reduction, and the teachers, who are strongly unionized, are preparing vigorously to resist this.

The committee which is hearing arguments on both sides met Friday although the present wage agreement runs to March, 1925. In order to understand the light in which the question of the cash value of education is viewed in England it is necessary to remember that few middle upper class people who are able to send their children to private schools utilize the free educational facilities provided by the state.

SAYS THEY ARE OVERPAID

What in England is generally called "public school" in reality is a private school, in which the charges may run higher than those at Oxford or Cambridge universities. The really public or "board schools," therefore, are largely maintained for people who pay little in taxes, by others who pay a good deal.

Consequently the question of teachers' salaries, when it arises here, is considered from an entirely different aspect than in Canada, where public education still is most largely patronized. The local authorities enlisted on their side The London Daily Mail, which calls teaching an "overpaid profession" and invites its readers to look "with astonishment and envy" at the fact that male head teachers, who in 1914 earned £177 a year, now draw £410, while women, who then received £129 now receive £310.

"Compare the teachers' conditions of labor with those of clerks, shop assistants and typists," continues The Mail, adding, "Why should teachers be paid so much higher than men and women who work far longer hours and have none of their amenities or their ample allowance of salaried leisure?"

While the newspapers in the Rothermere-Beaverbrook combine usually are considered as belonging to the "newspaper trust," Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express has taken exactly an opposite line from Lord Rothermere's Daily Mail.

"The contentment of our school teachers is of such imperative importance," retorts The Express in an editorial, "that it is difficult to understand the logic, much less the understanding of those who would drive the knife of economy further into the educational body."

These and many other comemnts are important because they raise the ultimate question as to the value to the state of free elementary, and in some cases advanced, education. It may sound strange to Canadian ears to say that there is a considerable body of opinion in England which still oppose universal education, holding that money employed to teach children the three R's could be better employed in fitting them with vocational training.

EQUALITY NOT RECOGNIZED

The argument of this group, which is not without some logical basis, is that England is already overpopulated, and that "white collar jobs" are assured of a more than sufficient supply of incumbents, and that the wise things would be to concentrate on equipping the younger generation either for directly productive work or for immigration to the colonies.

This hypothesis is based on the frank negation of democracy—but the theory of democracy is still far from receiving such universal assent in England as it is in Canada. Many people here still base their outlook on the social fabric on the assumption that all men are by no means born free and equal, and that it is a waste of time and money trying to equip the masses for equality when they have little chance of attaining it.

The opposition view, which is held by a greater number of people, is that universal free education is as desirable now as when it was introduced in England in 1870. This opinion is naturally held by the Labor party, so that teacher representatives on the Burnham committee should enlist the support of Government members against that of the local authorities.

Few people expect the proposed ten per cent. cut to go through, but there is more than a chance that negotiations will fail and the nation-wide scale for teachers' pay, after prevailing for four years, will again be scrapped, leaving educators to make their own arrangements with the 317 local boards of education throughout the kingdom.

BRITAIN'S SAILOR KING AS SKIPPER

SOCIALIST PREACHER IS NAMED CANON OF WESTMINSTER ABBEY

London, Oct. 4.—England—political, social, financial and ecclesiastical—has been jarred by the news that the King, upon recommendation of Premier MacDonald, has approved the appointment of Socialist Frederic Lewis Donaldson to be Canon of Westminster Abbey.

What the accession of MacDonald to the Premiership was, so is the accession of Donaldson to the Canonry. It is nothing less than a sensation.

Donaldson owes his new place directly to his friend the Premier, who was backed up in it by the almost unanimous demand of the trades unions of the United Kingdom.

A graduate of Oxford University, his first parishes were in various parts of London where he came into contact with the poor and the humble and became passionately devoted to their cause. But it was when he became Vicar of St. Marks in the great industrial city of Leicester that he made England sit up and take notice. He was one of the founders of the Christian Social Union and of the Church Socialist League.

CANON DONALDSON

In 1905 when unemployment was rife all over England, he headed a march of the unemployed of Leicester to London. He took his flock to Lambeth Palace, rang the bell, and invited the archbishop to come out and speak to the men.

When the first Labor Canon of Westminster Abbey was asked for a message, he said:

"All through my life as a clergyman I have affirmed and reaffirmed the indelible union between the deep spiritual truth of the Gospel and the great Labor Movement which agitates the world.

"The latter, when analyzed, expresses the people's passion for a new, a fuller and better human life. It is false to say this means simply the loaves and fishes. It means this, but it also means life intellectual and life spiritual.

"All the great prophets of Labor have made this their cry and it is to this that the people's response has been made. My prayer as Canon of Westminster will be what it was before—that Labor shall use its power for the whole good of all classes, especially of the poorest and weakest. In this way only can the kingdom of God come on earth."

BOUNDARY DISPUTE TEARS OLD IRELAND ONCE MORE

The area affected by the present boundary dispute in Ireland is illustrated on the above map. Donegal, Cavan and Monaghan counties, embraced with the old provinces of Ulster, have already been surrendered to the Free State. The chief bone of contention now is found in Tyrone and Fermanagh.

SIR JOHN CRAIG

LONDON, Oct. 4.—Rudely awakened to the reality of the Irish question which they thought settled for good, politicians admit far-reaching consequences may result from the present dispute over the boundary between the Free State and Ulster.

Ireland is divided into two states. Parliament set up Ulster as a separate unit. When it established the Free State the assumption was that there would be a readjustment of the boundary between the states if necessary.

Now the Free State insists such readjustment is necessary. But Ulster balks and will not appoint a member of the Boundary Commission.

Parliament may be forced to legislate. If it does and Ulster, failing to compromise, defends its policies physically, trouble will come.

Pressure is being brought to get Ulster to compromise. Three Ulster counties are involved. A majority of the people in them are Catholic, and seemingly in sympathy with the Free State. But circumstances are such that any revision would bring dissatisfaction to many.

"It is nonsense to speak of territory being torn from Ulster," the president of Ulster says. "The tearing process was at the expense of Ireland as a whole."

And Sir John Craig, over in Ulster, had this to say:

"Ulster relies on the act of Parliament. She did not want to be torn from the British Empire, but in the interests of national unity she reluctantly agreed to be cast adrift.

"We are ready to consider light readjustments, but we can never consent to hand over any one of the counties as a whole. No power on earth can force us to hand over any one of the counties we hold."

The situation is further complicated by Republicans in the Free State who have always been opposed to the Free State Government. It is further complicated by extremists in Ulster who openly threaten to hold by force any minute part of the territory against any British or Free State troops.

The whole matter is "up in the air," and politicians are grave.

NOBLES NOW INCORPORATE TO CUT TAXES

Aristocrats Get Consideration by Converting Estates Into Limited Companies

Many in Hard Circumstances With Taxation and Charges as High as 90 Per Cent

London, October 4—The example of the aristocrat in straitened circumstances who "floated" himself as a limited company is now becoming quite fashionable among members of the British peerage.

The latest nobleman to adopt this method of escaping the crushing taxation is the Duke of Rutland, who is turning over the 20,000 acres comprising his state in the Midlands to the Belvoir Estates Company, Limited, whose prospectus has just been issued.

Other great land owners who have already transformed themselves into corporations are the Duke of Buccleuch, the Marquis of Granby and the Viscount, of Novar.

The advantage in the change is that what was formerly taxed as rent gets better treatment from the tax collector when it is shown as profits. Moreover, the managerial expenses are deductible from this tax.

The audited accounts of Buccleuch estates in southern Scotland show that taxation and managerial expenses had risen in 1920 to 90 cents to the dollar.

Retired Admiral Is Ship's Doctor On New Cunarder

London, Oct. 4.—The new Cunarder, the Aurania, which started her maiden voyage to-day, has as ship's doctor and surgeon Rear Admiral Jonathan Shand, who retired from the navy two years ago, after thirty-six years in service.

Admiral Shand had charge of the naval hospital at Portland during the first three years of war, and later of the naval hospital at Malta. Although when he retired from active service the admiral, who is fifty-eight years old, intended taking things easy, he found he was not happy without an occupation and longed to get back to sea.

"I found life without any work to do was rustful instead of restful," he said, explaining his new venture.

Old Ghost Evicts Unbelieving Family

Chichester, Sussex, England, Oct. 4.—"The strange lady" is the name of a ghost which constantly evicts tenants from a charming old country house not far from this city. Families come and families go. Sometimes they stay for several weeks; sometimes they remain for only a few days.

One modern, up-to-date woman who leased the house pooh-poohed the idea that it was haunted and carefully kept all ghosts away from her three young children. Within a few weeks the children complained to their mother that they did not like to play in their nursery because "the lady" disturbed them.

Finally the up-to-date and skeptical mother also saw the strange woman. She was unwilling to admit it at first, but a boy and girl of sixteen and seventeen respectively, who were visiting her, complained that they also had seen her.

This female ghost has been seen by so many persons, or at least so many persons have imagined they saw it, that it has become well known to ghost specialists in all parts of England. The legend told in explanation of the apparition is that the house was owned by a cavalier who, during the Civil War, took refuge in a secret chamber. His wife denied to the Roundheads that he was in the building. They set fire to the house and the husband was suffocated. His wife lost her reason through the shock, and her spirit is supposed to haunt the building in spite of the fact that it has been rebuilt and little remains of the old mansion.

Wedding Breakfast Is Served Couple on Speeding Aeroplane

London, Oct. 4.—The first wedding breakfast in the air was enjoyed by John Sterling, a young Chicago engineer and his bride, Miss Marguerite Ellis, of Bournemouth, from Croydon.

Marrying at West End register office, they rushed to Croydon, where a special plane waited to take them to the Aquitania before she left Southampton for America.

In the saloon of the aeroplane the couple were surprised to find a miniature wedding cake at the head of a table which held a wedding breakfast for two. The wedding cake was made by the head chef of the Savoy Hotel for the couple.

BRITAIN'S RICHEST BABY COOS LIKE ORDINARY ONES

PATRICIA EDWINA VICTORIA MOUNTBATTEN, WORLD'S RICHEST BABY, AND HER MOTHER

LONDON, Oct. 4.—"Patricia Edwina, stop that crying! Stop pulling at your wooly jacket! Stop kicking your legs out from under the comforter!"

And the richest baby in the world, out for an airing in Hyde Park, obeys her nursemaid.

The woolies she has on came, not from a store, but from the royal knitting needles of Queen Mary.

Baby is the first-born of Lord Louis Mountbatten, cousin of the Prince of Wales, and of Edwina Ashley, heiress of the Cassell millions.

Lord Louis himself is son of the Marquess of Milford Haven and heir to the wealth of that family. Just how many tens of millions the infant may inherit can only be guessed at.

She was born February 15, this year, and christened April 22 at the Chapel Royal, St. James Palace. The Prince of Wales was her principal godfather and Lady Patricia Ramsay, "Princess Pat," her principal godmother.

Patricia Edwina Victoria some day will inherit the fortune of Sir Ernest Cassell, famous Jewish friend of King Edward VII, philanthropist and one of the wealthiest men England ever had. Cassell was born in Cologne, Germany. He came to England to make his way and started as a clerk in Liverpool at $4.75 a week.

He built and operated railroads in Mexico and Sweden, floated loans for China and Argentina and put over the great Assuan Dam in Egypt. At his death his wealth was estimated at more than $50,000,000.

Sir Edward was the grandfather of Edwina Ashley, Lady Mountbatten, mother of our richest baby. Before his death his greatest joy was in the tall, blonde, daring, athletic girl. She spent most of her time with him at his historic mansion, Brook House.

The house, someday, will descend to the baby. Baby, in fact, rules a large portion of the house at present, especially since her mama and papa are vacationing in America.

Baby's names are is distinguished as her surroundings. Patricia is after Prince Pat, Edwina after her mother and Victoria after Princess Victoria, mother of Lord Mountbatten. But what does Patricia Edwina Victoria, the world's richest baby, care about that?

HE RENEWS ALLEGIANCE TO OLD PARTY

Now Chosen by Conservatives For One of Safest Seats in England

Gift For Making Enemies Counted as One of His Best Assets in Politics

London, October 4—Is Winston Churchill cast for the role of the next Conservative Premier of Great Britain?

This question was raised here as the result of his return to the Conservative fold. He has been registered offically and has been adopted as Conservative candidate for the Epping division in West Essex at the next general election, which it now appears will not be delayed more than a few weeks.

The fact that he was chosen for what is regarded as one of the safest Conservative seats in England emphasizes the party's satisfaction at his return to his old allegiance. It was as a Conservative that he entered Parliament about a quarter of a century ago, but his reputation was made after he switched over to the Liberals.

It was as a Liberal that he entered upon his experience in the Cabinet, which lasted with out break from 1906 until the fall of Lloyd George's coalition government two years ago. Now, after a brief stay in the wilderness, enlivened by his near-win of the London bye-election as an independent candidate last March, he finally has severed himself from the Liberals and is reborn as a Conservative, after boxing the political compass.

ROSE BY BRAIN POWER

There is a tradition in this country that there is no future for any politician who changes his party allegiance twice over, but Churchill is an exception to all political rules. His rise to the front rank in British politics was the result of brains, originality and hard work, and to-day he is one of the most significant figures in public life in this country. His reappearance in the political field this time, in the Conservative Camp has created enormous interest throughout the nation.

Churchill's greatest asset is not his political viewpoint, but his forceful personality. He has a genius for getting into the political limelight and making himself a storm centre of heated controversy—a position which he shares with no other figure in British public life except Lloyd George. MacDonald at one time had the same gift, but since the Labor leader came into office he has lost the knack of making enemies, although he may have hosts of critics.

Churchill makes enemies all of the time and in all directions, and the more he makes the better pleased this stormy petrel of British politics appears to be. On this occasion he seems to have made a good guess at beating his erstwhile chief, Lloyd George, in the race for reversion to the Premiership, if and when the electoral tide begins to turn against MacDonald.

The Conservative Association at Epping, in adopting him, has gone on record as "recognizing that it is only by the united efforts of supporters of the constitutional cause, as opposed to the disruptive forces of advanced socialism that decisive victory for a sane and stable government can be achieved at the next election."

LIBERALS BEING CRUSHED

Ever since the Lloyd George Administration went down to defeat Churchill has upheld the viewpoint that socialism and constitutionalism are the only real opposing forces in present day politics. He fought hard to line up the Liberals and Conservatives in combination against the Laborites, and it was only when his efforts in this direction failed that he swung over to the Conservatives.

Lloyd George also has been a strong critic of socialism, but his style in denunciation has been badly cramped by the fact that the Liberals are keeping the Laborites in power and obviously are afraid to throw them out. It may be a moot point as to whether Labor has lost ground since it took office, but there is no question whatever but that the Liberals are being crushed out between the upper and nether millstones of conservatism and socialism.

When the swing of the political pendulum begins to operate it will be the Conservatives, not the Liberals, who will stand to gain, and Churchill stands to gain most of all for his reversion to the old allegiance. He is possessor of all the qualities—personality, driving force, great rhetorical power, and prodigious industry—with which no other prominent Conservative is endowed, except Lord Birkenhead, and he is hampered by the fact that he is a peer.

There can be no question that Churchill, as soon as he returns to Parliament, will get a seat in the Conservative front bench. It will be surprising if he is not very soon official leader of the party. He is only fifty years of age, and this is young as British politicians go nowadays. Where Churchill may lead the party, if and when he becomes its leader, is, however a question which the most serious student of his meteoric career would be least inclined to answer.

THE TANGLED PROBLEMS OF LOVE

As Straightened Out in the Correspondence Department of Our Manual

LETTER NO. 1

(From our correspondent, Miss Lucinda Lovelorn, to ourselves. By the way, we named her. We know how to pick the names every time.)

"Two days ago I was introduced by a gentleman friend to a gentleman on a street car. Yesterday I met this second gentleman on the street and he asked me if I would walk with him afternoons. I do not know yet whether I love him, as I have only seen him on a street car. Perhaps you can tell me whether there would be anything unladylike in me doing so. If I walk with him, is it proper to walk on the left side of a gentleman or does the lady walk on the right side?"

LETTER NO. 2

(From Ourselves to Lucinda.)

"Yes, we think you may safely accept the invitation to walk with your new friend afternoons. Whether you walk on his left side or his right will depend on circumstances. If he has lost his left eye you walk on his right side, otherwise you have your pick of sides.

"But remember, Lucinda, that you must let him see from your manner at the very first that your feeling for him is purely one of wholesome camaraderie and nothing further. Without being cold to him, put into your manner just that little touch of hauteur and that suspicion of éloignement that will let him realize that you are a lady.

"In other words, we mean don't let him start anything. Do you get us?"

(From Lucinda to Us.)

"The gentleman friend with which I have been walking afternoons asked me if he might call mornings and also take me out nights. I do not know whether I love him yet although he is a good dresser. Will it be all right if I let him take me to pictures nights? Till now whenever gentleman friends have taken me places evenings mother has been along. If I go with this party to pictures do you think that I compromise myself and if it was you would you have mother along?"

LETTER NO. 4

(From Us to Lucinda.)

"We have thought over your sweet letter very deeply, dear Lucinda, because we realize how perplexed and how troubled you are. On the whole we think that you may now safely go out at night with your new friend, but remember that in granting him this privilege you must let him know that you have in no way ceased to be a lady. It would be necessary for you to resist in a dignified way any undue advances that he may make. We would suggest that you carry a tack hammer along with you and if your new friend, as we have said, starts anything let him have it on the bean.

"And by the way, let us know what he does about the advances. We are always interested in that sort of thing.

"We note, further, that you ask whether, if it was we, we should want your mother along. No, dear, we wouldn't."

(From Lucinda to Us.)

"Since I wrote you last the gentleman friend of which I spoke about took me out twice nights. I do not know whether I love him dearly yet, but he is to have an increase of salary from his firm because he is an A1 salesman. The last time we went out he asked me if I liked lobsters, because if I did he knew where they had a good lobster place, but I said no because I thought that a party respects a girl more if she refuses lobsters gentlemen. All the time we were out he behaved just like a perfect gentleman and didn't do anything. Do you think that if he asks me again it would be all right to let him give me lobsters nights?"

LETTER NO. 6

(From Us to Lucinda.)

"We are glad to learn that your evening outing with your friend was so successful. And it is nice to think that he did not make any wrong advances at all, but behaved like a perfect gentleman.

"But when it comes to this lobster stuff, you touch on something that we know and on which we speak with the greatest firmness. It is not proper for you to accept a lobster unless you have reason to believe that in giving it he is asking you to share his life.

"The time has come for you, dear little girl, to be very firm. You must ask your gentleman friend to come home with you to your house and meet your mother. If he is a man, he will do it. But if he shrinks from it and offers you a lobster instead, then it is clear that he has been trifling with your heart and you must let him go. You will suffer a little mal de coeur but so you would if you took the lobster. On the other hand if your firmness wins, you gain a husband and a home.

"Hence our advice is,—go to it, Lucinda."

THE PROPOSAL OF MARRIAGE

In what way, we are asked and we ask back, should a proposal of marriage be made? Now we readily admit that the proposal of marriage is most frequently made by direct speech, in short, by word of mouth. This may have certain advantages in the way of directness, rapidity and ease of ratification. But we cannot but feel that it lacks much in symmetry, harmony and all-round completeness.

We, therefore, favor entirely the proposal of marriage by means of a written letter. This allows the lover to state his feelings so definitely and so finally that a refusal becomes difficult if not impossible.

For such a letter, however, it is not wise to rely upon the unaided imagination. Here again the use of a systematized form is greatly to be preferred. The general requirements for such a letter we are prepared to state in the following terms, which are based, we may say, on some of the greatest current authorities:

"In the perfect letter of proposal the young lover should first of all dwell upon the depth and sincerity of his love. He should express at the same time his esteem and appreciation of the family with which he hopes to have the honor of entering. And in conclusion in a manly and frank way he should say something about his own position in life and his prospects.

"Dear Miss Blank Blank:—

"Ever since I first had the honor of meeting you beside the sawdust pile behind the sawmill at the Y.M.C.A. picnic on the June 18, ult., I have realized that I entertain for you a feeling which is different from any feeling which I have hitherto entertained for any one for whom I have entertained a feeling. Your coming into my life has brought something into my life which was not in my life before you brought it into my life.

"I cannot hope in any way to be worthy of you and the more I think of you the more I despise myself and realize that till I met you I had been moving steadily down but that after I met you I went up and I think that with your help I could keep on going up and staying up.

"Since I met you I have also had the pleasure of meeting your mother and your father, and I have learned to love and honor them. I think your father is just too cute for anything. Didn't he look just too killing in that little velveteen smoking jacket the other evening? My feelings towards your mother are also a matter which I think should give me an added claim to your favorable consideration. I myself never had a mother. But now that I have seen yours I am, in a way, as it were and so to speak, glad.

"My prospects in life are such as will at least enable me to maintain you as well as you are maintained now. My salary, while not large, will suffice to support you and to dress you in part at least, which is all I dare ask at present. At my uncle's death I expect to inherit a very comfortable personal fortune and it is clear, therefore, that in order to be in a satisfactory situation I have only to poison my uncle.

"On all these grounds I venture to ask your hand in marriage and to request the favor of a reply at your early convenience to B606, Station B."

It is hardly necessary for us to indicate the correct form in which an answer to such a letter of proposal should be framed. The training in business correspondence now given to all young girls in our secondary schools makes such a composition a matter of extreme ease. But we might merely suggest that the normal and usual answer in the best circles runs as follows:

"Dear Sir:—

"Yours of the 18th instant to hand and contents noted and in reply would say that I accept your proposal f.o.b. this city, and will take delivery of goods at any time. Love and kisses from your loving

"Lucinda."

NATURE NOTES

BY ROBERT CONNELL

MORE ABOUT OAK GALLS

A few weeks ago I described some oak galls and spoke of the finding in them, not the larva of the gall fly, but a white caterpillar of active habit. When this unexpected occupant had reached the end of his tether, so to speak, the gall contained no longer any of the radiating fibres, all having gone to assuage his relentless appetite. The other day I was fortunate enough to find a small oak with a good supply of galls and on opening these I find in the little nest at the centre of the fibres the gall fly, a small dark insect. The interesting question is opened up as to how the caterpillar, cuckoo-like, usurps the place of the gall fly larva. Its egg is certainly not introduced subsequently to the formation of the gall for no mark of any kind denoting the requisite piercing is to be found on the galls I have examined. It would seem that by one of those curious but surely not accidental coincidences the hatching of the larva (when the gall begins to form) is followed by the disposition of an egg by the watchful instinct of another insect. The larva from the second egg consumes both the original tenant and the whole of the interior furnishings of the spherical house. Meanwhile I await with interest the evolution of the white caterpillar.

FLIGHT OF HAWKS

Over a meadow, warm in the sunshine of an Autumn afternoon, a sparrow hawk was hovering. Immovable for the time being as to his place in the air his wings kept up a continuous fluttering. His gaze seemed to be intent upon the ground below where one could picture some small mouse or perhaps a grasshopper to be sighted. Every now and then a swoop was made and the hunter retired to a neighboring tree or as if preyless flew away and once more resumed his hovering in a new spot. How different a mode of flight from such as I witnessed one Summer evening. Passing along a road which had a border of dense forest on the left I saw a warbler light upon an outer branch. Scarcely had he done so when, like a bolt of JPupiter, a sparrow hawk, shot at it and struck it with its talons. The hiss of its flight could be distinctly heard. I learned to appreciate the force of the blow these little hawks strike from an experience last Summer. Sitting in my room I was suddenly startled by the sound of what appeared to be a stone thrown upon the roof (a flat one) with violence. Running out I could at first see nothing; the roof was bare of any object. The dusk of evening was beginning to gather and just as I was about to return to my work my eye was attracted by something moving in a corner of the garden some thirty feet away. Going over a sparrow hawk rose from the ground slowly bearing in its talons a robin. It flew away to the other side and dropped again with its load. When I followed it, it flew over the fence and left its prey which was evidently too heavy for a rising flight. I found the robin to be stone dead. I imagine the hawk must have the power to adjust the momentum of its attack very nicely to the mass of the victim.

BALTIMORE TEACHER'S CANADIAN SKETCHES

By PROFESSOR W. T. ALLISON

For a number of years, Miss Laura Lee Davidson, an expatriated Canadian, has been teaching school in Baltimore. She renews her love for her native land by spending her Summers in a humble cottage on a small green island in a blue lake in a district north of the Rideau, somewhere between Ottawa and Kingston. This region, watery and rocky, has a sparse population of poor whites who fish, hunt, and farm in primitive fashion. Miss Davidson is so enamored with this wild bit of Ontario that she not only lives there in the Summer months but has made it the theme of two books, "A Winter of Content" (The Abingdon Press, New York) and "Isles of Eden" (Minton, Balch and Company, New York). The second-named volume has just been published; the former appeared two years ago. The very title of "A Winter of Content" is eloquent of this Baltimore teacher's love of the wilds, for she decided at the close of a Summer ten years or so ago that she had not had sufficent rest; in fact her nerves were so frazzled from the strain of teaching Baltimore children during the preceding Winter that she came to the conclusion that the best thing she could do was to obtain a year's leave of absence and spend the Winter on the island. As her title declares, and as her volume explains throughout, it was a Winter of content. It is, I think, the most vivid account of Winter weather, birds, animals, etc, that any Canadian has written. Sometimes the tired, brave teacher was lonely, and she had two or three scares, but she never once found it necessary to resort to the loaded pistol, which lay besides her Bible and Prayer Book on the shelf at the head of her bed. And when the robins returned from the sunny south, they found that their friends of the previous Summer had renewed her youth.

INTERESTED IN HER NEIGHBORS

Encouraged by the success of her former book, Miss Davidson has now given us another of the same character, only this time she chronicles the sights and sounds of Summer on her island. In "Isles of Eden" we see the return of herself and her sister, Patricia, to their Summer cottage in the lake country north of the Rideau; we become acquainted with their friends the loon, the beaver, and the oriole; we behold once more the wonder of the Summer solstice, and, last but not least, we are introduced to many of the primitives, the neighbours of the mainland and of other islands of the district. We do not expect to find any thrilling episodes in such a book as this. When we read the first two pages we think of John Burroughes and Mrs. Porter, and the whole tribe of nature writers, but before we reach the end of the first chapter we discover that Miss Davidson is just as much interested in her neighbours as in deer, mice and sunsets. She loves to dwell in the Isle of Eden, but any reader of this very human book would be willing to wager that its author would not remain two weeks in a Summer paradise if Homo Sapiens and his wife, to say nothing of the little homos, were not within call. While I admire the naturalist side of this book, I must say that the human side seems to me its chief attraction, for its author has a keen eye for the joys and sorrows, the oddities and quiddities of humanity. Some day, let us hope, she will break away from sketches and try her hand at a regulation story.

FROGS LOOK LIKE BRONZE BUDDHAS

Before touching upon the Adams and Eves of the "Isles of Eden," I wish to give you an idea of Miss Davidson's skill in description. Here is a little picture of frogs on their lilypads: "Big green frogs sit half submerged in the pools, their little hands, fingers spread, resting on stones or lilypads. They make me think of small, bronze images of Buddha—they have the same look of age-long contemplation, of profound repose." In sentences full of color, she describes the waning of Summer, "Summer is dying; Fall comes on apace. There are long red branches on the sumachs and dogwoods, patches of butter yellow lie on the basswoods and the leaves of the wild sarsaparilla are golden. Yellow splotches lie also on the floor of the woods, for the first light frost colored the fronds of the ferns so that even far back in the deepest shade sunlight seems to be gilding the ground.

"Closed gentians are blooming on the moist shore trail, in the self same sport where they appear every year. Dwelling in still, secluded places, standing stiffly erect, with tight closed lips that open only when the heavy bumble bee forces them, the closed gentian is the very flower of reticence, but it, too, manages to give its silent warning of the approach of Fall."

A BIRD AS A POLICEMAN

The kingbird is the policeman of the island. He never hides when trouble breaks in birdland. "A sparrow hawk visited the island this morning and during his stay all the little warblers, creepers and flycatchers hid themselves; the woods were as still as the spirit of death that hovered in the tree tops. Only the kingbird, most intrepid of fighters, seemed to feel no fear. We saw him dashing about and soon the hawk fled away across the lake, flying high and going rapidly, a darting vicious little enemy in full pursuit, until both were lost to sight in Drapeau's woods. After a while the kingbird returned, with an air of having performed a pleasant duty, and settled on a branch to watch for flying insects or perhaps another hawk or a crow. Droll little bird policemen they are, with their gray coats, white waistcoats, square tails with a white border, and their orange colored spot on the crown of the head. They will not be here to guard us much longer, for soon they and the hawks will be leaving. Already we see numbers of the big birds soaring over the lake. They are congregating for their Fall migration."

THE GRANDFATHER OF ALL "PORKS"

One of the most amusing of the natural history sketches in this volume discloses the pertinacity of the porcupine. I can back up what the author says from my own experience last Summer, when, night after night, a porcupine gnawed at boxes and tin cans beneath my Summer home; he received no nourishment, but he must have derived a lively satisfaction from this midnight exercise. "These porcupines," says Miss Davidson, "are our nightly enemies. Where they live by day we have never discovered, but they prowl around the camp in the darkness, gnawing and grunting and disturbing our rest. They love salt and grease and old leather—anything left out where they can find it. . . . One Winter night the grandfather of all 'porks' attempted to gnaw down the corner of my sleeping shack, just under the head of my bed. I beat on the wall; he chewed on diligently. I opened the window and threw out an old shoe, hoping that he would take it and go away. He only ambled off a few paces in the bright moonlight and stood looking at me—a huge old fellow, big round as a barrel, with his black quills, tipped with white, standing militantly erect. When I lay down again he shuffled back and shook the wall. In a fury I seized the axe and threw it, missing him, of course, but hitting a stone. The porcupine waddled away hastily up the hill and into the bushes, but the little axe has never been of any use since.'

THE HOUSE OF DREAMS

One of Miss Davidson's favorite ports of call was Mrs. Drapeau's little two-roomed log house across the lake. Mrs. Drapeau is one of the best portraits in this gallery. The old lady of seventy odd is pictured as the type of the brave pioneer women of Canada. She has raised five sons, only one of whom remains to work on her little farm. When she came over to Canada from England, it took seven weeks to make the voyage. Since then she has been a ceaseless toiler—carding, spinning, weaving, sewing, washing, cooking, milking, churning, planting, weeding, hoeing. Although her son is a prosperous man, he has never built for his mother the new house of which she has long dreamed. "Ever since the boys were 'growed,' Mrs. Drapeau has had a vision and a great desire. It is for a good house of boards, with plastered walls, an upstairs and a for a good house of boards, with plastered walls, an upstairs and a downstairs, a parlor and bedrooms. In her mind she has furnished and refurnished this dream house to her liking, and has hung on its gay walls the crayon portraits of her father and mother and the faded old photograph of Rahcliffe Village, the place her parents left when they came out to Canada so many years ago. Although she has never walked the length of that pictured street nor entered the doors of the little church at its end, Rahcliffe Village is home to Mrs. Drapeau." She came to her present home in the early days. "I mind the time," she told her visitor, "when there was never a stove in all this country. The people cooked at the old stone fireplaces and baked their bread in great iron pots buried in the embers. There was never such good bread as come out of those iron pots—I think I can smell it yet. There was no matches in them days neither—not a match was ever knowed. Every man carried a flint stone and an iron ring, and to make a light he would strike the ring on the flint and let the spark fall on a bit of 'spunk' and 'twas so they lighted the fires."

Another amusing story, amusing yet touched with tears, was related by Mrs. Swanson, another old struggler, whose house had been burned down during the preceding Winter. When her house took fire the neighbors came from far and near. They carried out a little of the furniture, but most of her treasures went up in smoke. "It was a kind of shock to me, that fire," said Mrs. Swanson to the Summer visitor. "It seemed strange to be sitting on a stone by the roadside seeing my house burn down before my eyes. The neighbors was all very good to me; they worked and hauled and fought the flames so long as they could. But the young ones was a'laughing and joking while they worked—and my home a-burning. There was a great tin of maple syrup in the cellar, they found it boiling away on the hot stones, and they cooled it, and pulled it, and made maple candy and had a great frolic. They didn't mean to be hard, they was just young and having a good time, but it seemed like I couldn't a-bear to hear them laugh; so I went off to the barn and sat down in the straw and put my head against old Bess and there I stayed till they all went home. I was grateful, but it seemed I couldn't stand to see they young folk frolicking while my home was burning."

These human interest stories are scattered plentifully through this volume. There are more sketches of women than of men, but all of them are evidently taken from real life. Miss Davidson keeps the reader in suspense from the moment that she introduces Cecile Beaulac, who pulled Charley McDade out of the lake as he was going down for the third time and, in true romantic style, afterwards fell in love with him. Cecile was only fifteen, but Charley, a shiftless individual, had a wife and three children. All through the book there are references to the progress of this love affair, and we are kept on tender hooks because we feel sure that the silly girl will elope with the man for whom she has an infatuation. He goes out West, however, on a harvesters' excursion and Cecile recovers from her midsummer madness. So we close this charming book with a feeling of satisfaction that in real life tragedies are often averted.

Here Comes the Beer!

You Can't Keep a Good Political Issue Down, Mr. Blopp Asserts; the Politicians, He Says, Will Have Beer at Every Session But Not a Drop to Drink

When a Member of Parliament is about to enter annual assembly and adjust the affairs of the Common People for a whole year it is just as well for him, perhaps, to acquaint himself in a rough way with those affairs. It is not necessary, of course, and many veteran Members consider it a tiresome formality. Some of the wisest Politicians, indeed, feel that is better to adjust these affairs in complete ignorance of them. This, of course, enables a man to ponder them with a certain freedom of thought, a certain lack of prejudice impossible when you know what you are pondering about.

Anyway, David Wobble, M.P.P.-elect, who is rather old fashioned, thought he ought to know something about the problems of the Province before he started to solve them. With this quaint idea in mind and the Fall session of the Legislature looming darkly ahead, he decided to get at least some rough idea of what he is paid $2,000 a year to know. How natural, then, that he should seek counsel at the feet of that eminent politician, Cicero Blopp, who knows everything there is to know about Politics and much more besides.

"Well," said Mr. Blopp, rubbing his nose very wisely, "the Fall session will be Short and Snappy. Ask any Member and he will tell you that. Short and Snappy is the word. But mark you this, all sessions are Short and Snappy—before they start. And none ever are after they commence. A Short and Snappy Session is about as rare in politics as a Liberal in North Okanagan during the open season on Cabinet Ministers.

"Still, it always cheers the hard-working Politician to look forward to a Short and Snappy Session, to fondle and cherish the illusion that his labors will be brief. You will find, however, that this year, as in every previous year, everybody will meet for a Short and Snappy Session ending in November; but nobody will make Short, Snappy Speeches; and then there will be a mad rush to chase the year's legislation through and get home to the wife and kiddies for Christmas turkey. And when you have got home you will begin to wonder just what it was all about."

MR. WOBBLE SEES

"Oh, I see," said Mr. Wobble with an expression which showed that he did not see at all.

"Yes," said Mr. Blopp, rubbing his chin very wisely, "there are several reasons why it will be a less Short and less Snappy Session than usual. The first of these is Beer—"

"Beer!" exclaimed Mr. Wobble, horrified, as if he thought that Mr. Blopp's reference was a reflection on the personal habits of the Members.

"Yes, of course, Beer!" said Mr. Blopp. "Beer, as usual, will arrive early and stay late. It always does. Beer has arrived so early and stayed so late for four years that every Member who has suffered this annual invasion would be willing to forego for all time the privilege of hoisting a foaming schooner up to his thirsty lips, if, by this noble sacrifice, he could prevent Beer from swaggering into the Legislature again.

"Aha!" said Mr. Blopp, rubbing his nose very wisely and laughing that terrifying laugh of his, away down in the depths of his vest, "you young Members think that beer is a refreshing liquid with a peculiar froth on top, put there so you can have the pleasure of blowing it off. Aha! You will find that it is nothing of the sort!"

"Oh!" said Mr. Wobble, with evident alarm and disappointment. He began to wonder whether it was going to be much fun to be a Member after all.

SOMETHING TO LEARN

"Yes," pursued Mr. Blopp, rubbing his nose very wisely and laughing away down in his vest, "you will find that Beer with some Members is an illusion, with some a Forlorn Hope, with some an Hallucination, with others a Philosophy of Life and with most a Darned Nuisance.

"The Beer advocates, as usual, will spend weeks this session proving that unless Beer is made to flow deep along the streets of British Columbia, British Columbia will be ruined. And the anti-Beer advocates, as usual, will spend several more weeks showing that if any such thing is permitted British Columbia will turn up its toes and die. This interesting discussion has gone on for many years. Indeed, if the Members had drunk beer as enthusiastically and as deeply as they have talked about it I fear that the Legislature would be a very wicked place indeed and the Members vest fronts would be much too large for their vests."

"But," said Mr. Wobble, who prefers Beer served in the ordinary way to Beer served as a problem in Government, "but why don't they do something about it?"

"Aha, they did try to. They submitted a plebiscite on the subject to the electors but the electors played them a scurvy trick. They made things worse than ever. As a result of the plebiscite, which was going to decide the question for all time, no one knows now whether the Province wants Beer or not and probably no one ever will. And the funny part of it is that no one but the Beer advocate is worrying about it!"

MEMBERS MUST LEARN

"Yes, it will be a Short and Snappy Session—before it starts. For besides Beer there is the fact that all you new Members will waste half your time learning the two or three things you must know to fit you for governing the country. As Sir John A. Macdonald used to say, it takes a Member the whole of his first session to learn how to hang his hat properly in the cloak room. Personally, I think Sir John expected too much. As for Beer—"

"But," interrupted Mr. Wobble, "when it has tried for four years to do something about Beer, why doesn't the Legislature stop talking about it?"

"Aha!" laughed Mr. Blopp away down in his vest. "How absurd! How Preposterous! Your ignorance of Politics indeed is invigorating. Don't you know that the only subjects that it is safe to talk about are the ones you can't do anything about? Stop talking! Aha! That is a good one, a very good one indeed!"

"Well, then," Mr. Wobble demanded very much perplexed, "what in the deuce is a new Member going to do about Beer?

"Do about it? Do about it?" asked Mr. Blopp rather sharply and he rubbed his nose until it glowed. "Do about it? Why make speeches about it, of course, make speeches about it."

ON THE TRAIL OF THE YUKON

On Monday evening in Centennial Church, at 8 o'clock, Rev. R. W. Hibbert, will give his lecture on the Yukon, illustrated with many slides. Mr. Hibbert lived in Dawson for the period between 1911 and 1916 and thus is able to give many of his descriptions at first hand. He will also tell the stirring story of the unparelelled stampede of 1897 when thousands from all directions responded to the cal of the gold and went over the trail of '98 to Dawson and the gold bearing creeks in the vicinity. Mr. Hibbert had an admirable opportunity to hear the story from the lips of the Sourdoughs and is able to illustrate his address by a fine set of slides which he was able to secure while in the North country.

As a part of the programme for the evening, Miss Clare Powell, dramatist instructor, will read Robert Service's 'Call of the Wild" with piano accompaniment and Miss Scowcroft will read "The Cremation of Sam McGee' and "Goodbye, Little Cabin."

ROUND SAANICH PENINSULA

Where the New and the Old Meet

SHELBOURNE STREET AND CEDAR PLAINS

In his car my friend and I entered Shelbourne Street near its southern end. A light mist lay on the hills, not concealing them but softening the purple and yellow of Autumn. Between, on the right after crossing the foot of Hillside, we skirted the level stretches of the old Deans Farm, where for many years now the British skylark (not to be confounded with our native lark) has found an abiding place. The birds were brought out to Victoria by the Natural History Society with severl other kinds, but of all these alone have "made good" in the land of their forced adoption. To the native of the Old Land, especially after a long sojourn on the plains, the sight, and even more the sound, of the little bird who "sings at Heaven's gate" will often bring a feeling such as English daisies wrought in William Carey in his Indian exile or the Manitoba oak in Nicholas Garry in 1821. Carey had received a present of seeds from an English friend and, unwilling to lose anything, had shaken the bag over the ground in a shady place. There sprang up "to his inexpressible delight, an English daisy." I know not that I ever enjoyed since leaving Europe a simple pleasure so exquisite as the sight of this English daisy afforded me; not having seen one for upwards of thirty years and never expecting to see one again. Garry tells how "a beautiful oak on the banks of the water brought to my mind England and all I love, all my friends and companions. The sight of oak never fails to produce this effect and has the same influence on the feelings which a meeting with a countryman in a distant clime has on the spirits." Where the road, crossing Shelbourne at right angles, comes down the hill past the little church of St. Luke and rising out of the valley on the other side past its companion dedicated to St. Aidan continues its course to Cadboro Bay, once ran, tradition tells, the first trail through the forest by which the settlers from Christmas Hill brought themselves and their stock to town. It was a long day's journey then with fern and salal thick and high along the track through the cedars.

CEDAR PLAINS

The road now enters what was known sixty years ago as Cedar Plains. Here some of the early settlers about Victoria, the Tods and Irvings, cleared their farms. Here, too, was the old Church Farm of Bishop Hill's days, long tenanted by the late Henry King. Subdivided in the first Victoria land boom and laid out in town lots, a park and other marks of urban life, it is now chiefly given up to small holdings, but traces of the original farm and its buildings can still be discrened by the curious in such matters. The southern part of the district is drained by Bowker Creek, which runs rather picturesquely between high rolling banks where the University School grounds are and where, not many years ago, cattle and sheep grazed and rested in the shade of the maples. Northward the Plains slope to Cordova Bay, their surface waters taken by a little stream which, near its outlet, has cut deeply into the glacial drift. At different points along the valley borings or excavations have disclosed the presence of marine shells, thus confirming what the configuration of the land would suggest, that these fields and gardens were once beneath the sea. It is one of the many "raised beaches" about Victoria.

"O earth, what changes hast thou seen!

MOUNT DOUGLAS AND CORDOVA BAY

On the slopes of Mount Douglas the car enters the untouched forest and the cedar trees recall the earlier name of this striking landmark, Cedar Hill. Skirting the eastern side the old road, little changed, runs along the top of the cliffs of Cordova Bay and soon reaches the still growing settlement. Then, swinging to the left, we climb the hill a short distance to meet a level stretch of new well made road which, through an open country, brings up at last to the East road and pavement. The hillsides on either side are a blaze of color, the gold of maple mingling with the rose of dogwood. To the right below us lies all that fine agricultural lowland with its comfortable farm houses and barns. One regrets sometimes that the highway does not run through these level fields and meadows so that visitors might get an idea of what Saanich farms are as one succeeds another.

SAANICHTON AND SIDNEY

Past halls and schools and churches through the village of Saanichton, over railway tracks and between avenues of neatly trimmed trees we go. Mount Newton rises in front to the left, gradually as if unwillingly from the farms that encircle its base. Bazan Bay lies glittering to the right, and beyond the islands, Sidney and James, and so on indefinitely till the further crests are hid in the Autumn haze. The Experimental Farm, trim and neat, with its flower beds and rows of young trees and its lack of that peculiar unexpectedness which made the charm of the farmsteadings one knew as a boy, is left behind and yonder is Sidney with its smoke stacks, the little town standing out well on its lowland fringe. Leaving the main road we run off to the left to Patricia Bay with its old-fashioned church. All the country about Sidney and Resthaven and Patricia Bay is level and from force of contrast with so much of our scenery of rugged hills and alternating valleys seems strangely refreshing to the eye and mind. There is a placidity about these flat fields dotted with browsing cattle and separated by natural hedges of hardhack and willow; and the gleam of the sea as seen from so near its level with the blue of the archipelago hills and above and over all that strange ever changing, yet unchangeable, mass of Mount Baker, is peculiarly the possession of Sidney.

PATRICIA BAY TO DEEP COVVE

The forest-lined road sweeps around the low shores of Patracia Bay and past the little Indian village where a more modern type of house stands by the side of the old quaint-chimneyed lodge. Across the bay the Malahat range fades away behind Mill Bay and we once more pass through fenced farms from which trespassers are warned off with constant reiterance. The succession of notices nailed to trees and stenciled on fences becomes as great an eyesore as the commercial advertisements which disfigure our roads and surely persuade no possible purchaser. It would be interesting to have statistics of the precise financial benefits accruing from the exhortation to "Kodak as you go." Quite a little village is springing up about Deep Cove—stores, school, community hall. These buildings of a newer day strike a cheerful optimistic note in the landscape, but not to be despised are the older homesteads of soberer colors which furnish a background to the scene and a foundation to the newcomers' faith and hope. An avoidance of the main Deep Cove road and a straight run between the fences of a large farm brought us to the entrance of a narrow avenue of alders. Down the slope, with its blue water at foot, we went, the young branches whipping the cover and windshield as if in protest. Then we came out on an open space where stood a heap of stones for a fireplace, with a table and seats of solid style. One or two arbutus trees leaned over the low clap cliff as if endeavoring to mirror themselves in the waves below. On either hand were woods of fir and cedar. Opposite Mount Tuam, the south western elevation of Salt Spring Island, 1,920 feet shear from the water.

A RAMBLE AND RETURN

After lunch we wandered along the shore line looking for fossils in the cretaceous rocks with small reward. But we did see the clear rose-red leaves of a small-leaved maple. The shrub grew in a cleft in the rocks behind a projecting point and against the dark sandstone its transformed leaves glowed as a crimson flame. More intense still than the color of the leaves was that of a diminitive fungus whose groups were distantly scattered on the under surface. That the crimson of these little plants is not due to the leaf color is shown by the fact that this fungus may be found on the small-leaved maple in Summer before the Autumnal change sets in, and of as deep a tint as now. All along the beach the boulders and pebbles of which it is entirely composed are marked with more or less circular patches of a deep brown, almost black, shining as if varnished. This is one of the simple forms of algae ar seaweeds, repeating in its appearance and form of growth the habit of a fungus. In the recesses of the larger boulders and of the sandstone ledges were intercoiled masses of eel-grass, torn up by the roots from the low-tide area it inhabits. Spending all its life in the salt waters of the sea the eel-grass is nevertheless not a seaweed, but one of the higher and flowering plants. Its curious blossoms are borne low down within the protecting sheathing of its transparent ribbon-like leaves and a peculiar construction and adaptation of the pollen enables fertilization to take place beneath the waves.

THE WEST ROAD

Returning, we left our outgoing course at Patracia Bay, once known as Union Bay, and passing the tracks that connect with the long dark ferry wharf we passed that region of beautiful forest and farm that lies along the south shore. Avoiding the old hill road which looked queerly uninviting with its water-washed grade and stony surface, the highway swings around the base of Mount Newton and with a belt of forest between it and the water, and still more forest on the slopes above we run past the gateways of Summer cottages and permanent homes. Keeping to the right at the cross roads, a favorite rendezvous for picnic parties in the old days of buggies and slow motion, the Hagan farm is passed and then the Roman Catholic Mission buildings, little changed in either case with the progress of time. To the left among the trees can just be seen by the experienced eye the old church of St. Stephen, erected more than sixty years ago and the broad fields of the Thomson homestead, cut up indeed by modern changes, but still beautiful. For the next mile or so little change is visible, we are still on the Reserve. Then comes Slugget with its countryside all dotted with homes and broken with the rows of small fruits. The land slopes gently down to the sea which shines in the afternoon sun and is already receiving the craft of the evening fishermen. Beyond, the Malahat is misty blue in the haze. Over Brentwood and Tod Inlet rise the Partridge Hills and Cole Hill, and just peeping over their shoulder the summit of Mount Wark. We reach the fine piece of roadway which runs as far as the cross road to the Butchart Gardens, and along the valley between Tod Inlet and Prospect Lake we follow the new West Road, new in width and surface and grade but old in line. Some of the fine forest scenery of bygone years one misses especially a fine cedar valley, but there are compensations. I thought I caught a glimpse of the still older West Road. Certainly there is no air here or elsewhere on the Saanich Peninsula of such retrogression as is suggested by the talked-of closing of the Interurban Railway. On the contrary there seems to be the best justification of an optimistic policy. To travel round that fine territory by East and West roads compels the feeling that while the closing of the line may be tragic for some to-day it will not permanently retard the district. Other transportation facilities will come forward and they will make it pay.

CHILD'S STORY OF THE HUMAN RACE
By Uncle Ray

ROMAN PLAYS AND ACTORS

For most Romans, plays at theatres were too "tame"; they wanted to see races at the circus or other exciting events. There were some thousands of persons, however, in Rome and other cities of Italy who liked to watch plays.

Most of the theatres of Roman times were copied after those of the Greeks. They were in the open air, usually at the side of a hill. The audience sometimes had to sit or lie on the grass. In other cases, seats of wood or stone were provided. One theatre had stone seats for 20,000 persons.

Notice the masks worn by the two actors who are speaking. That was after the Greek idea. The masks had metal mouthpieces, which made the voice sound louder. They were needed because it was hard to hear in the open.

JUGGLERS AND TRAINED ANIMALS

The art of the jugglers seems to be popular in all ages. You may remember the picture we showed of women juggling in ancient Egypt. To-day you see a picture of a Roman juggler.

What is he doing? It appears that he is teaching a new trick to the monkey on the right. At the left you see a trained dog climbing a ladder.

Not only were the Romans amused by jugglers and trained animals; there were many other attractions. Wrestling matches could be counted on to draw a crowd and there were, of course, the chariot races at the circus.

One curious sight the Romans viewed at one period was a young man less than two feet high. He is said to have weighed only 17 pounds, but he had a voice so loud it might have done credit to a giant. This loud-voiced little fellow used to stand in the centre of a large arena arena and tell the crowd what event was coming next.

WHEN ROMANS DINED

The first meal had a long name ("ientaculum"), which we need not worry about. It was the same as our breakfast, being eaten a short while after a person arose. Usually it was very simple—just bread dipped in wine or sprinkled with salt. Sometimes raisins or olives were eaten with the bread.

Workingmen led a rushing life. Often they were to be seen eating their breakfast of bread on the way to work. School children sometimes bought pancakes on their way to or from school.

The second meal was the chief one in the country regions. In the cities, on the other hand, the second meal was only a cold luncheon. It was served a little after 11 in the morning. When it was over, everyone sat down or slept for an hour or so. The third meal in the cities was the same as what we call "dinner." Vegetables, fish, eggs, meat and fruits were served.

The Roman took on a Greek custom of lying down at their meals. The Latin name for a dining-rooom meant "three-couch place." That was because there were usually three couches around the table.

At the dinner, the rich Roman was always to be seen lying on his side, facing the table, while he ate or drank wine. The wine was by custom mixed with water. Drinking-horns shaped something like an ice cream cone were often used. There was a little hole at the small end; when this was uncorked, the wine dropped into the man's mouth.

Women were sometimes allowed to lie down while eating, but children were supposed always to "sit up at table."

In wealthy households two or three or four dining-rooms were to be found. There was usually a hot weather dining-room in the open air. Such places might be covered with lattice-work and vines. In the one we picture, there were two couches instead of three.

HOMES NEAR THE COAST

Many of the richer Romans had homes near the sea coast. They went out to these homes to escape from the noise and bustle of city life. (There were, of course, no street cars or autos in Rome; but the rattling of carts, the shouts of shopkeepers and the confusion and jostling in the market-place made it all too noisy.)

Those who were poor had little or no choice about staying in the crowded city. They had to take what came.

The first thing you will notice is that it has water all around it. As a matter of fact, it was built on an artificial island. Near the water's edge are statues. To the right is a pillar with a statue of Hercules on top. On a stone below sits a fisherman. Perhaps he is a slave, trying to catch fish for the master's dinner.

The house itself is of two stories. A grove of trees keeps one side of it in shade. Probably it has a bathroom inside; but that was uncommon in early Roman times. The custom was to bathe arms and legs each day, and to take a real bath once in nine days at a public bathing place. In later times the finer mansions had bathrooms.

One of the rich Romans who owned a fine house outside the city was in the habit of gathering his guests at a certain spot. Musicians would play, and then wonder of wonders! Wild beasts would rush into view. The animals were fenced in, however, so no harm came to the guests.

How do you suppose the master of the house worked that trick? Probably he had trained the beasts to expect food when they heard music.

ROMANS AND THEIR WINE

To jump on hundreds of bunches of grapes and tramp the juice out with their bare feet was work done by some of the Roman slaves. Sometimes slave children were set at this work.

The juice was wanted for wine. I suppose you know that if fresh grape juice is allowed to stand in open jars for nine days or so it will ferment and become wine. The Romans used jars which often held more than a hundred gallons. They were large enough for two or three children to get in at once. I wonder if they were ever used for playing hide-and-seek?

A wine jar and the stand which held it up

Sometimes the grape vines were held up by poles and cross-pieces, as is the case almost everywhere nowadays. In Roman times it was also a common custom to let the vines grow up the trunks of trees and around the branches. One Latin poet speaks of "marrying the vine to the elm." It often looked as if grapes were growing right on the trees.

One of our pictures shows a wine-cart from which two men are drawing wine. The wine is in a large skin container. It is being drawn into jars of an odd shape. Our other picture shows how such jars were sometimes made to "stand up."

There was another way in which such jars were sometimes kept straight up. That was to sink the bottom parts in the cellar earth. By that means the wine was kept cool.

EMPERORS RULE ROME

The republic lasted several hundred years. It was a time when a great deal was happening: All around the Mediterranean power was won, even in Greece. The Greeks put up one of the hardest fights of all, but some of the cities quarreled among themselves, which helped Rome.

Julius Caesar is the most famous Roman general. He led armies against the "barbarians" of northern France and against nations in the East. Caesar was killed because he was suspected of wanting to become emperor of Rome.

The death of Caesar, however, did not keep the republic from coming to an end. The first emperor was called Augustus Caesar. (Caesar was pronounced like "kaiser"; the title of "czar" also came from Caesar.)

While Augustus was ruling, one country he thought little about was the scene of an event which was to have great influence on Europe. That country was Palestine, and it was ruled by Rome. The event was the birth of Jesus of Nazareth. The Romans heard nothing about it at the time.

It was the habit of emperors to have their "pictures" put on coins. No doubt the likeness was usually very poor, but there was supposed to be honor in it anyway.

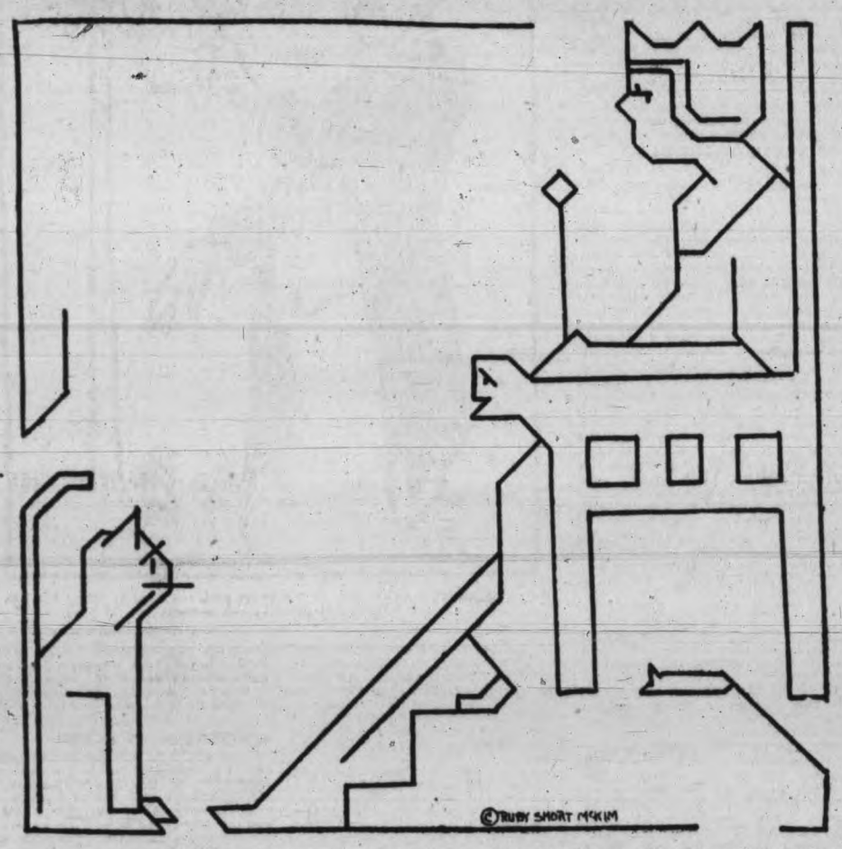
FEATURES FOR SMALLER FOLKS

The Nursery Rhyme Quiltie



NUMBER SEVEN

Pussy cat, pussy cat,
Where have you been?
I've been to London
To visit the queen.
Pussy cat, pussy cat,
What did you there?
I frightened a little mouse
Under her chair.

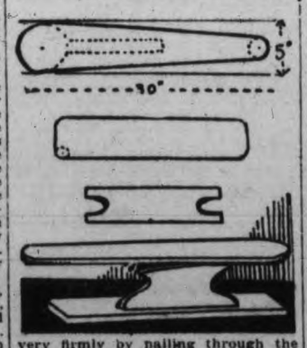
Ah, ha! We have royalty with us this week, and next week the king will arrive. It's strange company that live together on a little bed-quilt, but they come from the strange land of Nursery Rhymes—barber, plenan, thief and king. Trace them all carefully and a happy family you will have.

Instructions: To change the drawing into a quilt block, get a smoothly ironed piece of muslin eight inches square and a piece of carbon paper. Lay the muslin down on a flat surface. Place the carbon paper over the muslin and the drawing on top of that. Then stick enough pins around the edge to hold firmly and then lay a ruler along the lines and trace carefully. This will transfer the pattern onto the muslin block. Then you can outline stitch the lines on the muslin and have the pattern in thread. Remember there are twenty drawings in all, and you will want every one to make your quilt complete, so be careful not to lose a single one.

SLEEVE BOARD

A sleeve board will make a welcome gift to mother or sister, for ironing shirtwaists and pressing suits is hard work at best, and this is a very convenient help. Before starting work be sure to consult the one you are making it for to see whether or not 36 inches or 30 inches will be the most acceptable length to make the board. The top and bottom pieces are two one-inch boards, which have been carefully planed smooth. Be sure that the pieces selected are free from knots, or the resin will come out with the heat. Mark out the pattern of the top board as suggested in the drawing and then carefully saw to the mark with a keyhole saw. Sandpaper the ends and edges very carefully.

Next square up the bottom board, and then prepare the center piece, which is of the shape shown and should be at least two inches thick. In order to have the center piece in exactly the right place, mark out the position it should take on the top and bottom pieces and then fasten very firmly by nailing through the bottom piece as well as from the top.



Then be sure that all the corners are well rounded and the edges sandpapered smooth to prevent snagging any fabric that may be ironed on it. This ought to be left without varnish, and if necessary padded before use.

The Sydney Harbor Bridge will be the largest in the world, having a clear span of 1,650 feet, and the roadways, railway track and footbridges having a combined width of 150 feet. The two main arches will be placed ninety-eight feet six inches apart and the construction will require 50,388 tons of steel. The central 600 feet of the span will provide a clear headway of 170 feet above mean high water.

Sensitive plants in the Tropics protect themselves from cattle by drooping and seeming to die. There are also sharp spurs on the stalks which prick the tongues of hungry animals.

Last Week's Who

THE RHINOCEROS

In common with the lion and the elephant, the rhinoceros lives in the vast deserts of Asia and Africa. Its appearance is chiefly remarkable, from having a horn on its nose, sometimes three feet in length. The body of this animal is almost as large as that of the elephant, but his legs are much shorter; in length from nose to tail he is some twelve feet and he is almost as big around.

The rhinoceros can run very swiftly and from his strength and impenetrable hide, he is capable of rushing through the thickets with resistless fury, almost every obstacle being quickly overturned in his track. The natives say that sometimes he feels so good that he will poke his horn into the ground and then go plunging along for a long way, laying a furrow as deep as a plough would do.

The skin of the rhinoceros is laid on in pieces like the jointed armor that ancient knights used to wear, and these pieces are so thick and tough that only the bullet from a high-powered rifle can penetrate it. However, at the place where these thick pieces join together, the skin is very sensitive and even mosquitoes can torment the great beast. To escape them he often wallows deep in the mud with just his snout sticking out. Then is when the natives surround him, and before he can extricate himself, they get him ensnared.

Sea Food and Fertilizers Used By Mankind

Unknown to most people, a new word has been added to the dictionary by the establishment, in recent months, of giant seaweed farms on the Californian coast. "Mariculture," the word in question, will soon be as widely used in conversation as agriculture, horticulture, or any of the other names denoting the cultivation of crops.

In only five years the Californian seaweed harvest has grown to be one of the most important industries on the Pacific Coast. More than half a million tons of the seaweed are now harvested annually, and it is expected that in a year or two this output will be increased, by improved methods, including the adoption of elaborate cutting machinery, to 2,000,000 tons a year, says a writer in Tit-Bits.

FOOD FOR MICROBES

From seaweed science has enabled us to obtain a number of products, including agar-agar, a jelly-like substance invaluable to the medical profession; potash; cattle food; manure; and fibre for use in upholstery and similar work.

Agar-agar, which is semi-transparent and shiny in appearance, is the best-known food for microbes, many varieties of which thrive on it exclusively. This is its most important use, but it is also employed as a curative agent in certain kinds of wounds or injuries, and experts predict that in time it will displace many of those drugs which, while they are valuable in different ways, often have baneful after-effects. In addition, it forms a constituent of jellies and soups, and is used for making molds in plaster of Paris, clarifying certain liquors, beer and wines among them, and for stiffening the texture of silk and other materials.

Another seaweed product is a form of isinglass far superior to the vegetable substance; while photographic films, iodine, and algin, a particularly sticky kind of adhesive paste, are being made in increasing quantities from the same source.

In the Californian industry the State Fish and Game Commission has fixed close seasons during which no kelp may be cut. Kelp thrives best in a depth of about seventy feet of water, the foliage being held upright by tiny air bulbs, one at the base of each leaf, which ensure that it grows towards the surface. The dense masses are cut with scythe-like knives lowered to a depth of six feet, an apparatus similar to the mechanical reaper seen on farms dragging the seaweed on to the deck of the harvest ship. Thirty tons an hour can be harvested in this way by a crew of five men.

WOMEN DIVERS

In Japan the cultivation of seaweed is an industry of considerable antiquity, although it was not properly organized until recently. The Japanese kelp grows at the bottom of the sea, and is only a few feet in length. It is collected by women divers, who go overboard with sharp knives, gather a bunch of seaweed in their arms, cut it off with a dexterous sweep of the knife, and return with it to the top, making dozens of descents in the course of a day. But in spite of these more or less primitive methods, Japan exports enormous quantities of agar-agar every year, sending hundreds of tons to America, Great Britain and France, at a price ranging from $500 to $700 a ton.

Who is that long-haired kind of sheep,
Whose wool is almost two feet deep?
Its name starts with a double letter.
Sure queer! I think just one is better.

To make sure of your guess, cut and arrange the puzzle pieces before you paste onto card board. You will always find a narrow line for the outside of the "WHO" which makes it easier, and by cutting along that line after mounted, you can have a new animal for your "ZOO" every week. The verse will tip you off to the secret.

BEDTIME STORY
Uncle Wiggily is Lost

Copyright, 1924, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate

(By Howard R. Garis)

One day, when Uncle Wiggily hopped home to his hollow stump bungalow, feeling rather sad because he had found no adventure, he saw Nurse Jane bending over an open trunk.

"What are you going to do, Miss Fuzzy Wuzzy?" asked the rabbit gentleman. "Has some one sent you a whole trunk full of good things, and are you unpacking them?"

"Nothing like that!" laughed the muskrat lady housekeeper. "I am just putting a few things in this trunk to take away with me. I am going to spend a few days with Aunt Lettie, the lady goat. And my back aches so I don't know what to do. Oh, dear!"

"That's too bad!" exclaimed Uncle Wiggily, and he felt so sad about Nurse Jane that his pink nose twinkled backward. "Let me finish packing that trunk for you. Just put on a chair all the things you want packed, and I'll put them in and lock the trunk. Then it will be ready for the express elephant."

"That is very kind of you," said Nurse Jane, "and I thank you very much. It will be a great help to me. Just put all these things in the trunk, press them down tightly and lock the cover. I'll lie down and rest my aching back."

Uncle Wiggily scratched first one ear and then the other as he looked at the pile of things on chairs, near the trunk.

"How am I ever going to get all those things in?" he wondered.

But he pushed and he crowded and he shoved and he pulled and he tugged and jumped on top of the trunk with both paws, and at last everything went in.

"Hu, hum!" murmured the bunny gentleman, "I think I'll take a little sleep while I'm waiting for the Express Elephant to come and take the trunk."

You and I can jump in and nibble his ears.'

Now just about the time Uncle Wiggily went to sleep, Miss Fuzzy Wuzzy awakened, and her aching back felt much better. She sat up, rubbed her eyes and was going to see how well Uncle Wiggily was doing with her packing when, all of a sudden, she heard, under the window, a voice saying:

"Come on, Mr. Fox. I know where Uncle Wiggily is. He's in a room, all by himself, packing a trunk. You and I can jump in on him and nibble his ears."

"All right, Mr. Wolf. I'm with you!" growled another voice. Nurse Jane looked out of her window in time to see the Fox and Wolf leap in the wondow of the room where the trunk was.

"Get out of there! Get away!" cried the muskrat lady, and she shouted so loudly that, no sooner had the Fox and Wolf jumped in the room, than they jumped out again. And as soon as they had jumped out, Nurse Jane ran in.

"Oh, but I am too late!" she cried, sadly. "Uncle Wiggily is lost! He is gone! The Fox and Wolf must have grabbed him and jumped out of the window with him before I got here. Oh, dear, Uncle Wiggily is lost! He is gone!" cried Nurse Jane.

The Police Dog came, and so did Uncle Butter and Mr. Whitewash the Polar Bear, but they couldn't find Uncle Wiggily. Then the Express Elephant came to take the trunk. And, as he lifted it up there was a funny noise inside and a voice cried:

"Let me out! Let me out!" And when they opened the trunk, there was Uncle Wiggily safe and sound. "I went to sleep in the trunk, and the lid fell down, I guess!" laughed the bunny.

"It's a good thing you did," chuckled Nurse Jane, "else the Wolf and Fox might have gotten you!" So the bunny jumped out of the trunk, it was closed again, and locked, and sent away and Uncle Wiggily went to stay with Uncle Butter while the housekeeper was on a visit. And the Fox and Wolf went hungry to their dens. But if the golf ball doesn't bounce up and hit the milk pitcher on the nose, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's peanuts.

Last Minute News on Stocks and Financial Affairs

STOCKS COME BACK AS WEEK CLOSES

New York, Oct. 4 (By R. P. Clark & Co., Ltd.)—No particular price changes in to-day's short session, but dealings were rather small and seem to report in great part an evening up of commitments at the week-end. The latest domestic political development seems to have further curbed the outside participation on the buying side of the market. There have been many domestic and foreign happenings of late, but the market has not been responsive to same, and this quite naturally has been somewhat of a disappointment to holders of stocks, and at the same time has stimulated the activities of contingent bearishly inclined. It is quite likely that the market will continue to be somewhat of a trading affair at least until more powerful bullish factors assert themselves and are of sufficient weight to generate broader buying power.

New York, Oct. 4 (By B. C. Bond Corporation)—With the German loan imminent, it was not to be expected that the banking interests would permit the market to become demoralized, even though the entire business structure of the country was not at the best from an economic standpoint.

Consequently stocks developed a considerably improved tone in the week-end session and a rallying tendency was the predominant characteristic of the general list. Some further selling had to be absorbed in the early dealings, representing the adjustment of commission house accounts which had been impaired by the substantial setback of the preceding day. After this liquidation had been completed a general recovery set in, carrying prices generally higher both in the rail and industrial lists.

Weekly mercantile reviews reported increased activity in most lines, with main trend of business still upward. In view of this steady expansion many observers predicted that the levels seen on the current reaction would be the lowest reached before election time.

Rails were stimulated by persistent accumulation of standard dividend-paying stocks like Del and Hudson, Atlantic Coast line and Lehigh Valley.

Chandler was weak, selling at a new 1924 low. Other motor stocks held well on reports of greater optimism in the industry than at any time since last Spring. Production is expanding slowly and the industry as a whole is producing approximately 30,000 more pleasure cars than in the early Summer. This represents a gain in output of fifteen per cent in three months. Evidence that the retail situation is growing better as business improves was had when Studebaker's new models were announced in September. In three days sufficient orders were booked to keep the plants at capacity for about three weeks. Nash Motors is oversold to the extent of 7,800 cars or considerably over a month's output, with current production breaking all records. Beth. Steel maintained exceptional activity at the best levels of the recovery. It was reported that an important group which had been bearish on Beth. had reversed their position on account of the company's favorable position relative to proposed mergers in the industry.

With the farmer well on the way to prosperity, the problem now seems to be to lift the industrial sections of the country out of the mire of discouragement into which they seem to be slipping.

GRAIN MARKETS RALLY AGAIN

Chicago, Oct. 4 (By R. P. Clark & Co., Ltd.)—Wheat—To-day's clearances were 4,189,000 bushels wheat and flour with Galveston shipments totaling 2,725,000. This is a colorful commentary on the general conditions abroad and indicated that the possibility of any material decline in prices is extremely remote. New sales were 1,000,000 and Northwest advices said the East was ¼ to ½ lower, maintaining most of its big recent advance, while Winnipeg prices soared on the bad weather and the holding attitude of the loading pools. With foreign news showing no change we continue to advise the buying of wheat on all setbacks.

Corn rallied materially from a sharp decline early. The news was not much different than recently and speculative interest in corn is narrow with the crowd rather inclined to back away from the fairly liberal country offerings. The cash demand was slow with prices steady to ½ cent off. While the market has little at the moment to incite new buying we think declines will be small and would buy on any fair setbacks.

Oats closed a little higher all around. This market is an investment proposition and would take hold around this level. Ultimately think prices will appreciate materially as this grain is far too cheap compared to other grains, especially when the generally bullish world's conditions in all grains is considered.

Rye made good gains and the high prices do not stop foreign buying as sales were 500,000 bushels at the seaboard. On the reactions we would advise buying rye but would not ignore quick profits at this level.

Chicago, Oct. 4 (By B.C. Bond Corporation)—News on wheat was all one way to-day and the market touched new highs on the crop and held practically all advances. The requirements of foreign countries with the reduced yield in Canada and the Argentina harvest months away, merely confirm the serious aspect of the world situation with respect to bread grains. Export business continues on a big scale, New York reporting between a million and a half and two million wheat sold to-day.

The rain and snow in the Canadian Northwest will delay threshing for several days and the Winnipeg market responded with a sharp advance. Corn and oats were active and higher on the strength in wheat and prospects for much colder weather over the corn country over week-end. While we see only eventually higher prices for wheat and oats, we would not buy except on depressions. Corn will prove sensitive to weather conditions for some time, although the strength in other grains will probably prove the chief underlying factor.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG WHEAT SOARS UP AGAIN

Winnipeg, Oct. 4.—The short session of the wheat market was again very bullish this morning, with extremely large volume of trade being worked in all grains. Wheat was strong from the start. Unfavorable weather conditions throughout the Canadian West and continuance of bull news from abroad being the chief factors. At the peak, October established a new high at 162¼ and closed around the high with a net gain of 6⅛ cents. November finished 5⅝ higher, December 4⅝ and May 4⅝. The coarse grains were also showing strength and made good advances, although nothing like the sensational gains of the past few days.

VICTORIA STOCKS

Local stocks showed little change from yesterday's closing levels. Trading was quiet with a very small turnover. The only feature was a telegram received from R. F. Hill, manager of the Lake View Mines, as follows: "Four feet of ore in face of west drift this morning; all quartz well mineralized; the strongest showing yet encountered. Walls perfect and strike to a degree that of Cabin vein. The face is three hundred feet east of cook house, therefore shoot should be four hundred feet long.—R. F. Hill."

GERMANY RESPONSIBLE FOR DROPPED VALUES

Washington, Oct. 4.—A decision handed down by the German-American mixed claims commission to-day holds that Germany under the treaty of Berlin is responsible to American heirs of estates in Germany for the depreciation in value of the property between 1917, when war-time legislation was passed in Germany prohibiting the transfer of any property belonging to enemy aliens and payments in cash to the United States, and 1920, when such legislation was repealed.

Trade Reviews Find Business Much Improved

New York, Oct. 4—Marshall Field & Co., in the firm's weekly business review covering conditions in most of the continent through their affiliated stores, say to-day that current wholesale distribution of dry goods was in excess of last week and of the same week a year ago. Collections show a slight improvement over last year.

Bradstreets' report to-day finds the outstanding developments of the week are the conservative commodity price advances and the fact that bank clearings were the largest in any quarter in four years and monthly failures and liabilities smallest since 1920.

Dun's review notes increased activity in various lines with the main business trend still upward though marked by some irregularity.

GOOD QUALITY GRAIN RECORD MAINTAINED

Seventy-five Per Cent of Inspection Run No. 3 or Better

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 4.—That seventy-five per cent of the wheat inspected on Canadian Pacific lines Thursday had Grade No. 3 Northern or better, keeping up the record for good quality grain established this season was shown by figures obtained to-day at the offices of the company. For the day there were 972 of the company's cars graded and of these 853 were wheat, 640 running contract grades.

Marketing for the day exceeded the 2,500,000 bushels mark, comprising 838,886 bushels from Manitoba, 1,071,662 from Saskatchewan and 764,529 from Alberta. Last season for the corresponding day there were 3,062,814 bushels marketed.

Cars loaded Thursday numbered 1,456 against 1,657 in 1923, comprising 476 Manitoba, 622 Saskatchewan and 358 Alberta. Delivered at Field for shipment to Vancouver there were 153 Alberta cars, while unloaded at the Pacific Coast for the day were 113 cars, compared with thirty-four only on October 2 last season. Unthe day were 792 cars.

U.S. HOUSE GETS MANGANESE FIELDS

Moscow, Oct. 4.—The offer of the banking house of W. Harriman & Company of New York for possession of the rich manganese fields of Georgia, has been accepted by the Georgian and Russian Governments, in principle, and it remains only to draw up the details of the contract, involving several million dollars and covering a period of twenty-five years.

The contract gives the Harrimans the monopoly on the exportation of manganese from Russia, and the fields covered in the agreement cover an area of ten thousand acres. It is estimated that they contain nearly a hundred million tons of ore, sufficient to supply the world for fifty years.

AUCTION ASSETS OF KAMLOOPS COPPER CO.

Kamloops, B.C., Oct. 4.—The auction sale of the property and assets of the Kamloops Copper Company took place yetserday afternoon at the mine, the authorized trustee, D. B. Johnstone, acting as auctioneer.

The property was sold to H. J. Sigel of Virginia, Minn., one of the bondholders of the company, for $17,500.

PROMOTED

Toronto, Oct. 4.—D. A. Cameron, manager of the Toronto branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, has been appointed assistant general manager of the bank.

Winnipeg, Oct. 4.—Light falls of rain or snow over the week-end are predicted for the Canadian prairies in to-day's weather forecast.

North and northeast winds, cold and cloudy weather have been prevailing to-day. There was snow last night in many sections.

At Regina to-day the temperature was 35 and it was snowing hard; at Saskatoon 32, clearing; Moose Jaw 30, snow; Calgary 35, clear, rained all yesterday and during night; Edmonton 35, cloudy, rained yesterday and last night.

Daughter (at the end of the opera): "Isn't it too bad, daddy? The man who wrote this piece died two weeks ago.

Father: "Did they find the murderer?"

According to recent stories in the papers, prison is becoming popular. A man was recently imprisoned for the eighth time. The governor, on making his rounds, recognized the man, and said, "What! You here again?"

ISSUES WARNING ON FINANCIAL MERGERS

Labor Member For Winnipeg Sees Danger in Concentration of Power

Regina, Sask., Oct. 4.—Concentration of financial power in the hands of a few groups was an important development of the Dominion which should be watched very closely by the Labor movement, said J. S. Woodsworth, M.P., for Central Winnipeg, in addressing the Central Branch of the Labor Party here last night. Ten years ago there were 34 or 35 chartered banks in Canada and now there are only 13 or 14, and four of these controlled 70 per cent. of the business, he said. "There is not much doubt the smaller banks will continue to drop into the hands of the larger institutions or fail," declared Mr. Woodsworth. "Many of the bank directors are also directors of as many as 12 or 13 industrial organizations, making a net work of interlocking directorates lending one to the other.

"There is not the slighest doubt that the big financial institutions run the Government, banks, the financial institutions, and Great commercial organizations, as well as the educational institutions," he added.

West Awaiting Money From Crop Trade Reports Say

Winnipeg, Oct. 4.—The weekly trade report of the Canadian Credit Men's Trust Association Limited states:

Halifax, conditions unchanged, improvement looked for when cooler weather sets in. A good Fall trade is expected in the fruit business.

Toronto, wholesale trade continuing the same with prospects bright for the future. Retail trade quiet with increase in business expected when cool weather sets in. Collections good.

Winnipeg, sales in various wholesale lines showing increase and a considerable volume is going through. Retail trade reports no material change over last week. Collections fair.

Regina, wholesale trade quiet for this season of the year. Retail trade shows slight improvement over last week. Collections slow, but improvement expected.

Saskatoon, both wholesale and retail trade report business quiet. Threshing now general and improvement expected. Collections poor.

Calgary, conditions in both wholecirculation from crop collections are sale and retail trade show improvement with better conditions looked for as soon as threshing finished. Collections improving.

Edmonton, with no money yet in above the average. Improvement in retail conditions looked for this Winter. Trade generally considered good and prospects brighter for the future.

British Columbia, all lines of trade both wholesale and retail report business fairly quiet. Collections slow to fair.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY PRIVATE BILLS

NOTICE is hereby given that the time limited by the Rule of the House for presenting petitions for Private Bills will expire on Wednesday, 5th day of November, 1924. Private Bills must be presented to the House on or before Monday, the 17th day of November, 1924. Reports from Standing or Select Committees on Private Bills must be made on or before Monday, the 24th day of November, 1924.

W. H. LANGLEY,
Clerk, Legislative Assembly.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Protection Work at Steveston Jetty, B.C.," will be received at this office until 12 o'clock noon (daylight saving), Friday, September 19, 1924, for the construction of protection work at Steveston, Fraser River, B.C.

Plans and forms of contract can be seen and specification and forms of tender obtained at this Department, at the offices of the District Engineers, Post Office Building, New Westminster, B.C., Post Office Building, Victoria, B.C., and at the Post Offices, Vancouver, B.C., and Steveston, B.C.

Tenders will not be considered unless made on printed forms supplied by the Department and in accordance with conditions contained therein.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Minister of Public Works, equal to 10 per cent. of the amount of the tender. Bonds of the Dominion of Canada or Bonds of the Canadian National Railway Company will also be accepted as security, or Bonds and a cheque if required to make up an odd amount.

Note.—Blue prints can be obtained at this Department by depositing an accepted cheque for the sum of $20.00, payable to the order of the Minister of Public Works, which will be returned if the intending bidder submit a regular bid.

By order,
S. E. O'BRIEN,
Secretary.
Department of Public Works,
Ottawa, August 29, 1924.

PRIVATE BILL NOTICES

NOTICE

Notice is hereby given that an application will be made to the Legislative Assembly of the Province of British Columbia at its next session by the Corporation of the City of Victoria for an Act (to be known as the "Victoria City Act, 1924"), providing for the following matters, and giving to the said Corporation and the Municipal Council thereof the following powers, namely:

1. Enabling the Council to exchange tax sale lands for other lands within the City, and providing that all lands received in exchange shall be deemed tax sale lands for all purposes, said powers to be retroactive from January 1, 1923.
2. Enabling the Council by by-law:
   (a) To impose and collect license fees from any person or persons owning or keeping a vehicle or vehicles for hire a sum not exceeding $250.00 for every 6 months for each vehicle having a seating capacity of more than 8 passengers.
   (b) To authorize the regulation and inspection of electric and other wiring, to levy and collect fees for cost of inspection and to require wiring permits to be obtained and payment of inspection fees made by contractors or owners before commencement of wiring installation.
   (c) To enable Council to enter into agreements with any person or corporation fixing upon a definite sum as annual assessment for taxation purposes of any improvements, same to be subject to approval of electors as provided under Section 213 of the "Municipal Act."
3. Providing that plans relating to street widening, rights-of-way and easements acquired by City within City boundaries shall, for land registration purposes, require verification by the City Engineer only.
4. Providing that the "Fire Departments Hours of Labor Act" shall not apply to the City of Victoria.
5. Enabling Council to dispose of any of its tax sale lands by auction, or otherwise, without newspaper advertising now required by "Municipal Act."
6. Enabling Council in the sale of any parcel of tax sale lands to accept any part of sale price thereof in the form of second mortgage on said parcel after improvements placed thereon at such value as in opinion of Council is sufficient to secure amount of said mortgage; and enabling Council to enter into agreements with purchasers, and others, to secure said amount.
7. Enabling Council by two-thirds vote of Council to enter into agreements with any person or corporation fixing upon a definite sum as annual assessment for taxation purposes of any lands or lands and improvements for a period not to exceed fifteen years.

H. S. PRINGLE,
City Solicitor.

— LAKEVIEW —

The Company's Engineer, Mr. R. F. Hill, advises by wire as follows: "Four feet of ore in face of West Drift this morning. All quartz. Well mineralized. The strongest showing yet encountered. Walls perfect and strike is same as Cabin Vein. The face is 300 feet east of Cookhouse and therefore shoot should be 400 feet long."

Do not delay to get your application in. Lakeview is without doubt one of the most promising prospects now developing in the Stewart District.

WIFE PICKS OUT ALLEGED SLAYERS OF HER HUSBAND

Montreal, Oct. 4.—Picking the men out of fifteen prisoners yesterday, Mrs. F. X. Beauvis said she believed Jack Currie, 20, and William Davies, 26, who are under arrest with two other men charged with stealing an automobile, were members of the gang of four who shot and killed her husband, the postman-restaurant keeper, in his premises on La Salle Road, Verdun, on September 8 last.

DEMPSEY WORRIES OVER HIS FORTUNE IN RING AFFAIRS

practically knocked him out in a round.

You might go back farther, to John L. Sullivan. John was a high liver and he didn't fight often. He was fat and slow when he met Corbett, had forgotten everything he ever knew about fighting and was as helpless as a punching bag in the ring. He didn't land once on Corbett, and Corbett, laughing at him, dancing around him, drawing him out in clumsy rushes until he was sick and winded, cut him down without any trouble at all.

Dempsey can look back at the whol eline of heavyweight champions who preceded him and see that they all, except little Tommy Burns, went to defeat through losing their ability by not fighting.

FITZ ALSO ONE

Even Bob Fitzsimmons made that mistake. He stayed out of the ring a couple of years after beating Corbett, and then came back to fight Jeffries. He underestimated the young fighter and over estimated his own fighting condition, and was knocked out. Later Bob did a lot of fighting, knocked out Sharkey and Ruhlin and then lost to Jeffries again. But age had gotten Fitz by that time.

Of those who were nearly champions the great Peter Jackson knocked out Frank Slavin in England and then went the pace and did no more fighting. He was a shell when he tried to come back by meeting young Jim Jeffries. Jeff knocked Peter down and when he got up helpless Jeff refused to hit him again and asked the referee to stop the bout.

It is the same in other weight classes, Benny Leonard isn't going to last much longer as champion unless he fights oftener.

MUST WORK HARD

Even athletes have the same trouble. Charlie Paddock, after a long layoff, trained hard for the Olympic Games. He strained a leg muscle in the Drake relays, and it was not until he had run several more races that he came back to his best form in the national championships, where he won the two sprints and equalled his own world's records.

An athlete of any kind may last a long time if he has plenty of competition, but no athlete is good enough to lay off for long periods and then come out again in his best form. A Babe Ruth must play ball through every season. One year out for Ruth would mean out of the game. A Willie Hoppe can hold a championship as long as he has competition, but Hoppe would be like any other champion if he stopped playing for a year.

Red Devils of Kelso

Prehistoric Animals, Fishes and Birds

By Thomas Deasy

If the residents of the neighboring State of Washington are desirous of going into hysterics over the legendary and traditional stories of the natives, it would be advisable to remember that Vancouver Island does not cover a vast extent of territory, which has been pretty thoroughly gone over, without finding any traces of "hairy monsters," other than the "black bears," which, at times, stand on their hind feet, and go through other gyrations.

The history of every State in the Union, and of the Provinces of the Dominion will show that the Indian recedes, as the white man advances. Our so-called "civilization" brings about the destruction, or the assimilation of the Indian; but it is out of all reason even to imagine that the remnants of a race "covered with hair, and eight feet in height," ever lived on the islands of the Pacific, and now find their homes in the wilds of the neighboring State of Washington.

LEGENDARY BEINGS

It is a fact, that the Indians, in their traditions, and legendary lore, speak of imaginary human beings, beasts and birds, of great size, "which roamed over the land, in ages past." In fact, the Indians are still of the opinion that we have monsters, on land and at sea, to compare with the "Red Devils of Kelso." Residence in this country during sixty-five years, with close association and understanding of the Indian, is a criterion for understanding many of the real and imaginary stories of the Indians.

In their homes, throughout different sections of the country, we have seen representatives of animals, birds and fish, carved in wood and stone, around which they weave legends both interesting and instructive. At their "Potlaches," natives appeared, dressed in bear skins, with masks of wood over their faces, which would give them the appearance of "hairy monsters," where they appeared, tearing the children from the arms of the mothers, and running off with them into the darkness—a part in the making of "The Hamatsa," or prospective chief of a tribe.

A POTLATCH

Some thirty years ago it was our lot to receive orders to attend a Potlach on one of the lonely islands in the North, in order to report on the sayings and doings of a tribe of Indians, still retaining their ancient customs, which had been condemned by law. They were assembled at a place named "Guyasdyms," away from the course of vessels, and had again, to all appearance, returned to their former nomadic condition, dressed only in blankets, and engaged in performing ceremonies which meant reverting to the ancient customs whereby the ideas and ideals of the white race were cast aside, temporarily, and the glories of ancient days were again inculcated in young and old.

Without going into full details of the proceedings, which occupied several days, a few of the ceremonies might be mentioned. The prospective "Chief" was turned out into the night and was expected to take to the hills followed by a number of hunters. He was expected to remain in the woods for days and nights without means of subsistence and be hunted from place to place to prove his endurance. Should the "Hamatsa" meet a solitary human being, he would attack the wayfarer, and bite a piece of flesh from his arm. During the daytime, the potlaching of blankets went on. At night all, with the exception of the prospective "Hamatsa," and the hunters, assembled in a large lodge, lighted by a huge bonfire, burning in the centre of the huge building. Singing and dancing went on nightly while awaiting the return of the "Hamatsa." Many wonderful and mysterious ceremonies were carried out during the daytime and at night.

A REAPPEARANCE

On the third night, after the disappearance of the "Hamatsa," a noise was heard on the shingled roof of the structure. Part of the roof was torn off and a human form, almost naked dropped to the earthen floor. Hair hung down his back; his face was covered with what appeared to be blood. He seemed to be insane, and showed exhaustion from his experience in the woods and hills. Through the doorway a number of men appeared. On their heads were wooden representations of the heads of bears. Their bodies were covered with bearskins and they appeared to be "eight feet in height." They surrounded the "Hamatsa." The principal—the "Hamatsa"— then appeared to desire to jump into the huge fire. The "Bears" surrounded him and kept him away from the furnace. The "Hamatsa" then ran around the floor, apparently desiring to take a piece of flesh from the arm of some of the spectators. He appeared to select me as one of his victims. I was sitting on a log of wood on the earthen floor, when the "Hamatsa" ran hither and thither until he stood before me making grimaces and gnashing his teeth. His face was covered with streaks of red. His hair was hanging down and he had all the appearance of a madman. It was not a very enviable position to be in about that time. I had been through three days and nights, watching the orgies going on. However, the 'Hamatsa" did not attack me. He ran to where the daughter of a chief sat. Taking her in his arms he rushed out of the lodge. The men "dressed as bears," then took babies out of the arms of mothers and rushed out with them into the darkness. Excitement was intense. Screaming and shouting, the whole of the people present appeared excited. I thought the best proceeding on my part was to remain seated in front of the fire and wait for what might happen. After a short interval the people returned. Speeches were in order. Apparently the "Hamatsa" had fulfilled the requirements of one seeking to become a chief. Everyone appeared satisfied also, and the giving out of presents took place. I was given a piece of a blanket. This was afterwards taken away and I was presented with a twenty-five cent piece. A name was given me and it was understood that I was, there and then, a member of the tribe.

READY ARMED

It is possible that the Indians thought I went through the ceremony without endeavoring to arrest the "Hamatsa" when he threatened to dislodge a portion of my anatomy with his teeth; but I was "glued to the log of wood." In my pocket was a "six-shooter." It ran through my mind, at the time, that this weapon might prove useful should the "Hamatsa" endeavor to take a piece of flesh from my arm. However, nothing happened to bring about interference on my part while my occupation, at the time, was to note the proceedings.

In late years, the "Potlatch" has been prescribed. I understand the Indians have disposed of the "bear head, wooden masks and the bearskins." It is possible that the natives have continued their ceremonies in the neighborhood of Kelso, Washington. It is also possible that some persons, who purchased the paraphernalia were playing a practical joke on a number of "prospectors" in "the hills of Kelso." The "hairy monsters" seen during the ceremonies at "Guyasdums" appeared to be of great height. With the bearskins over their bodies and the wooden bear heads they were monsters in my sight. I have been among the natives until a short time ago.

IMAGINATION RUNS RIOT

Living on their reserves and associating with them longer than any other white man in this country and understanding their traditions, legends and stories, one had the opportunity of noting many remarkable customs, habits and characteristics of the natives. They are expert imitators. Their imagination appears to run riot at times. The older generation retains many ideas and ideals of the past. Oftimes many of them resent, in many ways, what is considered the usurpation of their territory by another race. In their peculiar manner they are prone to play practical jokes, which may appear childish, while their meaning has some significance little understood by strangers. We have heard stories of the appearance of huge "Sea Dogs" along the coast. The totem poles show representations of huge monsters. The "Eagle" and the "Raven" are granted by them supernatural power. We have many traditions and legends of the appearance of men, birds, beasts and fish, far surpassing in size the "Red Devils of Kelso, Washington." Those who make a hurried visit to the homes of the natives and consider them stoical and lacking in understanding, have little experience of a people resourceful and law abiding, yet residing on the confines of cities and towns or in the wilds of this continent. The Indian may be disappearing in many parts of America but it would be well if those who speak and those who write of the Indian understood how many of the natives are endeavoring to stem the tide which brings them disease, death and disaster, through customs and habits foreign to them in their native homes. A visit to the great North will show how the Indians advance and are increasing in numbers. The natives should not be judged by those, the remnants of tribes, floating around, dependent on others for their subsistence. In their world, as in ours, everything tends to show "the survival of the fittest," which means a great deal in our age and generation to men and women of all races.

The Surprising Sex

A NEW IDEA

Julie wrote to Blake and thanked him for sending Peter on to her. It was a difficult letter to compose, the first she had ever written him since she had become his wife. She wanted to pen something clever and dashing, the sort of thing she imagined Anna Denniston would write.

Her letter seemed to her very simple and childish:

"Dear John. It was very kind of you to remember to send Peter and to arrange with the hotel for letting me keep him. I am not so lonely now. I read a great deal, and in the evenings I take Peter into the park and let him play in the grass. I know he must miss the garden at home, but he seems quite happy with me.

"I hope you will have a pleasant trip to Canada. Please give my love to Mrs. Ames and remember me kindly to Miss Denniston and Dr. Phillips and Judge Adams and the rest. "Affectionately,

"JULIE."

She didn't mention that she was spending gruelling hot afternoons at the University and laboring over these at night under the library reading lamp. Blake might not approve. Worst of all, he might laugh.

She took her French lesson from Latour in the evenings now, since her morning and afternoon hours were spent at the college, where placid, middle-aged school teachers and lanky, ambitious young clerks took advantage of the Summer prices to brush up on ologies and isms.

One evening, Latour strolled home with her, and since it was too hot to go indoors yet she brought Peter down into the little park opposite the hotel and they sat on a bench under a flowering magnolia tree and chatted until a cool, night breeze sprang up from somewhere behind the Potomac.

Latour was strongly attracted to the pretty, mysterious young creature who seemed so cruelly alone. He knew nothing about her beyond the fact that her husband was a Congressman from the middle West. He wondered what tragedy was concealed by her smiling aloofness.

"The other day you spoke of your father and his gift for literature, Madame. Have you not inherited that talent?" he asked.

"I'm afraid not," Julie shook her head wistfully. "At least I've never felt the ability or the desire to write."

"Both are latent in you, perhaps," he suggested.

"I wish that were true. I should like to succeed at something."

He experienced a swift sense of pity at the bitterness that unconsciously crept into her voice. He knew what it was to drift without purpose. He had been drifting ever since the war had deprived him of the life he loved.

It was another bond between them.

"Why do you not try?" he urged. "I have noticed that you feel things poignantly. You describe people and things for me vividly when we speak in French, and your phrasing is very deft, very pretty."

"Dad taught me at great deal about writing," she confessed. "He called me his critic because I read aloud to him each evening what he had written during the day and we discussed it. But I had too little experience with life really to appreciate what I was reading."

Latour looked down at the fresh young face raised so naively to his, noted the clear candor of her eyes, the childish curves of her lips. Ah, he thought, with a wave of protecting tenderness, she has had little experience with life—even now!

"Would you think me impertinent," he asked slowly, "if I asked you to read some of my own humble literary efforts and give me your candid opinion. It is in English that I have written these short stories of mine. They sound very inadequate to me. Perhaps you would tell me wherein I have failed?"

"Why, I should be glad to," Julie's voice was eager. "But I warn you—I'm not a good judge."

Julie read it that night in her hot little library with Peter stretched at full length on the bare floor for coolness. She found the story immensely engrossing and was so entertained by it that she forgot her role of critic.

"I dare say that's the most conclusive test after all," she remarked to herself when she turned a page looking eagerly for more and found herself confronted with the word "Finis."

Latour was delighted with her praise, and immensely grateful when she suggested the magazines which might accept the story.

"Dad wrote a great deal for the Atlantic and Scribners and Travel, but he knew what other magazines liked and he used to talk to me about them, and often they wrote and asked him for articles. But he wouldn't write fiction because he was putting every bit of his best into the book that was to be his masterpiece."

Her eyes clouded. "He didn't live to finish it," she added softly.

"And you? Why do not you, his daughter, finish it?"

ADEQUATE DEFENCE OF SWEDEN URGED

Prosperity and Natural Wealth Attraction For Hostile Countries, Says Premier

Stockholm, Oct. 4. — Social prosperity will come, not by preaching a holy war against capitalism, but by championing the cause of thrift, work, and confidence, the three great drivewheels of modern machinery, says Sweden's premier, Ernst Trygger, in his key-note address just delivered in Malmo.

The Premier, in opposition to the Social-Democrats, urged an adequate national defence as provided for in the bill submitted to the Riksdag by the present conservative government. Strongly emphasizing this as the paramount issue in the coming elections Mr. Trygger pointed out how Sweden's prosperity and natural wealth spelled danger in their attractions for hostile countries. "There is the greatest peril for the meek lamb grazing on the luxuriant meadows when wolves are stalking through the neighboring forests," he declared.

The present situation in the world, the speaker said, although holding strong promise of improvement, does not yet justify unpreparedness, and even the Dawes plan in its practical application is likely to cause serious difficulties. The Premier ended his speech with an emotional appeal, declaring that the voices of our forefathers call to us, "Forget not Sweden, the ancestral home of liberty, justice and duty."

Sunlight—for your Washing Machine

A WASHING machine is made to wash your clothes without rubbing or boiling — and it succeeds just in proportion to the value of the soap you use.

Sunlight Soap dissolves quickly and completely in hot water and works up into an abundant suds. This is very necessary so that its rich cleansing ingredients may search through and through the meshes of the clothes and dissolve the dirt and soil spots. Then, when rinsing comes, all dirt and soapy matter runs entirely away, leaving your clothes sweet, fresh and snowy clean.

The pure lather of Sunlight Soap cleanses the clothes naturally, not chemically. The $5,000 Guarantee of Purity is stamped on every tablet of Sunlight Soap.

Pare half a cake of Sunlight into hot water in your machine and stir into generous suds. Put in the clothes and operate the machine—your clothes will be clean.

DEFENCE OFFERS PERSONAL STORY OF DOCTOR BOAK

Manslaughter Hearing Takes Dramatic Turn at Afternoon Session; Cross-examination of Accused is Adjourned Until Monday Morning

A complete denial that his car could have in any way killed David Ballantyne and Alexander McLachlan on the night of August 20 last, was entered by Dr. Eric W. Boak, taking the stand on his own behalf in the closing hours of the ninth day of the trial yesterday.

The accused repeated, in essence, the story given by him at the inquest and went more fully into the details of his actions on the night in question. Dr. Boak said he swung his car away from what he took to be a dog at the roadside and in so doing jammed the accelerator, the car jumping the ditch after a short zig-zag run.

VOLUNTARY TESTIMONY

A pin could have been heard in the courtroom as Dr. Eric Wesley Boak, the accused ,voluntarily quitted his seat in the prisoner's dock to take the stand as witness for the defence. Dr. Boak passed to the ordeal after fifty-three hours of trial in which he had been the target for hundreds of pairs of eyes daily for nine days of the hearing to date.

In front of the prisoner's dock, and facing him on the witness stand, was his father, a practising barrister of Vancouver. Throughout the trial father and son have sat within a few feet of each other, separated only by the wooden rails of the dock.

Dr. Boak took the stand at 3.28 p.m. and had concluded his evidence in chief to Mr. Maclean when the court rose at 4.06 p.m. On Monday the cross examination will begin.

Witness said he had practised medicine in this city since 1913. On the night of the accident he returned from the doctors' party with Messrs. Jones and Lewis in the rear seat of his car. His car was parked alongside that of Dr. Barrett, some seventy-five yards away from the house in the Fraser grounds. He had to wait until other cars got clear before leaving, so he went to the boathouse and fetched a bathing suit left there before going to his car.

AT MODERATE SPEED

He left the grounds five minutes after Dr. Barrett, about 9.05 p.m., if the former left on the hour as stated. There was a considerable grade up to the cross roads and then a stretch of rough road on which he drove at approximately twenty miles an hour, said witness. His car touched the pavement at Saanichton and the ride south along that way had been made at an average speed of twenty-five to thirty miles an hour.

Witness first saw Dr. Duck's car after passing Saanichton and passed it on the north side of Stelly's cross roads. At Royal Oak Dr. Duck's car passed that of witness at a time when witness said he remembered slowing down on account of a turn in the road. Witness next saw the car of Dr. Duck near the greenhouse on Quadra Street. At no time on the night in question did his car travel at forty miles an hour, until right after the swerve at the accident site.

At the greenhouse corner witness looked at his speedometer which showed the car to be traveling at twenty miles an hour. It was at this moment he saw the Duck car, and recognized it through the absence of any tail light.

SAW NOTHING AHEAD

Witness blew his horn and was going to pass. He drew off to the left of the road, traveling at a speed between twenty and thirty miles an hour. As the cars were abreast witness was looking straight down the road and saw nothing ahead. Suddenly he saw what appeared to be a dog. As he had been ditched by a dog before he swung out. At the moment he thought he was clear of the Duck car.

As the car was making the right swing witness got his foot jammed under the accelerator rest, he said, and the car gained speed. It crossed towards the right and he pulled it back to the left again and then came the plunge over the bank into the railway depression. Witness compared the plunge to a drop of fourteen stories in an elevator. Then the car ended up on the railway bank.

Witness got out and intended to go up to Dr. Duck but did not reach the pavement when he heard Dr. Duck calling and went back. Dr. Duck came through the bushes. All met at the site of the Boak car. Witness got into his car and started up the engine. A lot of water spurted over the car and on to the windshield, so he shut the engine off again. He had been testing it to see if the transmission were damaged. Later he was told the top hose connection was disconnected and that accounted for the spurt of water from the radiator shell. No effort was made to get the car out of its position, and no pushing at the wheels had taken place.

Witness did not examine the car closely at that time, but did later. On the second inspection, standing at the front, he saw the lights were twisted. He was positive one of the dimmers worked alright but could not be sure if both did. He knew the radiator was leaking and the headlights twisted out of shape. The bumper was pushed back a little at the right side. Witness noticed the left door handle was missing.

WENT BACK TO LOOK

Witness went back to the road and the Duck car. He wondered what in the world he had turned at and couldn't see a thing. Witness and Mr. Higgs then went to the Service home. He called the number 2983, that of a garage where he kept a second car, and without waiting a reply called 6900 the Davie Garage.

He had gone to the Service home primarily because he did not know the neighborhood well and thought he would find a telephone at the Pumping Station store, which was also, the bus terminus. After he talked to the Davie Garage by telephone Mr. Service asked if any person had been injured. Witness replied that none were hurt but that he had put his car into the ditch.

Witness remarked it was "very dangerous for pedestrians here" as he had passed two further up the road. Miss Service had said "yes" and commented on something about having a case against Saanich for sidewalks. In reverting to "pedestrians" witness told the court he had seen two pedestrians near the green house. He had seen no one at all at the scene of the accident.

Witness returned to the Duck car and traced tracks from the car to the bushes. It was here he lost his hat in a headlong fall into the bushes. Witness then went back on to the C. N. R. grade and stayed there until Mr. Davies arrived.

TWO MEN DEAD

After that, while back at the Duck car site, witness saw a car and a number of people standing around and heard someone say there were two men in the ditch. He went right over and found two men dead. He was dressed in white flannel trousers and wore glasses at the time.

Witness described his examination of the bodies. He put his hand down on the chest of the Ballantyne remains, feeling for the arteries. He found no pulse and no respiration. The other body was only a step away He saw the wound in its head. Both were absolutely dead then. Witness made this examination in the light that filtered between people standing between him and the parked car.

Witness then rode in the Davies car to telephone the police. He tried Chief Brogan's home and got no answer. Then he got Mrs. Rankin by telephone, and went back to the scene. Later he stopped Sergeant Rankin on the road and gave him his account of the affair. He helped place the two bodies in the patrol wagon when the city police arrived.

SAW NOTHING UNUSUAL

Witness said he stood by the left fender of his car while Sergeant Rankin looked all over, under, and inside it with a powerful light. Witness himself saw nothing unusual. There were a number of people there at the time, too. The police officer made a very careful search, looking underneath the running boards, and also inside the car. Witness saw nothing on the car, and did not see any trace of brains on the rear left fender.

Just before leaving the scene he returned to his car and opened the rear left door and got out his bathing suit. The handle was loose but all of it was there. Witness had not noticed whether he had blood on his hands or not. There might have been anything on his hands after the dual examination of the bodies. Until the bodies were discovered he had had no idea that anyone had been hurt. If he had known otherwise he would have gone straight back to see.

In answer to questions by Mr. Maclean, witness, who had told his story uninterrupted up to this point, stated that he felt no shock at the time his car made the sudden swerve to the right. If anybody or anything had crossed the door, he, driving at the left, would have seen it.

It would be unlikely that the sun visor and a door handle could hit a man twice in the same place, suggested Mr. Maclean, witness agreeing. Witness, in reply to a further question said he would figure the time of his arrival on the railway embankment as 9.55 p.m. His watch shortly after the crash had read 10.05 p.m. and it was between five and ten minutes fast.

Mr. Justice Murphy suggested that the hearing adjourn until Monday before cross examination opened. This was agreed to and the jury was released until then.

MEDICAL STUDENT QUIZZED

Another hour of gruelling crossfire waited upon Arthur Lewis, one of the passengers in the Boak car, upon the resumption of the afternoon hearing. Witness was warned by the court of the gravity of the circumstances and cautioned to pay regard to his replies. Witness declared his inability to remember minor details of how each of the parties at the scene moved about that night, when challenged with discrepancies between his narrative now and previously.

Witness said he remained at the cattle guards for a period while others were up at the Duck car. He saw Jones sitting on the bumper of the Boak car. There were people there at the time and he heard voices. He did not hear Jones reply to questions. The people, he intimated, might have been questioning themselves. He heard no one say "I'll say we had a rough ride" or any words to that effect.

Questioned as to racing witness said there had been no racing that night. Later he said he did not think they had raced, and explained the qualification to the court as inadvertent. He was sure there had been no racing, nor contest of any sort.

TOUCHED FACE OF BODY

Witness reiterated that Mr. Davies had gone to telephone for the service car. In relation to the finding of the bodies witness said he stooped down and touched the "body on the right" that of Mr. Ballantyne, on the side of the face to feel if it were cold.

Mr. Jackson asserted that this must have been the right or exposed side of the face and that had been terribly mutilated. Mr. Maclean rose to object but Mr. Jackson pressed the point.

Mr. Jackson—Why did you touch that awful sight?

Witness—The part I touched was not bloody—I did put my hand on his face.

Mr. Jackson—Why did you examine one body and not the other?

Witness—I don't know.

The Court—Why did you want to know if it were cold or not?

Witness—I wanted to see if—they were dead.

The Court—Did you do it in the dark?

Witness—Yes—it was dark.

In answer to further questions witness said there had been laughter among them on the railway track. It was not hysterical laughter, but for joy.

GONE "TO PLAY CARDS"

After the accident and its subsequent events witness said he rode into town with two police officers and went to the Jubilee Hospital with Messrs. Jones and Higgs on the street car. He had gone there "to play cards," he said.

The Court—What time was that?

Witness—I don't know.

The Court—Come now, young man, do you realize where you are, and what is going on here? What time was it?

Witness—I don't know.

Dr. Boak, Dr. Duck and the other students joined the three in the interne's room, he said, but no arrangements had been previously made to meet there. The cross examination continued for some minutes longer until Mr. Jackson said he would not proceed further with the witness.

The Court—Did you hear the engine started up in Dr. Boak's car?

The Court—When was that?

Witness—I don't remember.

The Court—Did you see any of the party trying to assist on the wheels?

Witness—I don't remember it.

Witness left the stand at 3.27 p.m. after two hours' cross examination. Dr. Boak followed him to the stand and completed the remainder of the afternoon session. The court rose at 4.06 p.m. to resume on Monday next at 10 a.m.

New Method of Reducing Fat

Here's joyful news for every fleshy person who loves good things to eat—especially those who are denying themselves the things they like most because of their desire to keep down their weight or to reduce the fat with which they are already burdened.

The famous Marmola Prescription has been put up in convenient tablet form and is now sold by druggists everywhere at only one dollar per box. To get rid of fat steadily and easily, simply take one of these little tablets after each meal and at bedtime until you have reduced your weight to where you want it. No wrinkles or flabbiness will remain to show where the fat came off.

Simply use Marmola Prescription Tablets according to directions. They are pleasant and easy to take. No rules or special regulations—just the regular use of the tablets. Try them for just a few weeks and get results without going through long sieges of tiresome exercise and starvation diet. Get them at any good drug store. If your druggist should not have them in stock you can secure them direct from the Marmola Company, General Motors Building, Detroit, Mich., by sending one dollar. Thousands of men and women each year regain healthy, slender figures this way.

NEW WEST ROAD EXTENSION COSTS PROVE SURPRISE

Saanich Council to Apply to Provincial Government For Increased Grant

The Saanich Council was somewhat perturbed last night when it was informed that the paving of the West Road extension of two miles has greatly exceeded estimates. The original appropriation of $26,000 was made on the understanding that the Provincial Public Works Department would repay to Saanich fifty per cent of the cost, up to a total of $13,000.

The final accounts show that $32,114 has been expended on the work, and unless the Government changes its attitude the Saanich taxpayers will have to shoulder over $19,000 as its share. A deputation from the council will wait on Hon. Dr. Sutherland and seek to have the Government increase its contribution to $16,057, a full fifty per cent of the actual cost.

SAANICH TO SEEK RIGHT TO TAXATION OF TALLY-HO CARS

Fear of Impost on Lake Hill Busses by City Unless Protection Gained

The Saanich Council last night appointed Reeve Macnicol and Councillor Simpson a "committee with a watching brief" to secure equality for Saanich in the proposal of Victoria to secure legislative power to levy heavier taxes on buses and sightseeing cars.

It was pointed out by the reeve that the powers sought would enable the city to charge $500 yearly on each of the three Saanich buses serving Lake Hill.

The council agreed with the reeve in dislike of opposition of the city's bill but seeks a similar clause inserted in the Municipal Act to protect Saanich.

The proposed impost was described by Reeve Macnicol as "a big stick; we want to get a share of this big stick, the sightseeing buses are not paying their fair share."

Councillor Kirkham refused to act on this legislative committee, considering "there has been too much taxing of businesses which show signs of making a little money," he said.

Reeve Macnicol pointed out that Saanich is about to lose $3,345 in taxes on the Interurban and the present jitney and bus license only nets $10 yearly for each car.

He stated that aldermen interviewed on the new proposal had disclaimed any intention of levying upon the Saanich bus system, but agreed that such ideas might not be in the majority in after years.

SUBDIVISION PLAN FAILS TO PLEASE SAANICH COUNCIL

C. McCarthy and T. Gold last night successfully appealed to the Saanich Council to withhold approval of a subdivision plan affecting Ward Six property, adjacent to the Keating Cross Road.

The plan proposed contemplated road allowance on the northern boundary for the extension of Verling Avenue. The delegation urged that the provision made is narrow, located on territory extremely costly to make suitable as a highway, and would be of little service in opening up nearby territory.

The Council agreed that a better location for the extension of Verling Avenue was available and returned the plan to the syndicate concerned for amendment.

WHERE CAN THE YOUNG MASTER BE? HE SEEMS TO HAVE VANISHED LIKE A PUFF OF SMOKE-

SCROOCH DOWN SO THAT OLD BUTLER WON'T SEE US - WHEN HE TURNS HIS BACK WE'LL MAKE A DASH FOR THE WOODS-

I'LL BET I'LL SHOW YOU THE FINEST OL' SWIMMIN' HOLE IN THE WHOLE WORLD - I HAVE A MARBLE SWIMMING POOL IN THE CASTLE THAT UNCLE BIM BUILT FOR ME BUT IT HAS NO NICE SQUASHY MUD IN THE BOTTOM OF IT LIKE THE ONE WE'RE GOING TO HAS-

OH BOY! AS LONG AS I HAVE YOU TO HELP ME I CAN CLIMB A WALL JUST LIKE A FIREMAN- I'LL BET LOTS OF KIDS WOULD LIKE TO HAVE A TRAINED KANGAROO FOR A PLAYMATE-

'AT A BOY, ALEXANDER- I DIDN'T BELIEVE THE STORY ABOUT THE COW THAT JUMPED OVER THE MOON TILL I SAW YOU HOP OVER THAT WALL AS EASY AS A LIVING TENNIS BALL-

NOW YOU SPLASH ME-

ISN'T THIS GREAT SPORT? I WISH EVERYBODY IN THE WHOLE WORLD COULD BE AS HAPPY AS THIS- I WISH MY PAPA WAS HERE- HE KNOWS HOW TO SWIM AND DIVE JUST LIKE A SEAL- HE'D SHOW US LOTS OF FUNNY TRICKS TO DO-

NOW WE WILL HAVE TO RUN HOME AS FAST AS OUR LEGS CAN CARRY US - UNCLE BIM MIGHT THINK I WAS LOST OR SOMETHING. HE IS SO NICE TO ME I DON'T WANT EVER TO CAUSE HIM THE TINIEST BIT OF WORRY-

WHERE IN THE WORLD DID YOU GO? THE SERVANTS HAVE BEEN HUNTING HIGH AND LOW FOR YOU-

OH, UNCLE BIM- I WAS TIRED OF HAVING SERVANTS WAIT ON ME ALL THE TIME SO I STOLE AWAY TO AN OLD SWIMMING HOLE IN THE WOODS AND I HAD A DANDY TIME- IT WOULD HAVE BEEN NICER IF YOU HAD BEEN THERE-

I AM GLAD TO SEE THAT YOU ARE A SELF-RELIANT LITTLE BOY- SOME DAY YOU WILL BE A VERY RICH MAN WITH GREAT RESPONSIBILITIES AND I WANT TO SEE YOU GROW UP TO BE BIG AND STRONG AND HONEST, READY TO TAKE YOUR PLACE IN THE WORLD AS A LEADER OF MEN - I WANT YOU TO BE A TRUE GUMP, A BIG, TWO-FISTED, FEARLESS MAN JUST LIKE YOUR FATHER-
